DEATH OF THE LATE MR. EDEN.

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Gentlemen, since the Council last met we are the poorer by the death of one of our members, the late Mr. Eden. I feel sure that it will be your wish that there should appear upon the records of our proceedings a few words marking our sense of the loss which we have sustained.

For nearly 40 years the deceased gentleman, lived and worked in Calcutta, and during that time he was connected with, and took an active part in, the public life of the city which he had made his home. He was a prominent member of the Calcutta Trades Association which he served in the capacity of Master in 1903-04 and as Honorary Treasurer from 1916-18. He was appointed a Presidency Magistrate in Calcutta in 1901 and served the city as a Municipal Commissioner from 1900 to 1903. In 1909-10 he gave further proof of his readiness to shoulder his share of work and responsibility on behalf of the public by serving as a Port Commissioner, and in 1916 he became a member of this Council. He died in harness swept from our midst with startling suddenness and we deeply deplore his loss. As a member of this Council he was always conscientious and unassuming, courteous and sincere, and it is indeed with feelings of deep sorrow that I contemplate our loss."

The Hon'ble Mr. CARTER said :—

"I should like to associate the members of the mercantile community in a sincere regret which Your Excellency has expressed in the sudden death of our colleague, Mr. Eden. I have probably known Mr. Eden longer than most of the members of the Council, and I feel that in his death I have lost a real friend. He was a man of sterling qualities and held very decided views; he appeared at times to those who did not know him somewhat rough in his manner, but he was a warm-hearted and firm friend, and candid in his opinions. He did not often rise to speak in this Council but, when he did, his subject had been carefully prepared, and his remarks were forcible and to the point. The European members of this Council have lost a firm supporter at a time when they can least afford to lose one of their members. Mr. Eden took a prominent part in the affairs of this city, and was also a keen shikari and sportsman. He had been a resident of Calcutta for nearly forty years, and after many years of hard work he was just coming to the time when he had laid his business on a firm foundation and was looking forward to a few years of rest. His son, I am sure, will follow in his father's footsteps, as he has already made his mark on the battlefields of East Africa; to him and to his widowed mother we offer our sincere sympathy."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My lord, I desire to associate myself with the remarks with regard to the death of the Hon'ble Mr. Eden. Although on many points the late Mr. Eden and I did not see eye to eye yet I was always assured that he approached every question with an open mind. My lord, I do not desire to add to my remarks. I have only to conclude by saying that this Council undoubtedly feels a sad loss in the death of the Hon'ble Mr. Eden."

LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 1.STARRED QUESTIONS.

The following questions which had been starred were put and answered :—

by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar :—

*1.

(a) Are the Government aware that an organization called the Indian Civil Service Association has been formed in this country? What are the aims and objects and constitution of this Association? Where is its head office and who are its office bearers?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of making a thorough inquiry into the above matter and of issuing an official communiqué on the subject?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR :—

“(a) The Indian Civil Service Association was formed in Bengal in 1894. The objects of the Association are—

- (1) to deal with questions affecting the interests of the Indian Civil Service as a body;
- (2) to promote unity among its members; and
- (3) to ascertain and formulate the views of the Indian Civil Service on matters in connection with which, in the opinion of the Association, a knowledge of the views of the Service would be useful to Government.

After the territorial readjustments of 1912, a separate branch of the Association was formed in Bihar and Orissa. Membership of the Bengal Branch is open to all officers of the Indian Civil Service serving in Bengal and Assam. There are at present 130 members of the Bengal branch, of whom eleven are Indians. The Association has no regular office. Its affairs are managed by a General Committee of five members elected annually. The members of the existing Committee are—

Mr. K. C. De.

Mr. A. H. Cuming.

Mr. H. P. Duval.

Mr. A. J. Chotzner.

Mr. J. A. L. Swan.

Mr. H. M. Veitch is the Honorary Secretary.

(b) In view of the information given in this reply, Government do not consider it necessary to issue a communiqué on the subject.”

(a) Have the Government of Bengal made any use of the 9 lakhs of rupees granted by the Government of India for the improvement of the salaries of the teachers of the Upper and Lower Subordinate Educational Services and their training? If so, how has the money been distributed?

(b) Have the Government submitted the scheme which they proposed for the improvement of the Upper and Lower Subordinate Educational Services? If so, will the Government be pleased to lay the scheme on the table?

(c) Can the Government state approximately the period within which the scheme is likely to be given effect to?

(d) Is it a fact that a sum of about Rs. 3 lakhs has been recommended for the improvement of the salaries of the two services? If so, has any portion of the money been utilised for the purpose?

(e) If for any reason Government are unable to give effect to their scheme immediately, are the Government considering the advisability of granting the teachers in these two services certain provisional allowances out of the sum provided for the scheme so as to enable them to tide over the difficulties of the present situation?

(f) Do the Government propose to raise the minimum pay of the Provincial Educational Service to at least Rs. 250 a month? If not, are they considering the advisability of granting some compensation to the few Headmasters who have been promoted to that service?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) The suggestion that the Government of India have made a grant of 9 lakhs for the improvement of the salaries of the teachers of the Subordinate Educational Service and Lower Subordinate Educational Service and their training is not correct. The grant has been made for the improvement of the training and pay of teachers in primary and secondary schools in the Bengal Presidency, which is a very different matter, inasmuch as the great majority of the teachers in those schools are not Government servants and do not belong to the Subordinate Educational Service or the Lower Subordinate Educational Service.

(b) It was explained in the Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha's speech at the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council held on Tuesday, the 20th November, 1917, that an inquiry would be made into the question of the reorganisation of the Subordinate Educational Service and the Lower Subordinate Educational Service as soon as possible after the pay of the Provincial Educational Service and the grades thereof had been fixed. The question of the reorganisation of the higher services of the Education Department is now under the consideration of the Government of India in connection with the recommendation of the Public Services Commission. Till orders on that question are passed no scheme for the improvement of the Subordinate Educational Service and the Lower Subordinate Educational Service can be elaborated.

(c) In view of the reply to (b), no answer to (c) is called for.

(d) No sum has been recommended for the improvement of the salaries of the two services, but recommendations have been made for improving Government high schools at an estimated cost of a little over 3 lakhs. If these recommendations are accepted the Subordinate Educational Service and the Lower Subordinate Educational Service will be improved to some extent.

(e) In view of the above replies, this question does not arise.

(f) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the last sentence of the reply to (b). It is not proposed to raise the minimum pay of the Provincial Educational Service or to grant compensatory allowances to headmasters promoted to that service pending the receipt of orders on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission.”

Is it a fact that the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, has issued an order to the effect that 50 per cent. of admissions in each class of Government high schools should be reserved for Muhammadan boys and that the remaining 50 per cent. should be open to competition between Hindu and Muhammadan students at the time of admission?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"In resolution No. 1227 Edn., dated the 3rd August, 1916, recorded by this Government on the report of the special committee for the improvement of Muhammadan education, it was stated that a definite percentage of places should be reserved in each Government high school for Muhammadan pupils, the percentage being determined with reference to the proportional strength and educational requirements of the Muhammadans in the district. A percentage was accordingly fixed by Government for each high school in consultation with the Director of Public Instruction, who issued orders on the subject in his circular No. $\frac{162}{1M-46 B-16}$, dated the 2nd October, 1918. A copy of the circular is laid on the table. It will be seen that the number of vacancies reserved in the Dacca Collegiate School and Armenitola High School is 30 per cent., and in the other Government high schools under the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, 50 per cent. It will also be seen that the unreserved vacancies are first to be filled up by open competition, and that in working up to the prescribed percentage Muhammadans who have secured unreserved vacancies are to be taken into account."

imposition of fines on students of the Faridpur Zilla School.

(a) Is it a fact that under orders from the Executive Engineer, Bakarganj Circle, all the boys of the Faridpur Zilla School have been fined to raise a sum of Rs. 93 to meet the charges, of replacing some glass panes alleged to have been broken within a period of four or five years in that school?

(b) (i) Is there any evidence to show that the glass panes were broken by the boys, and not through natural causes such as hail storm and the wearing out of putty?

(ii) Did the school authorities object to this fine being imposed or not?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) On 5th May 1918 it was found that 66 panes of glass in the school building were broken. and on the 19th May it was found that 120 more had been broken, bringing up the total number to be replaced to 186. The Executive Engineer suggested that Rs. 93 should be recovered from the boys of the school as part of the cost of replacing the broken panes, and orders were issued accordingly by the Inspector of Schools.

(b) (i) Government have not got full information, but so far as they are aware there was no hailstorm at Faridpur between the 5th and 19th day. The putty was examined and found to be hard and in good condition.

(ii) The Headmaster protested against the boys being charged for part of the cost of the broken panes."

Was it not the practice to notify in the Calcutta Gazette all appointments and transfers in the Subordinate Educational Service? How long was this practice in force, and when and why has it been discontinued? Are the Government considering the desirability of ordering the practice to be restored?

Notification in the Calcutta Gazette of appointments and transfers in the Subordinate Educational Service.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY:—

"Appointments to and transfers in the Subordinate Educational Service were notified in the Calcutta Gazette from 1879 to 1916. This practice was discontinued in 1916, so far as officers below Class II were concerned, and in the following year, so far as officers of the first two classes were concerned, for the reasons stated in the reply given to question No. XXXVII at the meeting held on 7th August, 1917. The desirability of reviving it is under consideration."

Will the Government be pleased to state whether the proposals submitted to the Government of India for the improvement of the pay and prospects of secondary and primary school teachers, as announced by the Director of Public Instruction, Bengal, in July 1917, have received their final sanction?

Pay and prospects of secondary and primary school teachers.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY:—

"The sanction of the Government of India has been received to this Government's proposals for the improvement of the pay of primary school teachers, but not to those for secondary school teachers."

(a) Is it a fact that in the Subordinate Educational Service no promotion has been declared since January, 1918, though there are vacancies in all its grades?

Promotions of officers of Subordinate Educational Service.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for this?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY:—

"(a) The answer is in the negative. Promotions in the Subordinate Educational Service from Class V upwards were announced on the 10th December, 1918. Those in the other classes will be declared shortly by the Director of Public Instruction.

(b) There was some delay due to the fact that it was considered desirable to defer making promotions till certain schemes, involving the creation of new posts, had been sanctioned by Government."

Duties of the Provincial Judicial Service

Is it a fact that the Provincial Judicial Service was created to perform only duties involving minor responsibilities?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“For a description of the functions of this and other provincial services the Hon'ble Member is referred to the introductory Chapter annexure X of the report of the Public Services Commission. It is therein stated that ‘the provincial civil services * * * have been formed to do the bulk of the ordinary executive and judicial work of the districts, and to fill minor charges.’ In a recent resolution of the 19th November, 1918, it was observed by this Government that ‘the Provincial Judicial Service was formed to fill charges of minor responsibility in the civil judicial administration of the province.’ The description is relative to the responsibilities discharged by others in the same sphere; all functions of judicial courts are of course, responsible within the limits of their jurisdiction.”

- (e) that the Subordinate Judges rank higher than Munsifs, and that their jurisdiction is as unlimited as that of the District Judges.

(2) Are the Government considering the advisability of constituting a separate branch of service, for the Subordinate Judges, second only to the District Judges in rank and importance, and of excluding them from the Provincial Judicial Civil Service?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DUVAL :—

“(1) (a) The work they are required to perform is similar only to part of the work of District Judges.

(b) Their work is not entirely similar to that of Judges of the Hon'ble High Court in its Original Side.

(c) District Judges do some work of the same nature as Hon'ble Judges on the Original Side of the High Court.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DUVAL :—

“(a) No. The Calcutta Small Cause Court is a court of summary jurisdiction with power to decide finally money suits up to a value of Rs. 2,000.

Subordinate Judges never exercise any summary jurisdiction beyond Rs. 1,000 and usually only try such suits up to a value of Rs. 500. They try other cases of unlimited value subject to appeal.

(c) Are the Government considering any scheme for improving the status and prospects of the teachers in question?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to Chapter V and paragraphs 487-489 of the last Quinquennial Report on Education in Bengal.

(b) Government spend about Rs. 1,20,000 a month on account of stipends to primary school teachers and also contribute about Rs. 80,000 annually towards the cost of repairs of Board school buildings.

(c) The following improvements were effected between the years 1913 and 1917—

(i) the salaries of untrained and trained teachers of aided primary schools and maktabs for boys have been increased by Re. 1 and Rs. 4, respectively, at a total annual cost of Rs. 5,68,972;

(ii) the stipends of teachers of primary schools while under training in guru-training schools have been raised to Rs. 10 per mensem, at an annual cost of Rs. 77,360.

Out of the 5½ lakhs grant Rs. 60,336 has been earmarked for grants to local bodies in order to enable them to raise the rate of stipends of untrained teachers in aided primary schools and maktabs for boys, where it is lower than Rs. 2 per mensem, to a minimum rate of Rs. 2 or, if funds permit, to Rs. 2-8 per mensem; and Rs. 80,000 has been sanctioned for the increase of the pay of teachers in aided primary schools and maktabs for girls in District Board areas by Re. 1 a month and in urban areas by Rs. 2 a month. No further measures are in contemplation at present.”

Will the Government be pleased to state whether any action has been taken in connection with the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray's resolution which was carried at the meeting of the Council held on the 3rd September last, regarding the recognition by Government of the Calcutta Medical School and College of Physicians and Surgeons, Bengal, for the purposes of the Schedule to the Bengal Medical Act, 1914 (Ben. hill allowance.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) whether the teachers of the Rangamati Government High English School draw a hill allowance at the rate of 20 per cent. only, though they have been paying house rent;

(ii) whether the hill allowance of all other officers, paying house rent, was increased from 20 to 30 per cent. simultaneously with the imposition of house rent in 1913?

(b) Is the delay in the grant of an increased allowance to the above-named teachers due to war economy?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of giving effect to the increased allowance to the above-named teachers from the date on which the allowances of other officers were increased?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) (i), (b) and (c) The teachers of the Rangamati Government High School are in receipt of a hill allowance at the rate of 20 per cent. of their pay. Those occupying Government buildings enjoyed the privilege of rent-free quarters until 1913 when this concession was withdrawn, and at present, they have to pay rent subject to a maximum of 10 per cent. of their pay, with the exception of the headmaster, who has free quarters as Superintendent of the hostel. In 1915 a proposal was made for increasing the hill allowance to 30 per cent. of their pay, but owing to abnormal financial conditions the proposal could not be sanctioned. The Director of Public Instruction was however told that he might, if he thought fit, renew the application when normal financial conditions were restored.

(a) (ii) The ministerial officers of the office of the Superintendent of the Chittagong Hill Tracts receive a local allowance of 30 per cent. of their pay, subject to a maximum of Rs. 20 per mensem.”

teachers.

(a) With reference to my unstarred question No. XLIX asked at the meeting of the Council of the 26th November, 1918, regarding Government high school teachers and the new recurring grant, will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any probability of the grant in question lapsing this year too?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of making arrangements to grant increments with effect from the 1st April, 1917, being the date when the grant was allotted by the Government of India and since which some officers of this province have already derived its benefit?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) The sanction of the Government of India has been given to the expenditure of Rs. 3,15,000 out of the 9 lakhs grant. The proposals made by this Government for the expenditure of the remainder, amounting to Rs. 5,85,000, have not yet received the sanction of the Government of India, and it is consequently not possible to spend this sum during the current year. It will therefore be added to the balances which are available for non-recurring expenditure on education in subsequent years.

Drowning of a
near Goalundo.

(a) Are the Government in a position to state the circumstances in which a young student fell overboard from a steamer near Goalundo in December last, and was drowned?

(b) Is it a fact that this fatality was due to the railings of the steamer giving way?

(c) If so, when was the steamer last surveyed or otherwise examined by experts?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of instituting an inquiry into this matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

“(a) and (b) It would appear that the passenger in question held an intermediate class ticket, the space apportioned to passengers of that class being on the upper deck. It is not clear what induced him to come to the lower deck which is never used for intermediate class passengers. It is stated that he was half leaning and half resting against the rail of the steamer with his back to the water. There is a movable gangway at this part which can be opened out to allow of access to the bank when calling at way-side stations. This gangway is formed of a rod with a ring at one end and a hook at the other with a pin attachment. In some unexplained manner the fastening opened out and the passenger, who was leaning against the upper rail, fell backwards overboard and was drowned.

(c) The steamer was last surveyed in December, 1917, and her passenger certificate was current up to the 22nd December, 1918; the steamer was again under survey on January 11th, 1919.

(d) A full investigation has already been made by the India General Navigation and Railway Company, Limited, from which it appears that on the 6th December, while the steamer Buzzard was on her way from Goalundo to Chandpur, a passenger fell overboard from the forward lower deck. The alarm was at once given to the serang, a life-buoy was thrown into the water, the steamer was stopped, turned round and a careful search made in the locality where the accident occurred, but without success. As the facts have been ascertained as far as possible it is not the intention of Government to hold any further inquiry."

- (a) in how many cases Mokbul Ahmad was convicted before his conviction on the 10th June, 1918;
- (b) whether it is not the general practice to send convicted persons from the court lock-up to the jail after the close of the court business; and
- (c) whether it is a fact that—
 - (i) under the Jail Code prisoners are ordinarily made to work from the day following the day of their conviction; and
 - (ii) prisoners are sent out to work outside when there is no work for them within the jail or its precincts?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DUVAL :—

- " (a) None, so far as traceable.
- (b) Yes, unless, as at Kushtia, the sub-jail is very near the court.
- (c) (i) No.
- (ii) No."

By the Hon'ble Mr. W. H. H. Arden-Wood:—

12.

- (a) Is it a fact—
 - (i) that the operations of the Calcutta Improvement Trust in connection with the northern sections of the Central Avenue involve the demolition of a large number of small houses occupied by persons of the lower-middle class; and Accommodation for persons displaced by the opening of the northern sections of the Central Avenue.
 - (ii) that there are difficulties in the way of providing new houses owing to the high cost of building materials and the small number of sites available at a reasonable price?
- (b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state—
 - (i) whether the Calcutta Improvement Trust contemplate taking any action to provide accommodation to the homeless and thus mitigate the hardships of eviction; and
 - (ii) what steps, if any, have been taken by the Improvement Trust to rehouse the displaced inhabitants of the class referred to in (a) above, or the displaced members of the working classes?
- (c) Are there any legal difficulties in the way of providing accommodation? If so, are the Government considering the desirability of amending the existing law so as to provide for this?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) The reply is in the affirmative.

(b) (i) and (c) The question has received the anxious consideration of the Board of Trustees, which is of opinion that the existing law is defective. Section 52 of the Calcutta Improvement Act empowers the Board to construct, maintain and manage dwellings for persons of the poorer and working classes who are displaced or likely to be displaced by the execution of an improvement scheme; and the Board has erected dwellings under this section. Its provisions, however, do not appear to meet the case of persons of the poorer middle classes residing in houses owned by themselves whose houses are acquired for the execution of improvement schemes. Such persons are not attracted by the offer of a tenancy in tenement dwellings constructed under section 52 or even in a separate house, but wish again to own a house and also the land on which it stands. The Board also considers that it is precluded from acquiring land in order to resell it to persons displaced by its schemes; and the amount of land at its disposal is limited by the facts —

(1) that the owners of land not actually required for the execution of a scheme have a right under section 78 of the Act to retain it on payment of a fee, and

(2) that when the Board disposes of land already acquired, the previous owner has a right of pre-emption under section 81.

The amount of land of which the Board is free to dispose is therefore often inconsiderable; and in a scheme such as that for the construction of the Central Avenue such sites as are at its disposal are unsuited for the residence of the poorer middle class. The Board has appointed a committee to consider the whole problem of re-housing and has made a recommendation on the subject for the consideration of Government in connection with the amendment of the Act.

(b) (ii) As already mentioned in reply to (b) (i) and (c) the Board of Trustees has carried out one re-housing scheme, of which particulars will be found in paragraph 13 of its annual report for 1917-18. The Board is considering a proposal to erect another block of dwellings under section 52 of the Act and is offering land at concession rates to persons displaced by scheme No. VII.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

(c) What amount has been contributed by Government to each district board for the said purpose?

Will the Government be pleased to state whether, with reference to the recent gracious message of Her Majesty the Queen-Empress to the women of India, Government propose to adopt a new line of policy in the direction of uplifting the future motherhood of this Province by raising the status of the existing girls' schools and by making adequate provision for bringing “the means of education and knowledge” within the practical reach of married zenana purda ladies?

Improvement of the existing girls' schools in Bengal.

Mr. Cumming.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“ Government are fully aware of the desirability of providing for the expansion and improvement of female education and have recently made an additional allotment for the purpose of Rs. 1,80,000 out of the 5½ lakhs grant. It may be pointed out that the provision of zenana education would be no new feature of the educational policy of Government : in this connection the Hon'ble Member's attention is drawn to paragraph 513 of the last quinquennial review of the progress of education in Bengal. As regards raising the status of existing girls' schools, by which it is presumed the Hon'ble Member means the conversion of primary into secondary schools, it may be pointed out that the elementary education of girls is of paramount importance under present conditions and that such conversion can only be effected when it is justified by a demand for secondary education.”

Clause 1.

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING also moved that in clause 1 of the Bill, for the words, brackets and figures “the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Act, 1918”, the following be substituted, namely :—

“the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1919”.

LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 5.

Clause 2.

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING also moved that in clause 2 of the Bill, in the first and second provisos, for the words, brackets and figures “the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment No. 2) Act, 1918”, the following be substituted, namely :—

“the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act, 1919”.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 6.

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY moved that after the word "mukarrari" in line 2 of the proposed sub-section (3) of section 74 (clause 2 of the Bill) the words "or rent-free" be inserted.

He said :—

"My lord, the Select Committee have taken a very reasonable view in connection with this Bill, but I do not know why they have left out of their consideration the point raised in my amendment. I had also referred to them at an earlier stage of the Bill. It is true that the incidence of rent-free tenures are not to be found in the Bengal Tenancy Act, but I think that it is only a question of omission. As far as my information goes such tenures are governed by the Tenancy Act. As a matter of fact, rent-free tenures are still being created by proprietors and they have been elaborately dealt with in the Cess Act. As provisions have been made for permanent tenures it is but proper that similar provision should be made in respect of rent-free tenures, and I hope that my amendment will be accepted."

The Hon'ble Mr. CUMMING said :—

"My lord, the Hon'ble Member says that he is not aware why the Select Committee made no reference to rent-free tenures and he suggests that, as in the Bill reference has been made to the category of mukarrari tenures, rent-free tenures should not be omitted. I venture to think that the Hon'ble Member is under an entire misapprehension. The reason why no reference in this amending Bill has been made to rent-free tenures is that in the substantive part of it, namely, in clause 2, there is a reference only to section 41 of the Cess Act which deals with the liability of cultivating tenants as regards the cess which they should pay. The case of rent-free owners is covered by an entirely different section of the Cess Act; and, therefore, as this Bill does not propose to alter the conditions under which such rent-free holders pay cess, it is obvious that it is entirely unnecessary to make any reference to rent-free holders in this Bill. In fact, it is an obvious canon of legislative drafting not to put in a saving clause where it would be superfluous and unnecessary to create one; and I might go even further and say that not only is it unnecessary, but it might be misleading. The reason why you find in the Bill a saving clause regarding mukarrari tenure-holders is that the High Court pointed out with complete correctness that, while section 179 of the Bengal Tenancy Act saves such leases as were granted subsequent to the Tenancy Act, it does not save leases that were granted before the passing of the Tenancy Act. It was for that reason that the sub-clause (3) in clause 2 of the Bill has been inserted, but this reason does not apply in the slightest degree in the case of rent-free holders who are not affected by the Bill in any way and for whom no saving clause is required."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. MITTER said :—

"My lord, as a member of the Select Committee I would like to add one word of explanation. I entirely agree with the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming as to the reasons which the Hon'ble Member has given for not including the words "rent-free" in that particular clause which the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray wishes to amend. Furthermore, in my view of the matter if a certain zamindar desires to create a rent-free tenure permanently, then, if it is a tenure within the land, it is wide enough. If it is not a permanent tenure, then, as the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has already explained, it is not touched by the provisions. So, as a matter of drafting, as also as a matter of looking to the substance of the thing, I do not think the inclusion of the words is necessary."

Kumar S. S. Ray ; Mr. Cumming ; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY said :—

"My lord, the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter is a lawyer and also a zamindar ; if he thinks there is nothing wrong in this I beg to withdraw my amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 7.

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

He said :—

"My lord, I do not desire to encroach on the time of the Council ; but there are two points which I should like to mention for record. One is that the motives which influenced Government in undertaking this legislation have been justified by facts which I have ascertained since the matter has come under discussion. What the High Court said was that it was not illegal to take from a cultivating raiyat more than half an anna per rupee : the maximum of the road cess and the public works cess together, as laid down by law, is one anna per rupee. Therefore, it may be presumed that anything above one anna per rupee would be illegal and was not contemplated by the High Court's decisions ; but I find that in some cases certain landlords have been taking from cultivating raiyats not only more than half an anna and under one anna, but as much as two annas per rupee, and even up to three annas per rupee. As was stated when the Bill was presented to the Council, the object of Government is to reassert the policy laid down when the Cess Act was passed, namely, that the cultivating raiyats should pay not more than half an anna per rupee. The other point which at this stage I should like to mention is that even those landlords who, acting under the authority of the decisions of the civil courts, have taken more than what Government understood to be the legal maximum according to the Cess Act, have a certain pricking of conscience ; for I find from their papers that they carefully do not give any receipt for any excess which they may take over and above the half-anna per rupee. Moreover, if they sue a tenant, they enter in the plaint only the maximum according to the Cess Act ; and if the tenant does not pay the excess they do not take any further steps. For these reasons, I think that this legislation is justified. I now beg formally to move that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed."

The motion was put and agreed to.

THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919.

by Sir Henry Wheeler.

He said :—

“My lord, I beg to present the report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919.

The time allowed by the Council for the deliberations of the Select Committee was found to be none too long, and it was only by crowding in fourteen meetings and protracting some of them till an inconveniently late hour in the evening that we have been able to finish our work. We have, however, got through the Bill, and I trust that we have improved it. On first sight, looking at the copy of the Bill which has now been circulated, Hon'ble Members will perhaps think that we have made a very great number of alterations, but on further examination Hon'ble Members will find that these changes reduce themselves to two or three main categories, and essentially we have not departed from the original characteristics of the measure.

A number of changes follow from the alteration in substance which we have made (and to which I will refer again shortly) in eliminating the circle board, which renders unnecessary a certain number of clauses and has led to verbal amendments in others. Secondly, by reason of the change which we have made in nomenclature by using the words ‘union board’ in place of ‘village committee’ we had to insert a number of verbal alterations. We thought on the whole that union boards, union benches, and union courts represented more accurately what those new bodies would actually be. A third type of general amendment is primarily verbal, with the object of clearing up obscurities in, and eliminating superfluities from, some of the clauses which on examination we thought to be somewhat defective. The action taken in that direction has merely been with the object of rendering the Bill more concise, more clear, and more definite, because we have got to remember that action will be taken under this Bill by men who will not be highly trained either in law or in administration. Apart from that, we have made a fair number of alterations in minor points which seemed to the Select Committee to be improvements on the original proposals, but, as I have already said, I do not think they fundamentally affect the principles on which the Bill was drawn up.

The most important change we have made is in discarding the original idea of circle boards. I referred to that point when I moved that the Bill be referred to a Select Committee, and I will not now repeat the general arguments which I then submitted, and which, on further consideration, the Select Committee accepted. We came to the conclusion that the circle board would be somewhat superfluous, that it would not be a very large or important body which would attract keen men to serve upon it, while in so far as we might not be able to cover the whole of any one subdivision with union boards, but in certain areas might have to retain the existing system, there would be a confusion between the simultaneous jurisdiction of the circle board and the local board. Therefore, we decided, as the simplest thing, to stick to the local boards that we have at present. Local boards certainly would, in general, be the better for a little more activity and keenness in their proceedings; but the additional responsibilities conferred by this Bill will tend, possibly, to rectify these deficiencies, and in any case it lies largely in the power of district boards to stimulate the interest of the local boards under them by giving them more money and entrusting them with more important duties. In any case our proposals give another chance to local boards, and if there is to be brought about at any time hereafter the fundamental change of doing away with local boards without substituting, as in the original Bill, an alternative minor organization, I think that the large change of principle which would leave the district board, working, possibly, through standing committees, as the only local authority in the district, should be discussed and debated as such, and not as a side-issue on a measure of this kind.

The other detailed alterations are set out in the report, and I do not wish to delay the Council by taking them through each one. I think most of the explanations speak for themselves, and I will only mention one or two that are of somewhat special importance.

For instance, in clause 3 we have provided that before declaring local areas as 'unions' the views of the district board should be considered. This has been done in compliance with a considerable amount of opinion that was received to the effect that the district board should be brought in further as a working entity in the scheme; and for somewhat similar reasons in clause 15 we have allowed the resignation of his office by a president of a union board to be accepted by the chairman of a district board, instead of by the District Magistrate, while in clause 17, in the probably rare event of the union board failing to elect a president, we have vested his appointment also in the district board. All these changes will reduce the intervention of the District Magistrate, to which some exception was taken in the replies that have been received.

In clause 22A we have made an important change in providing that the views of the union board shall be considered before a dafadar is appointed. It will be noticed that one of the members of the Select Committee in his note of dissent would like to give the right of the nomination of a dafadar to the union board, but the majority were not able to go as far as that, although the modification which we have made will go some way towards meeting him.

Passing on to the duties and functions of union boards we have made various changes, largely of arrangement, in matters relating to sanitation and water-supply, and we have set out particularly in clause 28A that the preservation of public health is a duty of the union board. We have also definitely laid down that the union boards will be required to supply any local information which the District Magistrate, the district board, or the local board may require and, following the precedent of the Bengal Municipal and Local Self-Government Acts, we have added a clause whereby union boards may undertake and carry out any other local work of public utility likely to promote the health, comfort, or convenience of the public, and not otherwise provided for in this Bill. Union boards may wish to see certain things done which do not actually fall within the four corners of the existing clauses.

In clause 29 the Council will notice that we have made an important change, and I shall be glad to know whether it commends itself to the Council; we have given district boards power to order union boards to take action under that clause, and similarly under clause 32 in respect of water-supply. The desirability of so doing was represented in various quarters, and it will give a very useful power to district boards of bringing into line union boards that show themselves rather slack; at any rate, it will be in accordance with the general policy of leaving the improvement of the health conditions of the district largely to the representatives of the district themselves, whether they sit on the union boards or on the district board.

We have also given power to remove jungle overgrowth and dense vegetation which is considered prejudicial to health. This is a matter of great importance in this province, about which much has been written and said.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

We have further provided that union boards may cause burning ghats and burial places to be established. These measures of sanitation speak for themselves.

We have also made a provision, in so far as people are ordered by union boards to do certain things in respect of sanitation, that a right of appeal shall lie, in one case, which is of a more important character, to the district board, and in another, where the matter is less important, to the local board.

In clause 33, which previously dealt only with roads, bridges, and the like, we have inserted waterways, and in view of the conditions prevailing in large parts of Eastern Bengal this seems to me a very useful change.

In clause 35A we have inserted a new provision giving the right of regulation of an offensive or dangerous trade or business; these can at present be dealt with within municipal limits, but they may equally well be established outside them.

In clause 37 we have enlarged the power of union boards regarding establishments, but as a safeguard we have made the exercise of the powers of appointment and the rates of pay subject to the sanction of the local board.

In clauses 56 and 57, which deal with the power of inspection by superior authority, we have brought in the chairmen of district and local boards so as to give them direct responsibilities over the working of the union board.

Clause 59A contains a somewhat important change in the Bill, although it merely follows in substance an existing provision in the Chaukidari Act. When this Bill was drafted we desired to get rid of the old liability under which personal warrants could be issued against the members of chaukidari panchayats for the realization of the arrear pay of chaukidars. That has always been represented as one of the causes of unpopularity of chaukidari panchayats. The Bill, as introduced, did not, however, afford an adequate alternative, and we have, therefore, gone back to the existing provision in the chaukidari law under which the District Magistrate can send a tahsildar to collect the arrears if the union board fails to do so.

Coming to the matter of courts and benches we have made a number of minor changes, and we have made it clear that in criminal or civil matters the benches will only deal with offences committed, or causes of action arising, within their jurisdiction.

In clause 102A we have considered the point as to how the amount realized under a decree is to be distributed if the sum due is not realized in full, and we have adopted the principle of rateable distribution.

In clause 105 we have made a change regarding the payment of witnesses as there was a considerable amount of opinion that 15 miles was too far to require a witness to travel without being reimbursed his expenses.

There are various other minor points, but I think a perusal of the report of the Select Committee will explain them sufficiently to Hon'ble Members.

The measure is not a controversial one nor, I trust, will it prove to be so when the subject is discussed in this Council. The object of all of us is the same, and our sole wish is to produce a clear and workable measure. Hon'ble Members will notice two notes of dissent attached to the report, and their existence might be taken at first sight to be contradictory to what I have just said; but I think it will be seen on examination that these two notes merely raise minor points, some of which are arguable, and some of which (particularly in connection with the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur's dissent, who was, unfortunately, for domestic reasons, which we all deplore, unable to attend all the meetings of the Select Committee) might possibly have been cleared up if we had been able to have further verbal discussion. The Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray has raised the question of the residential qualification of voters, on both sides of which there is something to be said, while he would like to make it obligatory on the dafadar and chaukidars to obey the orders of the bench. On examination we thought that this was already sufficiently provided for under the Bill. Another point is regarding the taking over of the duties of a superseded union board. It is not one which frequently arises, and I think I shall be able to show, if it crops up in Council, that there is not much real difference in substance between us. Finally, the dissentients raise a point about the assignments to be made to union boards by Government and the district board. They would like to have something in the nature of a statutory obligation on Government and the district board to contribute towards the expenses of union boards. I think that there are great practical difficulties in the way of such a statutory provision, but it is a point worth argument and discussion in Council.

With these observations I beg to present the report of the Select Committee."

THE BENGAL PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY presented the report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1919.

He said :—

"My lord, the original Bill, which was circulated to Commissioners of municipalities and local authorities for opinion, contemplated making primary education compulsory. We, however, received certain opinions from the Calcutta Corporation and the Calcutta University in which it was suggested that voluntary primary education ought to precede compulsory education. The Select Committee accepted the suggestion of these influential bodies, and modified the provisions of the Bill accordingly.

"There is another suggestion also which we have considered and it is this: in the original Bill it was proposed that where education cess was to be levied primary education ought to be made free, but the members of the Select Committee thought that it would be an unwise policy not to levy fees from the boys of schools even if the education cess were levied, and so we also had to modify the provisions of that clause. These are the material alterations which have been made in the Bill."

Sir D. P. Sarbadhikari.

'SUPPLEMENTARY LIST OF BUSINESS.

RESOLUTION ON THE RIGHT HON'BLE SIR S. P. SINHA'S APPOINTMENT.

The Hon'ble SIR DEBA PRASAD SARBADHIKARI moved the following resolution :—

That the grateful and dutiful thanks of the Council be conveyed through His Excellency the Viceroy to His Gracious Majesty the King-Emperor for the appointment of the Right Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha, P.C., K.T., K.C., as the first Indian Minister of the Crown.

That the thanks of the Council be also conveyed to the Right Hon'ble the Prime Minister.

That the heartiest felicitations of the Council be conveyed to the Right Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha.

He said :—

" My Lord, in placing this resolution before the Council for its acceptance, I feel weighed down by a sense of sorrow which the Empire at large feels at the great grief of their gracious Majesties the King-Emperor and the Queen-Empress. A brave, good and wise King who at every stage of the fateful struggle through which the Empire has just passed, has devotedly and whole-heartedly been with his people naturally commands to-day their whole-hearted sympathy, and the Empire's respectful condolence will be tendered to him in his great bereavement—the first that he had as a father.

Ordinarily, the head of a constitutional monarchy would not have much to do with a ministry appointment like the one my resolution contemplates and ordinarily such a resolution would probably be out of place. But, in the exceptional circumstances of the case, I feel—and the Council will probably think with me—that our grateful thanks are due to His Majesty not only for His Majesty's approval of this great step, but also for the impulse that it must have received from him, if not the actual initiative. The message of hope with which His Majesty followed up his message of sympathy in this country is being daily translated into action, steadily if slowly, and it would be worse than a blunder not to recognise the full value and the significance of the unprecedented action that has now been courageously taken.

Our thanks are also due to the Prime Minister for his part in the action, and that could be no mean a part. But for his initiative Sir S. P. Sinha's name as the first Indian Minister of the Crown could not—nay, need not—have been thought of. As Mr. Lloyd George has recently said, it is not the greatest eloquence that gets things done. We had eloquent appeals, eloquent representations, eloquent re-assurances and at times eloquent promises. The time for eloquent action has now come and some of the first steps are about to be taken. Due and dutiful gratitude should, therefore, be ungrudgingly rendered.

If non-recognition of the value of the step would be a blunder, I am free to own that over-estimation of its value would be a mistake. No one for a moment imagines that stray high honours or offices can satisfy or uplift a people. And if this step was one such, there would be less occasion or justification for the widespread rejoicings that have found expression in the press, on the platform and among public bodies and individuals. But one must recognise, and is glad to be reassured, that this step is no isolated and thoughtless measure of placation or individual preferment. It is but a part of a concerted and deliberate scheme that is fast maturing and the step, which is a great step in advance, is but a sign and a symbol of the changing times.

That Sir S. P. Sinha has been chosen for this great honour and greater responsibility is no mere accident. The first Indian Advocate-General, the first Indian Member of the Imperial Executive Council, the first Indian King's Counsel, the first Hindu Privy Councillor, and one of the first Indians on the Imperial War Cabinet, was naturally one of the first to be called upon to deliberate on the victories of Peace, ever more glorious than the victories of mere War. And when the time came for giving an Indian a permanent, recognised and useful position in connection with the work of reconstruction, his name was also naturally the first. It is a great honour to India and a greater recognition of her claims that at no step or stage of the Peace Conference the Indian representatives are to be dropped out, though in all stages the Indian members will not necessarily sit as such.

And is this not largely due to the high and undoubted personal qualities of Sir S. P. Sinha, and his princely colleague? An unobtrusive and assiduous worker, without any delusions and devoid of the art of deluding, Sir S. P. Sinha is endowed with uncommon common-sense; his unbending rectitude and high ideals utterly unfitted him for scheming for place or honour, and what has come to him has come because it was bound to. Like his friend Sir P. C. Roy, one of the many belonging to the notable Presidency College days in the early eighties of the last century, that produced Sir S. P. Sinha, he has no claims or pretensions to genius. He would himself be horrified by the idea, as Sir P. C. Roy has recently been. He has the marvellous gift of hitting at the right conclusion on the shortest possible notice, and is essentially a practical man of sound views. The joy felt at his elevation is not merely personal, though he is a dear friend to many. Nor is it merely communal or provincial. It is much more, and the whole country naturally desires to felicitate him. He is one of our very own, but that is no less a claim on our good feelings, and I invite the Council to convey their heart-felt felicitations to their colleague. Whether turbaned and bejewelled for Parisian enjoyment, as an enterprising newspaper agency has imagined him in fancy, or whether in his plain habiliments, such as he ordinarily delights in, the Right Hon'ble Sir Satyendra Prosanna Sinha will prove himself a good man and true, as he has always been,—a loyal, worthy and watchful son of India, Her glory he will uplift, and her good name and prestige he will uphold in her restored place among nations, in the eyes of nations assembled for united effort for the supreme enthronement of righteousness and for the final confusion of the world-forces of disorder, some idea of whose mysterious and mischievous creed is manifest in the latest nationalisation ideas of the hated Bolshevik."

The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

"My Lord, I associate myself with all that has been said by Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. It is a matter of great gratification to us that the Right Hon'ble Sir Satyendra Prosanna Sinha who was a non-official member of this Council only three years ago, and was a member of the Executive Council of Your Lordship's Government up to a week ago, has been raised to the position of Under-Secretary of State for India. The appointment, I need hardly say, is unique. It not only shows the confidence of the British Government in an Indian of ability and merit, but also shows that where such ability exists, Government desire to avail themselves of the services of such ability. The appointment will give immense opportunities to an able Indian like Sir S. P. Sinha of doing real good to his country. The appointment of Indians to the Council of the Secretary of State for India as well as to the Executive Council of the Government of India and of the Provincial Governments showed that the British Government are convinced that Indians are fit for positions of trust and responsibility. They have unmistakeably proved their fitness to take their place in the highest Councils of the Empire. The appointment is an augury of India's partnership in the Empire. To us the satisfaction is all the more greater that a Bengali gentleman has been selected at this critical time to fill such an important office. Our heartiest congratulations go forth both to the Government and to the recipient of the office."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Babu A. C. Datta ; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri ; the President.

The Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I desire to associate myself with the resolution which has been moved by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. In doing so, I wish to say that the appointment has struck the imagination of the people. For the first time in the history of India, full effect has been given to the gracious proclamation of our late Most Gracious Majesty the Queen which were uttered in the memorable words of 1858. My Lord, I look upon the appointment of the Right Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha and the high position which he has been called upon to fill, not in a personal light. I consider that it is an earnest of the fulfilment of that pledge that noble pledge of the British nation, which was announced by the Right Hon'ble Mr. Montagu in the House of Commons on the 20th of August 1917, and that pledge is to lift the Indians to the position of equal partners of the British Empire. I do not think, My Lord, that the appointment of an individual here and there to a high position will meet our requirements or satisfy the aspirations of the people of this country. I hold that it is an earnest attempt to lift the Indian in the scale of nations as equal partners of the British Empire. On this ground, more than on personal grounds, I offer my hearty thanks and gratitude to His Gracious Majesty the King-Emperor, to the British Cabinet and to the British people."

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA said :—

"I desire to associate myself with this resolution, and I do so most whole-heartedly. I do hope and I sincerely believe that the appointment of the Right Hon'ble Sir S. P. Sinha as Under-Secretary of State for India will result in advantage both to India and to the Empire to which she belongs."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I am glad to associate myself with this motion and I do so whole-heartedly. I endorse every word that has fallen from the Hon'ble mover and supporters of this resolution. It is an unique occasion, and we are grateful to his Majesty the King-Emperor and to the British Empire and to the British Government, and I heartily congratulate the recipient of this honour. With these words, I beg to support the resolution."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Before putting this motion from the Chair, I cannot refrain from associating both myself and my Government with the substance of the resolution, and with the tenor of the speeches which have been made in moving and supporting it. With regard to the actual words of the motion which is now before us I associate myself and also my Government with that. I rejoice both on national and on personal grounds at this signal honour which has been conferred on Sir S. P. Sinha. I rejoice on national grounds because I see in it a striking proof and a remarkable example of the determination of

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

His Majesty's Government to seek in ever-increasing degree the co-operation and the assistance of the prominent men of this country in the solution of those vast problems which are common to India and to Great Britain. It is sometimes said, thoughtlessly, I think, that the British Government make promises easily but that they are not quite so careful in fulfilling them. I feel certain that by the action which His Majesty on the recommendation of the Prime Minister has now taken, any suggestion that the British Government have not every intention of carrying out to the best of their ability the pledges which have recently been made in Parliament, must be dispelled. I rejoice on personal grounds because I have been fortunate enough during the time of my holding office in this country to have had associated with me in the difficult and arduous task of governing this Presidency, the invaluable assistance and advice of Sir S. P. Sinha. He was a man who never hesitated in Council with his colleagues to state frankly and fearlessly his opinions. He was a man who has always been ready to give us the best advice that he possessed. At the same time he was a man who always listened with care and courtesy to the opinions of those who might differ from him. I cannot myself conceive a more valuable or a more delightful colleague in the Government of this Presidency than the Right Hon'ble gentleman who has now been so signally honoured by His Majesty the King-Emperor."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

RESOLUTIONS

(under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest).

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee be formed to inquire into the causes of the deterioration of cows in Bengal, and to report as to the best means of improving them, especially noticing if, and on what lines, legislation is advisable for the compulsory acquisition of lands for the grazing of cattle and for preventing encroachment upon customary grazing lands (if any).

He said :—

"My Lord, I believe the fact that cows in Bengal have deteriorated and are gradually deteriorating is admitted on all hands and even by the Government, as will appear from 'A survey and census of the cattle of Bengal,' edited by Mr. Blackwood, the then Director of Agriculture of Bengal, and published by the Government in 1915, and it needs no showing by me. Nor am I an expert in the subject so that I shall be able to give any further facts in connection with it. It will also appear from the said report that the want of fodder is also admitted to be one of the main causes of such deterioration. At page 15 of the report in Chapter IX headed 'Circumstances adverse to cattle breeding in Bengal' Mr. Blackwood says :—'The most important circumstance, other than climate, adverse to cattle breeding in Bengal is undoubtedly the deficiency of pasture. This fact is well known to the ordinary cultivator who usually replies when asked the reason for the degeneration of cattle, ঘাষের অভাব (the want of grass).' Again when he treats of another cause of such deterioration, viz., the deficiency of suitable breeding bulls, he says, 'The inquiries which have been made have elicited the fact that, generally speaking, bull calves are not gelded until they become fit for ploughing. Covering is therefore usually done by immature bulls. The gradual diminution in the number of brahmani bulls is due very largely to encroachment on waste lands.' It is also admitted by Mr. Blackwood, though indirectly and rather mildly, that the slaughter of brahmini bulls is another cause. At page 22 under Chapter XII headed 'brahmini Bulls' Mr. Blackwood says 'the encroachment of cultivation on waste land is perhaps the chief reason for the gradual diminution of the number of brahmani bulls, although the High Court's decision that the brahmani bull must be regarded as a res nullius.' He goes on to say 'the old system of breeding by means of sacred bulls was a good one from the point of view of the cattle themselves, because, if properly carried out it ensured that the calves dedicated to the deity were picked animals and the practice of allowing them to roam at will ensured that they were well fed and had plenty of exercise.' There is already an insufficiency in the supply of bulls and to add to it there is the further fact as said above that the brahmani bulls are regarded as res nullius. In a note by the Superintendent of the Civil Veterinary Department, Bengal, on the work done by the said department for improvement of the breeds of cattle in Bengal he says 'brahmani bulls were continued to be taken away by butchers and others from Eastern Bengal and Assam and the lower districts of the province. The evil assumed such proportions that it had a serious effect on cattle breeding' and again 'Another evil which is assuming an alarming aspect is that brahmani bulls are taken away and for meat purposes.'

Colonel Raymond some time ago made a suggestion for bull rearing farms. But so far as I know, very little, if at all, has been done towards that purpose. A special Committee of the Corporation of Calcutta also advised legislation for acquiring pasture lands outside Calcutta.

If then, My Lord, it is admitted that cattle are deteriorating and also the causes are known, I do not know why the Government should be slow in remedying this grievance. Bengal is an agricultural country. The people of this province are by habit chiefly a race of non-meat-eaters. They depend chiefly upon agriculture for their food and besides some sprinkling of fish, they require largely some forms of dairy products, such as butter and milk for their meagre supply of fats. Further the question of welfare of the milk-bearing cattle is intimately connected with the health and welfare of the children-folk of the country and as such, it behoves the Government as the ultimate guardian of the peoples' interest to devise means and legislation for the maintenance and improvement of the cattle of the country. The question of an ample supply of cattle-food is of paramount importance in this connection and leads to the vexed question of feasibility, advisability or otherwise of providing ample grazing grounds by legislation. This point has been touched in some details by Mr. Blackwood (vide pages 16—19) in his report. The conclusion seems to be adverse to my proposal, viz., of provision of grazing land by State legislation. Be that as it may, My Lord, it is undeniable that from time immemorial Ruling authorities and Governments in this country deemed it their sacred duty to preserve, maintain and improve the breed of the cattle of the country. For this purpose the provision of grazing lands for cattle, the restrictions upon the slaughter of domestic animals, came within the purview of State legislation. Thus we find our old Hindu legislators making provisions for the same end.

For the preservation of cattle and to improve its quality the Hindu Governments from time immemorial adopted various measures, e.g. :—

- (i) The Hindu Governments compelled the communal authorities in the towns and villages to provide these local areas with belts of pasture land around them to allow the cattle of those areas to graze in these lands. These pasture grounds formed belts of grass land round villages and towns and their width varied from 100 dhanus to 400 dhanus, e.g., 400 to 1,600 cubits. Dhanu is a measure 4 cubits long.

Kautilya—Bk. II, page 172, text lines 5—11.

The preservation of these pasture grounds was enforced by the kings who did it themselves or enforced it upon the local authorities.

(ii) They placed restrictions upon the slaughter of these animals. Cow slaughter was strictly forbidden (Kautilya, page 122) and as regards buffaloes and other animals the Government forbade the slaughter of the female and the young and the castration of males (योनिवारुवधं पुंस्त्रीपशूनां च प्रतिषेधयेत् Kautilya, page 407). Unnecessary slaughter was discouraged and often punished.

(iii) To improve the quality of cattle (and horses) the Government provided people with bulls for crossing purposes. (Kautilya, page 133, in connection with royal horses).

The Government discouraged castration and secured certain immunities for the brahmani bulls—and bulls dedicated to Gods—and these were allowed to graze freely and were free from molestation. Injury to these was severely punished. The Hon'ble BABU SURENDRA NATH RAY said :—

“The object of my hon'ble friend in moving the resolution is very laudable and the comparative apathy of Government towards the question is to be regretted. I am, however, sorry that I cannot support the resolution as it stands. The subject is a complicated one and will require very careful enquiry into actual conditions which I am afraid a committee sitting in Calcutta is not the fittest body to tackle properly. The question of grazing lands is only one of the many problems that will have to be solved and it is also a moot question whether, with an increase of population, lands which can profitably be cultivated for grains or jute should be allowed to lie waste for grazing purposes. The question again of the rights of villagers to have a certain portion of the village to remain fallow in order that their cattle may graze there as against the right of the landlords to enclose waste lands is also a very delicate one and requires very careful enquiry into actual conditions before any effective legislation can be taken up. Nor can we blame the landlords for bringing waste lands into cultivation when we find that even the Government in leasing out portions of the Sunderban lands requires rent for every bigha of the land let out and does not allow any rebate or remission etc., for pasture land, etc. The proper course would be to reserve some lands for grazing purposes and while it may be urged that probably the question is not yet very acute in that area, but it is bound to be so in a few short years in those areas where the whole of the land is cultivated. Similar causes have effected the disappearance of pasture lands in other parts of Bengal.

The difficulties indicated make it clear that the questions of finding fodder of an improved and more nutritious character, as well as of a better breed of cattle, in Bengal are all the more necessary and the help of the Agricultural Department will have to be sought.

While every one is agreed as to the necessity and urgency of the fact that something should be done in regard to an adequate feeding of the cattle, there are undoubtedly differences as to how best to secure this end.

Maulvi A. Kasem.

Mr. Blackwood for instance is opposed to compulsory acquisition of grazing lands; and he suggests the growing of what is known as fodder crops and the adoption of mixed farming as being more effective and welcome remedies.

Taking all circumstances into consideration it seems that it will not be advisable to go in for compulsory acquisition of lands particularly in the face of a definite economic tendency to take up as much possible of the available land for purposes of cultivation. At any rate some voluntary method of securing the object should be given a fair trial before compulsory acquisition can be thought of. Besides the huge expenditure which a scheme of compulsory acquisition will entail, if it is to solve the problem for the entire province, makes one despair.

The best plan will be to entrust the matter to the care of union boards which are to be created under the Village Self-Government Bill. And it will be for them to take the initiative and carry the project through with the willing co-operation of the Government, the zaminder and the tenant.

I hope the discussions on the subject will not be in vain and that Government will try to tackle the problem and inform the Council of their plan before long."

The Hon'ble MAULVI ABUL KASEM said :—

"My Lord, I should like to associate myself with the appeal which has been made by the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri for the consideration of the question of improving not only the breed of the cattle, but for the protection of the cattle as well. I am sorry that like my friend the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray I cannot support the resolution as it stands. The resolution suggests that a committee consisting of officials and non-officials should be appointed. I regret that in my opinion a committee so constituted will be practically of very little value. I think the Government should take up an enquiry into the matter, and after securing the opinions of experts as well as of lawyers should provide some means for the protection of cattle. In a country, where agriculture is the chief industry, the question of the breeding of cattle and their maintenance is a question of the greatest possible importance. My Lord, millions of cattle—cows and bullocks—are slaughtered in India to provide food for the non-Hindu population and I wonder what would be the situation if we take a vow not to take beef. How the people of India are to maintain such a large number of cattle unless some provision is made for it? My friend the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray suggests that this matter should be left to the discretion of union committees who are to deal with it in consultation with Government and zamindars, I unfortunately differ from him. I think that the question should be taken up and taken up at once by the Executive Government, because it is a question in which there is no difference of opinion between popular representatives and the members of Government, and both are anxious to see that something should be done, and Government alone is in a position to decide this question. My Lord, the permanent settlement has been a great blessing to this country, but later experience and investigation have at least shown that it is not an unmixed blessing at any rate. To the permanent settlement we are indebted for the loss of grazing ground and what is more, the silting up and of innumerable silted up tanks in the cornfields. My friend the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray says that it is more advantageous to have every inch of land for purposes of cultivation, but I want to know how cultivation work is to be carried out if there are no cattle in the country to plough the land. Over these matters I cannot express an opinion of my own; but I think that something ought to be done, and done immediately, to see that more grazing grounds are provided for our cattle and that some means for feeding them is provided and that the quality of cattle is improved."

Rai D. C. Ghosh Bahadur.

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSH Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I want to say a few words on this resolution and at the outset I should like to state that I associate myself with the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri in his desire to have a committee appointed to enquire into the causes of the deterioration of cows in Bengal and to report as to the best means of improving them. There are, of course, no two opinions on the point that cattle in Bengal—I may say in most parts of India—have deteriorated in quality as also, I believe, in numbers. It is not of much use to refer to ancient Hindu writings and it is well-known that in pre-British days every village had its Gogrash of 30 bighas of land assigned as for the use of the cattle of the village, and it may be, as stated by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, that one result of the permanent settlement has been to give all these pasture lands to the zamindars who have made settlements of these lands for cultivation. All these uses were not foreseen at the time of the permanent settlement, but the permanent settlement has not been an evil to the country. There might have been mistakes of this kind at the time of the permanent settlement and provisions were not made for pasture lands. I may be permitted to invite the attention of the Council to the fact that Government khas mahal lands—a very appreciable portion of this province—have not been permanently settled for purposes of revenue. In the 24-Parganas there are large tracts which are Government khas mahal—and I think I may state, subject to any correction which official gentlemen may make on this subject, that there is no provision in the Government khas mahal in that district for setting apart any land for pasture of cattle. If that be so, I think it is not the zamindars of the permanently-settled estates who are to blame for the present state of things. The present state of things was not foreseen in the 18th century, and when we became aware of the evil which has come upon the economic situation of the country, we have neglected the preservation of pasture lands. We have not been very keen—we have not been at all earnest—in remedying the evils when we have come to know of it. The Agricultural Department of Government has been in existence about 40 years, and I do not think that the Agricultural Department has seriously tackled this question. I think that is owing to the frequent changes in the personnel of that Department and the stingy way in which that Department has been supplied with the sinews of finance. Whatever might have been the reason, there is the fact that within the last 40 years very little has been done to improve the situation in this matter. Cows have deteriorated for various causes, the chief cause, of course, being the want of grazing land : and it so happens that those who have the directing hand in apportioning the monetary contributions for remedying the evil are not the persons who directly feel the difficulties which have arisen on account of the deterioration of the cattle. We, Hindus, depend greatly on cattle for our sustenance, not that we live upon the flesh of cattle but the milk of the cattle sustains us from infancy to old age and we cannot resist our neighbours, the Muhammadans, in killing cattle. Then there is the European community to be considered : they are a beef-eating race and it does not matter to them whether cows or bulls are slaughtered. In England, I believe, prime-cows are not slaughtered for purposes of beef. The contrary happens to prevail in India—at least I can speak for the town of Calcutta where an effort was made some time ago to discourage the slaughter of prime-cows, and there was such an uproar and such a commotion that the Chairman of the Calcutta Corporation was obliged to suggest the rescinding of the by-law which required a larger fee for the slaughter of prime-cows. That was the way in which it was tried to discourage the slaughter of such cows. Well that is the state of things in Calcutta. There is a scheme before the Corporation of Calcutta for acquiring grazing lands at some distance from the town of Calcutta and to set up a dairy at a considerable cost,—the estimate is ten lakhs—to supply the town of Calcutta with pure milk. All over the country people are suffering for the deterioration of cows and after Your Lordship is able to suppress malaria the next best thing would be to take effective measures for the improvement of cattle and for increasing the food supply of the people of this land. I therefore have great pleasure in asking for a committee. A committee will be useful in discussing the various matters for or against the question and one will feel his way before embarking on a project. One gentleman has said that you cannot proceed under the Land Acquisition Act to acquire grazing lands. Well that is one of the ways, and, provided you have the money, that is the safest way of securing grazing lands. I only refer to this matter in the hope that a committee will be appointed to consider these things."

Khan Sahib Aman Ali; Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI said :—

"My Lord, that the cultivators are feeling great inconvenience there is not the least doubt. I come from Chittagong, and I have seen that lands are measured as goban and gochat: goban is the path reserved for the passing of cows, and gochat is the land reserved for the grazing of cattle. These lands have now been resumed by Government and have been leased to the people. I have also seen in hilly places in Chittagong that certain hills were used by cultivators for grazing their cattle. They have now been reserved and the people cannot graze their cattle there, especially the grazing of buffaloes has been forbidden, so that the cultivators are suffering very much. My submission to this Council is that some enquiry ought to be taken in hand, either by a committee or by the District Officers. I have consulted some of the agriculturists and some of officers of the Agricultural Department, and they have told me that there are means for producing fodder for cattle: in a small area fodder can be produced for a good number of cattle. If Government be pleased to enquire into the matter either by a committee or from District Officers it will be a great boon to the cultivators of this Province. I have no experience of other districts, but I have some experience of my own district Chittagong. I have also seen that when a new char is formed, grass is produced there in abundance, and that the people buy this grass and feed their cattle. But, as soon as the grass grows, Government lease the char and the cultivators greatly suffer. This is a matter of my own experience. Therefore, my submission to this Council in support of this resolution is that, either a committee be formed to enquire into the matter or that the matter be enquired into through District Officers."

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING said :—

"Sir, Government have every sympathy with the anxiety which the hon'ble gentleman has regarding the decrease in grazing reserves in Bengal. He has given details and quoted from Mr. Blackwood's survey of the position; and he suggests legislation, although one of the authorities quoted by him deprecated such legislation.

I am afraid I must trespass somewhat on the time of this Council in giving a fuller statement of the past history of the case than has hitherto been given in this debate. But I shall refrain from straying into some of the by-paths which have been trodden by some of the previous speakers.

The resolution deals with two subjects: first, the alleged deterioration of cattle and secondly, the improvement of grazing facilities. The hon'ble mover recommends in his resolution that a committee should be appointed to examine the matter. From past experience, it is more than doubtful whether from the appointment of a committee any practical result would ensue; and this point of view has been put forward by at least two hon'ble members who have already spoken. After all, the facts are known as far as they can be known. Undoubtedly, the condition of cattle in Bengal is not satisfactory; the causes are partly climatic and partly economic. We have recently obtained from settlement reports some interesting statistics regarding cattle. In two important districts, we find that there is one animal for every two human beings; and in two other districts the record of rights of which has been recently completed we find one for every three. Again, we find one animal for every cultivated acre in a district like Dacca. We also find two animals per cultivated acre in a district like Backerganj. In addition to that, there is Mr. Blackwood's Cattle Census Report of 1915 to which the hon'ble mover has alluded. Mr. Blackwood formed general conclusions as to what the causes of the deterioration are, and I doubt whether a committee sitting at the present moment could decide anything further. Moreover, another cattle survey is due to be undertaken in January of next year. That is another reason why the appointment of a committee ad hoc is unnecessary.

Now, what are the causes so far as we can ascertain them. Primarily, the cause is an economic one:—namely, that it pays a cultivator better to grow crops than to produce cattle. There are many subsidiary causes, such as the smallness of holdings; deep ploughing is not required, hence cultivators are content to employ weak cattle; and the valuable fodder crops which we find grown in the United Provinces and in Bihar cannot be grown in a damp climate like that of Eastern Bengal. A damp climate, moreover, such as we have generally in Bengal, is unfavourable to the growth of vigorous cattle. There is also the want of good bulls; and I regret to say also that the cultivators do not give the calves sufficient milk. These are the general conclusions which were formed. As I have said, I do not think we can ascertain very much more by appointing a committee.

It has been urged in the debate that Government have not done enough; that Government are apathetic; and that the officers of Government, not being natives of the soil, do not appreciate the difficulties. I challenge all these statements. The Department of Agriculture has not been in existence in Bengal for so long a period as 40 years, as has been alleged; but the matter has engaged the attention of its officers throughout. The present policy of the Bengal Government at the Rangpur cattle farm is to follow two lines of action; one line is to ascertain what improvement can be effected by the process of selection from among indigenous cattle, and the other is to see what can be done by cross-breeding. Already there is an indication that the selection of the best cattle from acclimatised indigenous stock produces better results, both in the outturn of milk, and in bone and muscle. If this inference is supported, as time goes on, it will be desirable to create similar farms at many other places in the Presidency; and this, I suggest, is the proper line of action for the improvement of cattle as cattle.

The second main point in the resolution is as regards the improvement of grazing facilities. No member in the course of the debate has indicated the fact that this subject has been discussed very frequently both in this Council and in the Imperial Council. It is not a new subject; it has been brought up in recent years three times in the Imperial Council and four times in the Bengal Council; it was the subject of a budget resolution in this Council; it was also discussed in detail by the Commissioners at one of their annual Conferences; and the Government of India once raised the matter as an all-India question. What was the result? The Commissioners' Conference to which I have referred, could come to no practical conclusion. Some of the finest revenue officers that India has produced have handled this matter, and found themselves unable to check the effect of economic laws. It is true that the situation is different in different parts of India, and it is not the same even in different parts of this Presidency. One member has referred to the lands bordering on reserve forests in Chittagong. This is a matter of local controversy; but the solution is to allow grazing in reserved forests under such conditions as will preserve the reserved forests, and at the same time not press too hard on the cattle. The rules that have been imposed there are, I consider, fair. Then again, there is the case of char lands on the littoral of the Bay of Bengal. It is said that Government makes no arrangement there for setting apart lands for grazing purposes. That I also challenge. The rules are quite distinct on the subject; and have been recently emphasised by the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore, the Member in charge of the Board of Revenue. In Northern Bengal you have an entirely different problem; there the policy is to encourage stall-feeding. The picture, however, which most people have in their minds when discussing this question is the state of the Central Bengal districts where grazing has been reduced to a minimum by the extension of cultivation. Now, one may apply one formula for practically the whole of these cases, and it is as follows: where fodder reserves are required, there is no spare land, and where there is land, no fodder reserves are required. Mr. Finucane, who was the first Director of Agriculture of Bengal and was one of the best revenue officers in this province, once said that it seemed to him that all that could be done in the permanently-settled areas in Bengal was to assist such zamindars as were willing to assist themselves, and that it was out of the question for Government to acquire land by purchase in permanently-settled areas. In more recent times, another Bengal officer whose knowledge of the agricultural conditions of Bengal it would be difficult to beat,—I refer to the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, made the following statement in this Council: 'The problem is an economic one and no feasible method of solving it has yet been suggested. Waste land is being brought under cultivation because it pays better to grow crops on it than to reserve it for grazing purposes. Government has at present no control over the extension of cultivation in ordinary private estates, and legislation on the subject would effect many vested interests, and would be attended by grave difficulties.'

Allusion is made in these remarks to the fact that Government has no control over cultivators in private estates; now what do the zamindars themselves say? Mr. Blackwood consulted the Landholders' Association; and he was informed that the zamindars could do nothing practical in the matter, and that it would be difficult to persuade the tenants to retain any portion of the land even for such a beneficial object as the grazing of cattle. In a recent settlement report of the Dacca district, it is recorded that neither the cultivators nor the landholders' agents show any restraint in refraining from encroachment on the local village paths, which are stated to constitute the only grazing lands in the district. I may quote another authority, Mr. Moreland, one of the great revenue officers of an adjacent province, namely, the United Provinces. He had an unsurpassed knowledge of the economic conditions of those provinces. He expressed his opinion when this very matter was being discussed very appropriately at a Cattle Conference convened at Lucknow about 10 years ago. On that occasion the matter was considered from every point of view, but the Conference could arrive at no agreement. He said that in those provinces the larger landholders were voluntarily preserving the existing grazing grounds, but objected strongly to be compelled to do so, while smaller landholders were breaking up the land for cultivation until the necessary adjustment for prices ensured its retention for grazing. Therefore it comes to this that is from the self-interest of the people concerned that we must look for any improvement. It has already been found in actual practice in the Dacca district that the union committees from whom we expect so much at present, have exercised their influence in preventing encroachment on the footpaths which are at present the main source of grazing grounds in that district.

The hon'ble gentleman has proposed that the propriety of legislation should be considered. This suggestion was also placed before Mr. Blackwood; and in answer to his enquiries the Landholders' Association made an entirely immature suggestion which was of doubtful legality, that Government should acquire land for grazing purposes by utilising landlords' fees which had lapsed. This suggestion was not accepted. Now as regards possible legislation, it might take one of two forms:—one form would be for the purpose of the preservation of existing lands which are at present used for grazing, and the other form would be for the purpose of the acquisition of land for the same object. Now, as regards the first type, that has already been adopted in the legislation which was proposed for Orissa when the Orissa Tenancy Bill was brought before this Council. That Bill was subsequently taken up in the Legislative Council of Bihar and Orissa; but the chapter devoted to that end was dropped. I felt personally some regret in the matter because I had a little to do with the preparation of that chapter; but at the same time I recognised that the reasons which were then given for not following up the matter, were sufficient. The other line of action would be to acquire new land for grazing. Such acquisition may again fall under two heads; it may be permissive or it may be coercive. If it were permissive, all experience shows that the legislation would be a dead letter, inasmuch as advantage would not be taken of its provisions. If coercive, then I am sure that the resentment which would be created would be out of proportion to the advantage obtained. Obviously if any village or group of villages were to come forward and say that two-thirds of the principal landlords or tenants wished a certain area to be acquired, Government would consider the matter on its merits; but so far nothing of this kind has been done, and I have very grave doubts whether such a proposal would be forthcoming.

If I have been successful in showing that this matter has been very carefully examined in the past and that every experienced officer has admitted his inability to work miracles, then it may be asked—what can be done. I may say that Government have done, and can do, three things. First of all, Government can set a good example both in temporarily-settled estates and in Government estates which are held direct. The instructions of the Board of Revenue which are now on record, should, if followed, ensure that grazing lands are maintained. In the second place, in making a record-of-rights in this Province we have found that it is admitted by general consent that certain lands are recognised as land over which the local public have communal rights, such as grazing; and where such rights have been found to exist Government have in their record-of-rights recorded that such land is held subject to such easements. A list of such lands is attached to the record of each village. In this way existing rights are stereotyped; but there is not much of this in Bengal, and for that reason I do not expect much by way of legislation, undertaken simply for the purpose of recording existing rights. In the third place, Government can pursue the policy of endeavouring to select the fittest cattle by selection from among acclimatised cattle in the province. In course of time a type will be developed which can be spread over the province; and District Boards in their turn can perform their duty in maintaining stock bulls. These are the three definite lines of action which Government can, and should, follow. As for the landlords in the permanently-settled districts in this Presidency, they must, so far as they can, on the one hand, exercise self-restraint and refrain from turning grazing land into agricultural land, for the sake of immediate gain and, on the other hand, teach cultivators that defective cattle will in the end re-act upon their own productivity and on their power of paying rent. It may be that it is only in the hard school of experience that the cultivators will learn the lesson for themselves.

For these reasons, Sir, I consider, agreeing with some of the members who have spoken, that the appointment of a committee will lead to no practical result, and that there are other lines of action which are more suitable for adoption. Therefore, I must ask the Council not to accept the resolution in its present form."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I am opposed by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the department in the suggestion that a committee ought to be formed, and I am also sorry that some of my friends have misunderstood me, and have thought that a committee would do no good. From the discussions I should think it has been made clear to Your Excellency that a committee is really necessary. Of course, all that individual effort can do, is being done, and that Government are alive to the question is also apparent from the fact that there was an enquiry by Mr. Blackwood who recommended that it was necessary to take some steps for the improvement of the cattle, but that legislation was not necessary; Government could not therefore do anything in the face of that report. If, however, it is a matter of interest to the Agricultural Department, for the improvement of the milk supply, and for other reasons as well, it is necessary that something should be done. Why should Government simply depend upon that report, and say that it is an economical question, and that individual effort should be depended upon. I am told that zamindars should do something; khas mahal is the best ideal for the zamindars to follow. Before zamindars can do anything, the initiative should be taken in khas mahal land by Government and they should show the way. If it is really a public question, one class alone should not be called upon to do the needful; not only the zamindars, but also the people most interested, I mean the tenants, and also the Government should come forward to take the initiative by showing the way in which it can be affected in the khas mahal lands, and for the other tracts, by legislation, if necessary. It is admitted that this is a very complicated question. If it is a complicated question, then the appointment of a committee is all the more necessary. Although Government are fully alive to the question and directed a special inquiry, and a report was submitted, yet the question was arrested because Mr. Blackwood could not come to a definite proposal, and did not agree that there was a necessity, and that legislation was the proper method of dealing with it. I am not asking for an official enquiry, I simply ask that a committee should be appointed. My suggestion is that the district officers may also do the needful if they form themselves into a committee. The District Board is not the proper authority because they have not got the funds. In the village unions some difficulties will arise as to where they should get funds. There should be co-operation between the people, the zamindars and the Government, and that question can only be dealt with in a committee. That committee could consider the question of ways and means and they could formulate proposals how the question could be approached. I am not satisfied with the reply that has been given, and I earnestly request that Your Excellency's Government should take up the question and find out means as to how this could be done. Two things are very urgently required; the breeding question and the maintenance question. As regards the breeding question, I have shown already that in former times the State maintained bulls and supplied them free of charge. Brahmini bulls served the purpose to a certain extent, but that is also discouraged now. I think that breeding farms should be started, and Mr. Blackwood stated that farms should be established and fodder crops raised and people trained. But, I want to know in what way all this can be done. If these things are necessary, I think it must be worked out by a committee who will consider the question in all its different aspects and they should submit to Government whether any legislation is necessary, and then Your Excellency's Government will be in a position to consider what steps should be taken in the matter and whether funds should be raised by co-operative movement or whether by imposition of rates on interested persons and zamindars. So I earnestly appeal that my resolution should be accepted.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a committee, consisting of officials and non-officials, be appointed to inquire and report as to the best means of causing the district administration in the future to be more in touch with the public opinion of the district, especially noticing if, and on what lines, advisory committees formed of representative public men of the district should be constituted.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

He said :—

“ My Lord, as at present constituted the district administration is a detached administration by the district officers in which the people of the district have but little voice. The official tours of the district officers and their presence at district board meetings have little effect in securing co-operation between the Government and the real leaders of the people. Practically, they rarely meet and meet for any public purposes. In these days when the necessity for the co-operation of the public with the Government is so much felt and recognised, this co-operation should not, to my mind, be left to the discretion of the district officer, but should be placed on a sure basis by the creation of a permanent institution in the nature of an advisory committee or such other body, which will by constant exchange of views and joint deliberations have a real and effective bearing on the civil administration of the district in all its important branches affecting materially the well-being of the people. Such an attempt, I understand, is being made in the excise department. That this is necessary was hinted at by the Decentralisation Commission Report long ago, and also by other Government reports. So far as I know, circulars were issued by the Government of India for promoting better understanding between the district officers and the people. Government officers have been given to understand that manifestations of grave defects of temper and repeated loss of self-control should be regarded as constituting inefficiency. But I am not quite sure if these circulars produced the desired effect. I therefore want a committee for the purpose of devising means as to how this co-operation can best be secured. If the creation of advisory committees is advised by such a committee it will also be for them to recommend what shape this advisory committee should take, what functions it should exercise and what will be its constitution. By this resolution I simply want that the district officers should be in constant touch with the leaders of public opinion in the district, so that the administration may be more sympathetically based upon co-operation. In that case the peculiar wants of the district will always be before the officers, who will also in their turn find it very easy to accomplish their tasks with the co-operation of the leaders. And I am sure that such a step will remove much misunderstanding and many mistakes which, admittedly, to our great regret, often take place under the present system. Further, this will also help to train the people up in civil administration so as to make them ready to exercise greater powers in future such as are foreshadowed in the Reform Scheme.

The gods, it is natural, my Lord, may be jealous of their powers, but if the angle of vision has changed, and sympathy rather than autocratic power is to be the keynote of the Government of the country in future, the place where it ought to begin is perhaps the district, and so that the coming reforms in the Central and Provincial Governments may be real, they ought to be preceded by a reform in the district administration.

It will perhaps be not quite out of place to quote here a passage from the Report on Constitutional Reforms by His Excellency the Viceroy and the Secretary of State for India. At page 162 of their report they say : ‘ It is perhaps not easy for the successful and unimaginative Englishman to realise what the rule of another race must mean to patriotic minds and the great obligation that lies upon him to treat with all possible consideration those whom he has hitherto ruled and whom he is now admitting to a share in the task of ruling.’

Sir Henry Wheeler.

What I feel is that the district officer ought in future to make the leaders of the district his colleagues rather than subordinates and I am fully confident that such a step is sure to place on a surer and firmer basis the British government in India. Such a step is rendered all the more necessary by the fact that Europeans and not Indians are generally placed in charge of districts.

With these remarks I beg to move this resolution, and I earnestly appeal to Your Excellency that it may be accepted."

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, it is somewhat difficult to deal with this resolution on the speech which the Hon'ble Member has just delivered, because he has told us very little of the practical means which he would like us to adopt. He has enunciated some laudable sentiments about the conditions which should govern the relations between District Officers and the people, and with them I have no quarrel. But, after all, the resolution proposes definite action towards the appointment of a committee, and I should certainly like to have heard more what changes he wants, what precisely their character is to be, and what advantages exactly he thinks he would secure by adopting them. The resolution, as it stands, desires that an enquiry should devise means for causing the district administration of the future to be more in touch with the public opinion of the district. That is a very praiseworthy object, and it is an object which it is certainly the desire of Government to see fulfilled. We want to ensure that the actions of Government are based upon accurate information of the facts and conditions existing in the districts, and of the opinions of all those who are likely to be affected by whatever is done. I have advisedly said all those, because the vast majority of the people who are affected by Government action in this country are not ordinarily those whose views find most prominence through the ordinary channels. But I do not agree with the Hon'ble Member when he talks about the administration of the present day as being an absolutely detached administration—with the officials on one side and the people on the other. For one thing it is practically impossible to put a man in charge of the executive work of a district which touches so closely the lives of the people, and for him to be able to discharge his duties (even if he wished to do so) in a state of absolute detachment. We know too that this is not the case. The Collector and his officers probably tour throughout the district more than any other individual can possibly do, coming constantly into contact with the people with whose various cases, criminal, revenue or administrative, they have to deal.

However, turning to the achievement of this laudable object, I think the essential point is how further are we going to attain it, or rather how can we improve upon the existing state of affairs. The only hint which the Hon'ble Mover has given is the old idea of advisory committees for Collectors. He has not even told us on what lines he would like to see them constituted. Apparently, he would leave all that to the committee of enquiry. But the idea of advisory committee for District Officers is not a new one. As the Hon'ble Member himself mentioned, it was prominently brought to the notice of the Decentralization Commission, a body of which I happened to be the Secretary; and I therefore heard an enormous amount of evidence on this point throughout the length and breadth of India, not only from the standpoint of Bengal but from that of other provinces. The Hon'ble Member has rather hinted that the Decentralisation Commission favoured the idea of such advisory committees. The facts are, however, that (the late Mr. R. C. Dutt dissenting) the Commission arrived at the following conclusion :—

'We also agree with those witnesses who spoke against a separate advisory council for the Collector. We consider that the District Boards.

which include leading officials of the district as well as representative non-officials, afford a convenient instrument for furnishing advice to the Collector upon matters which, although not included in their administrative sphere, affect the district generally, or important portions of its area or people. We understand that some Collectors do already make use of their district boards in this way; but we should like this practice extended. Consultation with the district board should not, of course, in any way preclude or diminish the Collector's private consultation with influential non-officials. Given these conditions, we see no object in calling a separate advisory council into existence; while we regard it as impossible, in present circumstances, that the Collector should share his executive responsibilities with such a body.'

That was the finding of a fairly powerful body which made a widespread enquiry into the matter, and of whom, I may say, two members started by being rather predisposed to the idea of advisory committees, but were subsequently convinced of their impracticability. But not only is that a previous authoritative finding on the point, but the whole matter was discussed in a debate in the Imperial Legislative Council in this very Chamber on the 26th February, 1912, when the late Mr. Gokhale put the case for such committees with considerable force, and the Hon'ble Sir Reginald Craddock, who was then Home Member, answered him in a very able and convincing manner, demonstrating the difficulties in the way. That debate really summed up most of the arguments that are relevant. So, we have already these two findings, and I do not think the Council will be well advised, on the vague considerations which the Hon'ble Member has put before us, in again pulling this rather aged horse out of the stable and giving it another run round the course. The Hon'ble Member has in no sense referred to the various considerations that underlie the idea of advisory committees. At the very threshold, one is confronted with the question—is the committee to be advisory or executive? And when we come to analyse the views of those who favour the idea, it will generally be found that although they talk of an advisory body, they really mean an executive body. If these people are merely to be advisory, they will after a short space of time naturally say: 'What is the use of our coming here if our views carry no weight?' And as far as talking with them goes, it is perfectly open to the Collector, as matters are at present, to discuss affairs with them. Therefore, the idea of a somewhat executive body is foreshadowed, usually in the form that if the Collector cannot carry his advisory committee with him, then he must refer the points of difference to Government for orders. But even underlying such an idea there are various practical difficulties, to say nothing of the enormous delay in the disposal of business and the additional work that would be thrown on the Collector in case of disagreement between him and his council. What would be the position if they are constantly overridden by the Collector, and if the Government agreed with the Collector, as Government would in most cases be likely to do? Clearly, there would be continual cause for friction. But if the idea is to assume the practical form of an executive council for the executive work of the district, I submit there are grave objections. Then again, what sort of committee does the Hon'ble Member advocate? After all, in the debate to which I have already referred, the late Mr. Gokhale at least told the Council what he had in his mind. That was a Council of from 9 to 6 elected and 3 nominated members; and as regards the elected, he said that he would like to see the majority elected by district boards. But election by the district board would be entirely inconsistent with our present ideas regarding primary and secondary electorates, and it would be putting a body chosen for entirely different purposes to deal with business which was no particular concern of the district board. If this is inexpedient, are we to have another election by the direct franchises that are contemplated under the Reforms Scheme, and, if so, what sort of men are likely to be chosen? If they are men from headquarters they will not be acquainted with the outlying portions of the district: if they are men from the interior of the district, it will be extraordinarily difficult for them to attend frequent meetings at headquarters. So there are very great practical difficulties whichever way the matter be regarded. Merely to say 'let us give the Collector an advisory committee,' and to support it by excellent arguments about the desirability of co-operation between officials and people, does not really carry us much further.

Let us consider for one moment what exactly is the kind of duties which devolve upon the Collector. There is first of all the main category of consultative work on legislative measures or important administrative acts or changes, on which Government consults the District Officer as to his views, almost invariably with the direction that he, in his turn, should consult the leading men of the district, which he almost invariably does. It cannot be said that in such matters public opinion, whether it be of the district or the province as a whole, is not ascertained. It may be that the ultimate decision of Government is not always in accordance with the views of a certain section of public opinion, but if Hon'ble Members will look at the sort of papers that came before the Select Committee the report of which I presented this morning, they will find that 80 or 90 papers are there enumerated going down even to the opinions of humble individuals. If the Collector consults the leading men of his district, and district boards and municipalities, at any rate their views are on record, and apart from consultation of that kind, we have the important channels of the press and platform and the Legislative Council itself, where the power of asking questions and bringing resolutions will be still further enhanced in the near future under the Reforms Scheme. So, in all this class of District Officer's work, I submit, public opinion makes itself already amply heard. Apart from that we come to what is the primary duty of the District Officer, i.e., his executive work, and by executive work I mean the application of laws, rules and orders to actual facts and conditions. It is not the laying down of policies, in connection with which the utility of a council may very well be argued; that is done for the most part at headquarters and in this Legislative Council; but the executive work proper, as carried out in the districts, is the application of accepted policies to local facts. I may add, incidentally, that not even in the local Government is the bulk of the executive work done in committee. It is only the most important matters that come before the local Government in Executive Council. It is probably known to Hon'ble Members as a matter of historical fact that in the old days of the Government of India all executive details used to be brought before the Government sitting as a body: but the system absolutely broke down with the development of administration, and I think it was abandoned about Lord Lawrence's time.

Taking then the executive work to which I have referred, what is the kind of executive work in which the public opinion of the district is most interested? It is surely the executive work which comes before existing local bodies, such as the making of bridges, repairs of roads, improvement of communications generally, deepening of water-ways, planting of trees, opening of hospitals and schools, etc. All these are matters which are already largely in the hands of local bodies. In all such executive work the District Officer has in some cases the assistance of the district board, while in other cases he stands entirely aloof, these being entrusted to municipalities of which he is not even a member. With the steady improvement effected by the adoption of our policy of appointing non-official chairmen of district and local boards (in municipalities chairmen, as it is, are mostly non-official), these matters will more and more pass into the hands of the people themselves, and an additional advisory committee would be entirely out of place in connection with them: and if we had an advisory committee of 9 members, mainly elected by the district board, as advocated by the late Mr. Gokhale, surely the position would become rather absurd.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

Apart from this, and turning to the other executive duties which the District Magistrate has to perform, I may briefly run through a few of the major heads. The first is Magisterial work which cannot obviously be done by an advisory committee, and over which control is exercised through definite channels of appeal and revision. Next, there is the control of police. The actual administration of the district police tends to pass more and more into the hands of the Superintendent of Police, as far as matters of departmental detail are concerned, and I can conceive of nothing more disastrous than in such matters references had to be made to a committee before action could be taken. In regard to jails, we know already that the District Magistrate is assisted by public opinion represented by jail visitors.

On the Revenue side, in a province like Bengal where estates are permanently settled, the actual settlement of land revenue, a point on which the late Mr. Gokhale laid great stress, is of comparatively minor importance, and where it arises in temporarily settled areas it is essentially a matter for detailed enquiry by expert officers in the villages themselves. Apart from that, with our permanently settled revenue, what are the Collector's duties? The Collector has to manage the actual collection of revenue, the conduct of revenue sales, the maintenance of the tauzi ledgers and the land-registration registers, so that the names of the landholders are accurately entered, and matters of that description. I see no place for an advisory committee in all these, while the cadastral survey is based on local enquiry in the villages dealt with, and the public opinion which the Hon'ble Member wishes to be heard is that of the villagers who gather round the assistant settlement officer and represent their cases under the village tree.

Taking other branches of a Collector's work such as excise, the Hon'ble Member has himself admitted that we already have advisory committees which are consulted. Local option as regards the location of liquor shops, for instance, is the option of the locality concerned not of a central district committee. As regards Income-tax, I can scarcely believe the Hon'ble Member would like this Council of 9 to advise as to assessments, but public opinion is heard locally by the assessors on whose reports the final assessments are largely based. Registration is a matter of applying rules and orders to an existing administrative system; while turning to things like co-operative credit, we again have public opinion represented in the local societies. In regard to agriculture we have again district boards who assist largely, and in connection with executive work as a whole, in the ordinary sense of the term, I submit that the place for an advisory committee is very small.

If, apart from the broad consultative functions of the Collector and the executive duties to which I have referred, it is argued that it will be nice to give the Collector some people to whom he can talk at regular intervals, I would prefer that we should continue the present system by which he is accessible to all men, talking freely with them and telling them what he has got to say, and hearing what they have got to say, not only at the district headquarters but throughout the district in the course of his periodical tours. That is the real way in which, I submit, the efficiency of district administration can best be maintained, and it is the wish of Government that the Collector should continue this practice in an extended degree.

So much on the merits of the resolution. As to the inopportuneness of this enquiry at the present time there can be little question. To take a minor objection, we are strained in all directions for men at the moment, and even when we get men back from the war, we shall be drained of others going on leave which has in many cases been long delayed, and we shall not be able to spare officers to enquire into this ancient topic. Secondly, is it an opportune moment to seek to effect this very considerable change in the present system of district administration when we have under discussion much wider scheme of reform in the higher branches of Government, the precise details of which are yet to be known and to be applied? Whatever may be the outcome of the Reforms Proposals, they obviously will effect large changes in the present system of our administration. Surely, it is wise to see the effect of these reforms before attempting to make, even within a smaller sphere, an equally revolutionary departure in so far as the present lines of district administration are concerned.

For these reasons, Sir, I would deprecate the adoption of this resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI said :—

"My Lord, I regret that I have been misunderstood. It is not my intention that the executive work should be supervised by local committee. My object is simply to ensure that the District Officers should be in touch with the real leaders of the district, and that they should consult them now and then on matters affecting the interest of the people themselves. I have been told that district boards serve the purpose to a great extent. I think I have some knowledge of the working of district boards as I was for some time on the board in my district, for some time as a member and for some time as vice-chairman, and I know that only those people who have influence with the voters are returned to the district board. The real persons who can advise or render real assistance in the administration of the district are not returned."

I am told that District Officers do their best to ascertain the opinion of the public, by issuing letters and by inviting opinions on important questions. Of course, in some cases it is done, but in the majority of cases the information is not derived from actual contact with the leaders of the people. Whatever information is derived, is derived in official touch, practically from the police department, and from the people who come to meet the District Officer on business, but there is really very little opportunity of getting information from the public. As for instance the co-operative movement; and how that movement should be spread. There are also matters of excise policy; local committees are only now being consulted. Some committees have been formed in the districts to advise the excise department regarding the location of shops and also in other respects. As in this department, so in other departments, not really executive in their nature, but which affect the interests of the community, much can be done with the co-operation of the people. With that object in view I brought forward this resolution, but as I see there is opposition I do not like to press it, and pray that I may be allowed to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee consisting of officials and non-officials, be appointed to examine the working of the current land laws of Bengal, with instructions to submit their recommendations to the Government with regard to such changes in them as they sider would be beneficial to the various landed interests in Bengal, without unduly encroaching upon their existing rights and privileges.

said :—

“My Lord, personally, I would have very much liked to move this resolution and see it accepted by the Government because I sincerely believe that the present land laws of Bengal have entirely failed to effect a happy and harmonious solution of the difficulties between landlord and tenant, but, my Lord, I am advised by some of my friends to wait for some time more, and I cannot listen to their advice, and though it is against my will, I beg permission of Your Excellency to withdraw the resolution.”

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that provision be made in the next year's Budget for the delivery of religious lectures, at regular intervals, in the prisons of Bengal.

He said :—

“My Lord, this resolution does not require any lengthy speech in its support. It is now a recognised principle all over the world that the jails should be a place of correction and reclamation, and with this end in view, great care is being taken, in all civilised countries, for the moral advancement of the inmates of the prisons. In the great prisons of Sing Sing and Auburn in America and Dartmoor and Chatham in England, much has been done in this direction. Religious services and lectures are regularly held there, and ministers and chaplains have been employed who do their level best to reclaim the prisoners. Throughout his term of imprisonment, the prisoner has the benefit of religious and moral instructions, and whatever his colour or creed, his spiritual welfare is watched over by competent men specially selected for the purpose. From the records kept there, it has been proved beyond doubt that most of the convicts come out of the jails as better men. My Lord, in connection with this resolution while going through some books of reference I was struck with the noble and great achievements of philanthropic workers like Howard and Mrs. Fry and great administrators like Sir George Grey and Sir Riggles Brise. In India we have not yet got a Howard or a Mrs. Fry to take up the cause of the unfortunate prisoners, still, my Lord, in comparison with prisons in other countries, the system followed in our jails here is much superior in many respects. This is no doubt a matter of congratulation to our authorities, but one thing which invariably strikes one going through the Indian Prison Reports, is that very little, if any, attention is paid to the moral and spiritual side of an Indian prisoner's life. Two chaplains no doubt are employed at the Alipore Jail for Christians, but no other step has been taken anywhere else, in respect of prisoners professing other faiths. This is really deplorable. Indians are a God-fearing and religious people, and I daresay much could be achieved if due regard is paid to the reclamation of Indian prisoners by means of religious lectures and moral instructions. I do not know what stands in the way of making a start in this direction. If it is a question of money, I do not at all propose that the Government should undertake any huge expenditure on this account immediately, what I want is that the Government should recognise the principle of employing religious preachers for the spiritual and moral benefit of Indian prisoners. We might make a beginning with the Presidency and Central Jails. There are four Central and one Presidency Jail and the number of prisoners in them is about 7,000. They are mostly either Hindus or Muhammadans, and so, for the present one Hindu and one Muhammadan preacher might be engaged for each of the above. Suitable men could be found on Rs. 75 to Rs. 100 per month. Thus ten preachers would cost the Government about ten to twelve thousand rupees a year. But considering the good that will be done, I hope that the Government will be pleased to find this sum. Before I conclude I express my sincerest appreciation of the action taken by the Muhammadan community in this matter. An honorary Muhammadan preacher has kindly undertaken to give religious lectures in the Alipore Jail. This is certainly a move in the right direction and an example which should be followed by the Hindus too. I am also indebted for the idea of this resolution to another gentleman of the same community, I mean the Hon'ble Dr. Suhrawardy who referred to this subject in his last Budget speech and put some interesting questions on it. I hope the Government will accept my resolution."

The Hon'ble MR. KERR said :—

"My Lord, the fundamental difficulty of this question lies in the fact that it raises the whole problem of Government's attitude towards religion in this country, the problem which is known elsewhere as the problem of Church and State. That problem is difficult enough in most countries. In India it is beset with such peculiar difficulties that at any rate for some centuries past the Government has thought it best to leave it alone. It will be generally admitted that it would be a bad policy for Government to provide religious instruction for the public in general in this country. For obvious reasons, it would be bad policy for the present Government. I might go further and say that it would be bad policy for any conceivable Government that is likely to be set up in our time. As many members of this Council are aware, even the subsidiary problem of giving moral instruction apart from religious instruction to schoolboys in schools, is beset with grave difficulties and has given rise to very wide differences of opinion. Even if it be argued that Government has responsibilities towards prisoners in jails similar to those which it has towards schoolboys in schools, I would remind the Council that the school problem is by no means solved, and the jail problem has difficulties of its own, different in kind perhaps, but not less in degree.

The proposal contained in the resolution is that provision should be made in the Budget for the delivery of religious lectures at regular intervals in the prisons of Bengal. It is contemplated, therefore, that the preachers or lecturers should be paid. Now this is a proposal which, owing to the diversity of religious creeds in this country, might entail very large financial obligations. These might be faced, if the results were sure to be satisfactory, but is there any guarantee that this would be the case? In the first place, where are we to get the preachers from? Among the Muhammadans there are, of course, devout men whose work in life is the definite preaching and teaching of the Islamic religion, and the same remark applies to the Christian religion. But I think I am right in saying that in the ordinary rural Hindu society from which the bulk of the prisoners in jails come, there is no systematic provision or organisation for religious instruction or education in the homes of the people. That being so, what sort of men could we expect to get to undertake religious instruction in jails? The multiplicity of creeds and the diversity of religious usages which are to be found among the prisoners in jails as among the outside population would make it very difficult to find an instructor who would be acceptable to any considerable number of prisoners. A further objection to paying men for work of this kind is that

Kumar S. S. Ray.

There would be a serious danger that the profession of jail preacher would be taken up by men who were attracted by the salary and not by pure devotion or by any religious fervour. Such men would do more harm than good. That this is not an imaginary danger is shown by experience in England a century or rather more ago. The works of contemporary novelists depict the jail preachers as the most despicable and disreputable among their characters.

These being the general difficulties surrounding the case, it is not surprising that the Government of Bengal have found it necessary to adopt a cautious attitude in regard to proposals of this kind which have come upon recent years. They have come chiefly from Muhammadans among whom, for the reasons already explained, the conditions and prospects are most favourable. The position which has been taken up by Government is that it welcomes any practicable measure which is likely to lead to the reformation of prisoners in jails and is ready to give every reasonable facility to responsible persons who are willing to undertake religious or moral teaching in jails, but it is necessary if only as a guarantee of good faith that such work should be honorary or met by private persons and Government would not be justified in defraying the expense at the cost of the State or in instituting a State-aid staff of preachers. Some advance has been made on these lines. In 1915, a celebrated itinerant Muhammadan preacher was given general authority to preach to Muhammadan prisoners in the jails of Bengal, subject to arrangements approved by the Inspector-General of Prisons. The Inspector-General has also been authorised to give facilities to other responsible persons to provide religious and moral instruction for prisoners in jails, and it is understood that a Muhammadan preacher preaches regularly to Muhammadan prisoners at the Alipore Central Jail on festival days. A few Hindu gentlemen are giving valuable assistance in the way of giving moral lectures and instruction to the boys in the Juvenile Jail. The Inspector-General would welcome further voluntary help of this kind in all classes of jails.

There is a further reason for not making any new departure in this matter at the present time. As the Council are aware the Government of India have announced that after the war a Commission is to be appointed to examine the whole question of jail administration in India. One of the main duties of this Commission will be to examine the application to Indian conditions of those reformatory aspects of prison administration which have made a considerable advance in western countries in recent years. One of the questions which the Commission will no doubt take up will be this question of moral or religious teaching in jails. They will be able to formulate a consistent line of policy for the country as a whole, and it may be that their wider experience and the wider information which will be at their disposal will enable them to show us a way of surmounting some of the difficulties which I have mentioned. Pending the result of the Commission's enquiries it would be dangerous to allow ourselves to be led astray by the analogies mentioned by the Hon'ble Member.

That then, my Lord, is the present position. For the reasons I have stated Government do not think it wise to institute a new departure in this matter at the present time. They will welcome any suitable efforts on the part of private persons for the moral and religious improvement of prisoners in jails, but Government are not prepared at present to accept such work as a legitimate charge on State funds. For these reasons, Government are unable to accept the resolution."

The Hon'ble KUMAR SHIB SHEKHARESWAR RAY said :—

"My Lord, I am grateful for the sympathetic assurances of the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, but I am afraid I cannot see eye to eye with him in all that he has said. I do not think that the Government can be said to be interfering with the different religious faiths in India if it engages, with the consent of the people, a few instructors in jails, who would watch over the moral side of a prisoner's life. Government makes contributions to tols and mukhtabs and acquires lands for burning ghats and burial grounds; nobody takes any objection to that. So I do not think there would be any objection by the people if the Government engaged a few religious instructors in jails. Nor do I think that there will be any dearth of suitable men. I should therefore think that my resolution should be accepted by the Council."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; Mr. Cumming.

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government do take steps to minimise the suffering of the agriculturists in the villages within the jurisdiction of thanas Amta and Uluberia, etc., in the district of Howrah, and to give effect to the Amta drainage project recommended by Colonel Haig in 1873 by providing sufficient money in the Budget for the year 1919-20.

He said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to speak at any length on the merits of this resolution. This subject was a matter of consideration in this Council on the 19th December 1917, and the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming then informed the Council that a scheme as modified was ready; the solution of that question was also arrived at by him. Now it is a matter for consideration whether some money ought to be provided in the budget or not. This, I submit, is the object of my resolution, and I do hope and trust that my resolution will be accepted."

The Hon'ble MR. CUMMING said :—

"Your Excellency, this resolution is to the effect that money should be spent out of next year's budget on this particular project. This is really a budget resolution; and the Hon'ble Member has adopted the somewhat doubtful expedient of bringing before the Council a budget resolution in the form of a resolution on a matter of general public interest. He has thereby avoided the necessity of showing how the expenditure is to be met. As he has stated, the matter was discussed in December 1917 in this Council when it was explained that plans had been prepared and that the scheme was awaiting the allotment of funds. May I shortly recapitulate the position? He has referred to the general project drawn up by Colonel Haig in 1873. That scheme comprised three projects, of which one was finished in 1884, another in 1890 and the third is the present scheme. It was also stated at that meeting of the Council that the main obstacle to the completion of this scheme was the want of agreement amongst the zamindars. At first Government endeavoured to execute the project under the Drainage Act; Government next turned to the Embankment Act; finally as no further progress was apparent under that Act, in November last, the District Board was addressed as to whether they were prepared to carry the project through under the Sanitary Drainage Act. In December last, about a month ago, the District Board of Howrah said that they were prepared to do so, but asked that Government should help them by giving the grant of a loan. In the budget for the ensuing year Government have already included one lakh as a loan to the District Board, and another lakh which they are prepared to make as a Government contribution, and in the present month of January, Government have already appointed an engineer to perform the work. I therefore think, Sir, that the Hon'ble Member will realise that the proposal in his resolution has been anticipated by Government ; if all goes well, a beginning ought to be made in the ensuing year, and in the subsequent year the scheme may be completed. I therefore ask him to reconsider the desirability of pressing his resolution."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I am grateful to the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming for the observations that he has made. That my resolution was anticipated by Government is a matter of gratitude to me. My object in bringing this resolution to the notice of the Government was simply that the work may be facilitated."

The PRESIDENT said :—

"Does the Hon'ble Member wish to withdraw his resolution ?"

The Hon'ble Member having expressed his desire, the resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 15.

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a commission be appointed to record—

- (a) the opinions of all orthodox Hindus (excepting those in Government employment and those under obligation to the managers of mills, factories and workshops) whose religious feelings are being wounded on account of the pollution of their sacred river—the Bhagirathi; and
- (b) the evidence of those Indians whose health has been affected by the use of contaminated water from the same river.

He said :—

"My Lord, the Bhagirathi is regarded by the Hindus as a sacred river and she is worshipped as a goddess on the Dasahara day, which is specially set apart annually on the tenth day of the bright half of the Hindu month of Jaishthā corresponding to the latter part of May or the earlier part of June. For fuller information of the European Members of Your Excellency's Council, as to the sanctity of this river and the reverence in which the Bhagirathi is held by all sections of the Hindu community of India, I would refer them to study the District Gazetteers of Howrah, Hooghly, Burdwan, Murshidabad, Nadia and the 24-Parganas published by the Government of Bengal and the valuable works of researches made by the learned scholars of India, Great Britain and other countries of Europe, Asia and America, specially the well-known series entitled 'Sacred Books of the East' edited by Professor Max Müller. The Hindu festival, called the Dasahara, is observed by the Hindus in honour of the goddess Ganga or Bhagirathi, and this day is declared as a public holiday by the Government of Bengal and also by the mercantile community including the Bank authorities under the Negotiable Instruments Act.

I do not wish to take up much time of the Council, and feel inclined now to discuss the matter why and how the religious feelings of the Hindus are being wounded by the pollution of the sacred water of the Bhagirathi by a very large number of mills, excepting two, from which millions of gallons of septic tank effluents are discharged daily into the sacred Bhagirathi. It will take several days to discuss the matter at length, if I quote passages from our various Sacred Books, viz., the Vedas, the Institutes of Manu, Vishnu and others, the Purans, the Ramayan, the Mahabharat and a large number of other Sāstras.

The public and the press including the Amrita Bazar Patrika and the Bengalee and prominent vernacular weeklies, viz., the Basumati, the Hitabadi and the Bangabasi, and the vernacular dailies, viz., the Nayak and the Bangalee have been strongly objecting to the pernicious practice of discharging the effluents of the septic tank latrines into the sacred Bhagirathi. The last two named papers, viz., the Nayak and the Bangalee have published two leading articles under the head of 'Ganges Water' in their town issues of the 19th September and 26th September 1918, respectively, and I strongly commend these two articles for the kind perusal by the responsible members of Your Excellency's Government. The Nayak even goes so far as to say under bold heading types in columns 1st and 2nd of page 3 in its town issue of the 19th September referred to above, that by drinking Ganges water near Calcutta, people are made to eat the liquified excreta of the coolies of the mills. My Lord, the religious feelings of the Hindus are being as a matter of fact wounded by the discharge of the effluents of the septic tanks into the sacred Bhagirathi, and there is a growing uneasiness and discontent among all sections of the Hindu community. I learn from the District Gazetteer of Howrah (page 4, paragraph 2), edited by my esteemed friend the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, that the river Bhagirathi 'is also held sacred among Buddhists and we find that Warren Hastings gave the Tāshi Lāmā of Tibet some land at Ghosery in answer to his request that he might have "some lands on the banks of the Ganges to which he might send his people to pray." The monastery erected on this land may still be seen at Bhot-bāgān.'

I quote the following lines from the Proclamation by Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen in Council to the Princes, Chiefs and people of India in 1858 : ' We do strictly charge and enjoin all those who may be in authority under us that they abstain from all interference with the religious belief or worship of any of our subjects on pain of our highest displeasure and we will that generally, in framing and administering the law, due regard be paid to the ancient rights, usages, and customs of India.'

The following lines from the Imperial message to Princes and peoples of India read by His Excellency the Viceroy in Durbar at Jodhpur on the 2nd November 1908, ' If errors have occurred, the agents of my Government have spared no pains and no self-sacrifice to correct them ; if abuses have been proved, vigorous hands have laboured to apply a remedy.

' The law itself has been administered without disrespect to creed or caste, or to usages and ideas rooted in your civilisations ; it has been simplified in form, and its machinery adjusted to the requirements of ancient communities slowly entering a new world.

' Important classes among you, representing ideas that have been fostered and encouraged by British rule, claim equality in citizenship, and greater share in legislation and Government. The politic satisfaction of such a claim will strengthen, not impair, existing authority and power. Administration will be all the more efficient if the officers who conduct it have greater opportunities of regular contact with those whom it affects.

' May Divine protection and favour strengthen the wisdom and mutual good-will that are needed for the achievement of a task as glorious as was ever committed to rulers and subjects in any State or Empire of recorded time.'

(Vide Appendices A and B, pages 244 to 246 of the Oxford Student's History of India by Vincent A. Smith, M.A., I.C.S., retired, 4th edition, Oxford, 1913.)

Will Your Excellency's Government kindly explain to the Hindu communities why their religious feelings are being persistently wounded and their religious beliefs disrespected? It is not a wise and prudent policy on the part of the Government to state that 'Government are not responsible for remedying defects in private installations.' Why does the Sanitary Commissioner, on behalf of Government, grant sanction to the construction of septic tank latrines? Why have the Bengal Factories Rules, 1912, been framed in open defiance of Royal Proclamations referred to above?

The religious aspects of the question of allowing the managers of the jute mills to discharge the effluents of the septic tank latrines into the sacred Bhagirathi was not fully discussed by the committee appointed by the Government of Bengal in April 1904. The views expressed by Babu Jogesh Chandra Sastri were not strictly in accordance with the sacred injunctions of the Hindu Sāstras and his statements were not verified by the learned Mahamahopadhyas Pundits of Bengal and other parts of India. On the contrary the valuable opinions of the learned Pundits, which were based upon the correct interpretations of the Hindu Sāstras, were utterly ignored by the said committee and the Government has been misled in this connection. According to the instructions contained in the sacred Koran of the Mussalmans, the water of the river, lakes, etc., should not be contaminated. What would be the feelings of the pious Christian ladies and gentlemen, if the sacred water of the Jordan is polluted by millions of gallons of effluents from the septic tank latrines? Here I must not forget to offer our heartfelt gratitude on behalf of the Hindu communities of India to Messrs. Angus Jute Company, a leading American firm in Calcutta, and Messrs. Kettlewell Bullen and Company, a prominent British firm in Calcutta, for not discharging the effluents of the septic tanks into the sacred Bhagirathi. The actions of these two Companies are just in obedience to the pious wish expressed by our beloved King-Emperor on the eve of Their Majesties' departure from Calcutta on the 8th January 1912, in the following memorable words in reply to Farewell Address by the members of the Bengal Legislative Council on behalf of the people of Bengal :—

'In bidding you farewell, the Queen-Empress and I fervently pray that all my subjects in Bengal, of whatever race or creed, united by the ties of sympathy and brotherly love, may, under Divine guidance, ever strive towards the advancement of their common happiness, contentment and general well-being.'

The Hon'ble Sir John Woodroffe, Kt., M.A., B.C.L., of the High Court Calcutta, in his address at the Sun Rise Club said : 'Religion of power is the most vital necessity in India's struggle for self-realisation.' In his note in reply to a question issued by the University Commission of 1917-18, the Hon'ble Justice Woodroffe remarked :—'It is not necessary to enquire into the questions of the respective superiority of the civilisation of East and West. It is sufficient to hold that Indian civilisation is the best for the people whose forefathers have evolved it. Let us stop all attempts, direct or indirect, whether political or religious, to impose our beliefs and practices on a people to whom they are foreign.'

Revival of Hinduism will not hamper the growth of the commercial prosperity of Bengal or India.

Babu S. N. Mukharji.

Samples of unfiltered water from the Bhagirathi were taken and were chemically and bacteriologically examined in the laboratory of the Sanitary Commissioner, Bengal. As a result of his examinations, he found the water of the Bhagirathi in a dangerously contaminated condition and advised the people not to use it for drinking purposes and cleansing dishes, etc. In reply to my starred question No. 1 asked at the Council meeting held on the 26th November last, I understand there is no adequate provision for the supply of filtered water to very large number of people living within the jurisdiction of municipalities near the side of the Bhagirathi. My Lord, the people are therefore compelled to use the contaminated water of the Bhagirathi and they are suffering from attacks of various water-borne diseases. The health has been affected. It is therefore urgently necessary in the interest of public health that some effective steps should be taken by Government for the prevention of the pollution of the water of the said river.

With these words I commend this resolution to Your Excellency's Council, and I hope and trust that it will be accepted by Your Excellency's Government and the standing grievance of the Hindu community will be at an end in the near future."

The Hon'ble BABU SIV NARAYAN MUKHARJI said:—

"My Lord, at the September meeting of this Council I took it upon myself to support a motion brought forward by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, dealing with the pollution of the waters of the Ganges by means of the effluents from the several mills situate on its banks. Although at that time the Hon'ble mover of the resolution dealt principally with the sanitary aspect of the question, Hindu as I am, I could not resist the temptation of giving it my whole-hearted support by looking at the matter from a religious view-point—by, in fact, investing the academic character of the controversy with the authority of old-world beliefs sanctified by time and handed down by tradition. The Hon'ble mover, though schooled in the art of making the worse appear the better cause, did not succeed in pressing home his charge, and the blow aimed at a system acknowledged on all hands as the veritable cause of the pollution of the river was so ingeniously parried as to strike the dealer himself by a curious process of rebound. The armour forged with the aid of official steel having thus successfully withstood the charge the Hon'ble mover has changed his tactics and has taken up his cogn of vantage, inviolable because sacrosanct, behind the ramparts of conventional religion. Representing as I do, if not the blindly orthodox, at least the advanced, sections of the Hindu community, it is not without some diffidence that I venture to embark on the stormy sea of controversy and join issue on a point which is synchronous with the dawn of civilization and, for that matter, bears on it the impress of man's primæval gropings after the supernatural.

My Lord, I am afraid I shall be tiring the patience of this Council if I were to quote chapter and verse from recognised authorities to show that worship, which is another name for the outburst of the feeling of adoration, owed its origin first to a feeling of wonder and then to a sense of gratefulness. We find in the hymns of the Rig Veda :

'Accept, O Ganga, Yamuna, Saraswati, etc., my praise'.

Not content simply with singing hymns to these rivers our Aryan ancestors bestowed on each of them the epithet of mother.

Writes Max Müller :

'The rivers are called mothers ! Why not ? Do they not feed the meadows and the cattle on them ? Does not our very life depend on the rivers not failing us with their water at the proper season ?'

Babu S. N. Mukharji.

That at the back of what is wrongly termed fetishism there was, ever since the birth of intelligence, something higher, nobler and subtler, the recognition of which amounted to the genesis of the first crude theory of Pantheism—a theory which afterwards reached its culmination in the Vedanta philosophy—is more than borne out by the testimony of Christian Missionaries before whom a present-day Sonthal, when interrogated, declared that the Chando (Sun) who had created the world was not the visible Chando he saw but the invisible one behind it. This was the case with the primitive races all the world over, the Egyptians, the Greeks, the Romans and the rest. The ancients, according to Prodicus, considered sun, moon, rivers and springs, and, in general, all that are useful to us, as gods, as the Egyptians the Nile. Bread was worshipped as Demeter, wine as Dionysos, water as Poseidon, fire as Hephaestus. Herodotus in speaking of the Persians says that they sacrificed to the sun, the moon, the earth, fire, water, etc. 'We contemplate with awe', writes Seneca, in one of his letters, 'the heads and sources of the greater rivers. We erect altars to a rivulet which suddenly and vigorously breaks forth from the dark. We worship the springs of hot water, and certain lakes are sacred to us on account of their darkness and unfathomable depth.' This, therefore, is a common trait in the infancy of nations—a trait which, because it is present at one time or other in the life of nations, does not detract from the position they may afterwards hold in the scale of nations. But, for a people remarkable for subtlety of intellect, depth of penetration into the mysteries of life and death, and metaphysical comprehension in general, to have continued to hold views upon which their ancestors, in the far-away past had built their faith may savour of contradiction in terms. 'But,' says Schopenhauer, 'religion is truth allegorically and mythically expressed, and thereby made possible and digestible to mankind at large. For mankind could by no means digest it pure and unadulterated, just as we cannot live in pure oxygen, but require an addition of $\frac{1}{4}$ ths of nitrogen.' 'If we want to know,' writes Max Müller, 'what the ancients thought when they spoke of a river the answer is they thought of it exactly what they called it, and they called it, as we know, in different ways, either the runner (sarīt) or the noisy (nadī).' This identification of the dynamical life of the universe with God was part of their theory of the Cosmos, part of their philosophical system. 'Ekam sat vipra bahudā vadanti'—'there is but one, though the poets call it by many names.'

I have already gone too far afield, and have called to my aid the authority of antiquarians, oriental scholars, and philosophers to prove that our Aryan ancestors paid homage to the Ganges. We find in the Greek historians, Strabo and the rest, mention of the Ganges as the river that was worshipped by the Hindus. In place of their one self-abnegating stoic of a Diogenes, they found thousands of Gymnosophists capable of seeing through the veil of mysticism, and finding out that it was not stones and trees, as Macaulay mistakenly declared, but the noumenon behind the phenomenon to which the Hindus bent their knee and paid religious homage. Lest I should raise a smile in the Hon'ble Members by my advocacy of the cause of what goes by the name of superstition I would take the liberty to quote a well-known passage in proof of the cultural heights attained by our ancestors:

• 'Faults this nation may have, but God forbid we should pass judgment upon people who framed their laws and institutions prior to our insect origin of yesterday. With all the faults of their nature, and errors of their institutions, their institutions, which act so powerfully on their natures, have two material characteristics which entitle them to respect; first great force and stability; and next, excellent moral and civil effects.'

What evokes our admiration and excites our wonder is that while experimental science was not yet even dreamt of the Ganges should of all rivers have been awarded its meed of praise as the 'most potent purifier in the world.' This supreme quality of the river it was that procured for it the place of honour in the estimation of the far-sighted rishis of old. A well-known American traveller has recorded his experience about the germ-killing properties of the Ganges :—

'Mr. Hankin, the scientist in the employ of the Government at Agra, concluded to examine the water. He went to Benares to make his tests. He got water at the mouths of the sewers where they empty into the river at the bathing ghats; a cubic centimetre of it contained millions of cholera germs; at the end of six hours they were all dead.'

This is one of the many instances of the Hindu sages of old having dived into the secrets of Nature unaided by the most powerful scientific instruments of observation. So great was the reputation of the ancient Hindu sages, not only for their powers of introspection, their visions beatific, but for their keen-eyed insight into the kernel of material objects—tangible, semi-tangible, and intangible—that their words had the weight of gospel truths. But, my Lord, this supreme attribute of the Ganges, so potent as a germ-killer under normal conditions, has begun to disappear under the enormous strain of millions of tons of septic tank effluents that find their way into it day out day in. We, who happen to live in the country, and are in daily touch with the masses, and know their feelings, are in a position to assure Your Excellency that if it were not for the fact that they are a long-suffering people, ready even to accept what they consider outrages on their religion as inevitable, the common people and the women-folk who are never tired but are often only too glad to travel miles on foot from the interior, in summer and in winter, to have a bath in the river, would have made bold, if it were possible, to come all the way to this city of palaces, and with folded hands implore Your Excellency to save their mother Ganges from desecration. In laying it down that nothing can pollute the waters of the Ganges the authors of the Hindu religious books did not contemplate the existence of septic tanks and all that they signify. They did, however, forecast that a time would come when the river would lose its sanctity. While, therefore, I know that in supporting the cause of the people and, for that matter, of their religious feelings, I shall be leading a forlorn hope, I feel all the more a call to give the motion of my hon'ble colleague my whole-hearted support, in the hope that having regard to the modest nature of the recommendation which this Council has been asked to make, our appeal will not fail to strike a sympathetic chord in the minds of the hon'ble members."

The Hon'ble RAI SRI NATH RAY BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I am unable to support the resolution moved by my hon'ble friend, as it deals with the question from the standpoint of Hindu orthodoxy. On the ground of principle religion should not be mixed up with civic questions as far as possible. The pollution of the waters of the Bhagirathi is an important sanitary question and should be looked at from that point of view alone. No advantage will be gained by importing in the discussion the aspect of religion. There is positive danger in the attempt in a mixed assembly like the Bengal Legislative Council. It has become a practice to appeal to the religious feelings of the people in matters from which religion may fairly be kept out. The cry of 'religion in danger' is nowadays heard in season and out of season, and that harmless permissive measure, I mean Mr. Patel's bill, which aims purely at widening the bounds of social freedom, is attacked from this point. In Benares, the holiest of the holy cities of the Hindus on the Ganges, a good deal of the pollution of the river water has been going on from a long time but no one ever objected to the same on the ground of religion, though from a purely sanitary point it should be stopped. Besides, in looking at the question from the religious standpoint, there is risk of the sanitary aspect being disregarded, for what is pollution in this sacred sense may not be insanitary at all and it is not possible now, if it ever was, to prevent this sort of pollution.

My hon'ble colleague wants to have the opinion of the orthodox Hindus on the subject, but orthodoxy has become a very cheap material nowadays. It is in the lips of many though it is seldom found lower down. No useful purpose will be served in encouraging a cant.

But I hope I shall not be misunderstood. I yield to none in my anxiety to protect the Bhagirathi from being insanitary. I would welcome any committee to investigate the point. There is positive danger to the purity of the river from the outflow of the septic tanks belonging to the jute mills. It is desirable that the Government should institute an enquiry into the matter as soon as possible."

The Hon'ble the MAHARAJADHIRAJA BAHADUR OF BURDWAN said :—

"Sir, this is the third resolution on the subject of the pollution of the Bhagirathi which the hon'ble mover has brought forward within the last four months. In September of last year he dealt with the question of the septic tank installations along the banks of the river. In reply, whilst Government could not accept the resolution, they agreed to amend the rules in such a way as to make it clear that the inspection of these installations was one of the prescribed and prime duties of the Inspector of Septic Tanks. Then in November we had the resolution moved by the same hon'ble gentleman about the pollution of the water by trade waste and refuse. Here again Government, whilst opposing the resolution, undertook to institute a full enquiry into the sources of pollution, the extent of pollution and the measures necessary to prevent and mitigate the evils.

The hon'ble mover has now broken new ground. His suggestion, which perhaps he considers to be a very humble one, is that a Commission should go about taking the evidence of persons living along the banks of the river asking them in the first place how they are and, secondly, whether they think that the river has been so polluted as to hurt their religious feelings. Before I express an opinion on the extraordinary request which this resolution conveys, I wish to point out that, in the first place, the enquiry which the Government undertook to institute in November last would cover this question to a certain extent so far as the finding out of the sources of pollution and the extent of it are concerned. For one of the specific points which such an enquiry will deal with would be the hygienic effects of the different kinds of contamination now going on.

Turning now to the question as to whether such a Commission, as proposed by the hon'ble mover, would serve any useful purpose or not, I must confess that it is strange to me that the futility of such a proposal did not strike the hon'ble mover. Is such a Commission to be composed of doctors? If not, who are to decide whether the health of the people concerned has been affected by the drinking of the water of the Hooghly, or by other causes? Then again is mere record of evidence to be the guiding principle? If so, what will such evidence be worth? For all that a large number of the people affected could say would be that they were ill at a certain time and that they thought that the water was bad. Surely such evidence would not be worth the paper it was written on; and it is hard to imagine a greater waste of time for a body of doctors than to be walking up and down the banks of the Bhagirathi from Calcutta to Lalgola recording evidence of such a kind from a vast heterogeneous population, especially when it is known to be a well established fact that a large number of these people suffer from many diseases which have nothing to do with the pollution of the river water.

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Now let me turn once again to the first part of the resolution. I cannot help thinking that the proposal instead of serving any useful purpose may in fact do more harm than good. Government are well aware of the general feelings of Hindus about the sanctity of the Bhagirathi, and I may say that the Government went into the religious point of view too some years ago and have already got the authorities of the Pundits who are versed in the Shastras and who are undoubtedly the best authorities on the subject. The Select Committee, which was appointed to enquire into the working of septic tank installations in 1904 examined several pundits, such as Jogesh Chandra Shastri, Satish Chandra Vidyabhushan, Kali Prasanna Bhattacharji, Mahamahopadhyaya Rajkrishna Tarkapanchanan and Rajani Kanta Vidhyaratna as well as other orthodox Hindu gentlemen. Two of these, I admit, were Government servants, and the hon'ble mover would therefore rule out any opinion they might have given, but the rest were not Government servants. Their evidence was published in a supplement to the Calcutta Gazette in January 1905, which any one who wishes may read it; any one who does will find that the pundits were not altogether agreed as to the possibility of pollution of the sacred water of the Bhagirathi. In view of these facts and in view of the well established fact that the sanctity of the Ganges is based more on spiritual grounds than mundane and which to an orthodox Hindu like the learned Rai Bahadur must also be apparent, it is most surprising to me that the hon'ble mover by bringing in this resolution proposes to deal with the sanctity of the Ganges in such an unorthodox manner.

Ever since creation sillage of every kind has flown into the river Ganges from its source at Hardwar down to its mouth in the Sunderbans and will continue to do so even if India were to make great strides in the near future in matters of hygiene and sanitation, for it is no easy thing—nay impracticable—to expect the hundreds and thousands of villagers living on the river banks and where there are no possibilities of septic tanks even to resist the temptation of going to the river for their ablutions after their morning operations on its banks or in the meadows near by; and I hope therefore that the hon'ble mover will not come forward perhaps with another of his happy suggestions that we should have a standing army of stalwart up-countrymen to prosecute these invaders on the holiness of the Ganges, for he must be well aware that if we were to do this we would require a second army to simultaneously prevent the men of the first army from going into the river for the very purpose for which they had been appointed to check. I would therefore strongly urge the Hon'ble Member not to base the sanctity of the Bhagirathi on such frivolous grounds, especially when pollutions of a much more dangerous character do take place where there are no septic tanks.

On behalf therefore of Government I am bound to oppose the resolution as being not only unnecessary but as one which is likely to rouse the religious susceptibilities of a large number of ignorant people which might possibly cause an unhealthy and mischievous agitation.

The whole question of septic tank installations has been threshed out. After the report of the 1904 Commission was received Government obtained the services of an expert Sanitary Engineer, Dr. Gilbert Fowler, who dealt with the question exhaustively in his report. As a result of this an Inspector of Septic Tanks was appointed, and Government approved the principal recommendations of Dr. Fowler as to the construction and maintenance of septic tank latrines, and issued instructions to secure their proper working. It was in fact decided that, subject to proper safeguards and due provision for the purification of the effluents, there was no objection to septic tank latrines. Rules under the Factories Act have also been issued, because it is recognised that special precautions are necessary where there is a large labour force gathered together. If you are not to have a septic tank system, what substitute can you have? Does the hon'ble mover propose that a body of quarter million persons should be allowed to indulge in open-air defecation, which in the areas where there are no septic tanks is a grave source of contamination? Apart from this I would remind the hon'ble mover that on his last resolution an undertaking was given to make a special inquiry as to the extent of pollution, all the different sources of pollution, trade waste, trade refuse, defecation on the river bank, etc., their hygienic effects and the legislation necessary to prevent pollution. Such an inquiry would only be prejudiced by the appointment of a roving Commission recording evidence about people's religious feelings and bodily health, and on this account too Government must oppose the motion."

The Hon'ble RAI MAHENDRA CHANDRA MITRA BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, I have listened to the speech of the Hon'ble the Maharaja-dhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, but I must say that it is a very disappointing one. His arguments have not convinced me that I am in the wrong box. The object of my moving this resolution is that an inquiry should be made. That is what I humbly suggested to the Council. My Lord, when representatives of the people come before the Council to move resolutions they do not do it on their own responsibility. Moved as I was by the orthodox Hindus of the locality where many thousands of Hindus and orthodox Brahmins live, I thought it necessary that I should represent the matter to the Council and also to Your Excellency. There cannot be any doubt as to the sanctity of the river Bhagirathi and if the water of that river is contaminated, as I have represented to Your Excellency's Government, then it becomes a serious question after all. If I have moved the Council on two or three different occasions, I thought it necessary that it should be done and that it should be brought to the notice of Your Excellency's Government. As far as it is known, there are 38 mills in this locality, in the lower part of Bengal, and if the wastage and effluents from septic tank latrines of these mills are thrown into the river, then in whatever way my resolution is viewed, I submit most humbly that it does wound the religious feelings of the Hindus. If an inquiry is made by a committee and if evidence is recorded, I am quite sure that there would be one united voice of learned pundits and orthodox Hindus that such an act is inconsistent with the religious ideas and hurts the sentiments of the orthodox Hindus. In that view of the matter, as a representative of the Hindu subjects under Your Excellency's charge, I do repeat to the best of my ability and with all the emphasis at my command that the present pernicious practice of discharging the effluents from septic tank latrines into the sacred Bagirathi does attack Hindu sentiment and Hindu religious ideas. The reason of my putting before the Council various books of authority was simply to satisfy the Council that the river is polluted and Hindu religious sentiment is attacked. I am perfectly aware that in 1904 there was an inquiry made, but that inquiry was a provisional one; the opinions of a few pundits were recorded and the result was an unsatisfactory one. It is said by the Hon'ble Member in charge that it is no use recording evidence at all. But I say that it is the only thing necessary for the Council and for Your Excellency's Government to ascertain the real facts of the case. If I alone represent the matter, it may be considered as an ex parte one, but if I am supported by evidence of those upon whom the inquiring officers can rely it will be a great help to Government in coming to a satisfactory conclusion. Evidences ought not to be disregarded in the way that the Hon'ble Member in charge has done. I solicit Your Excellency's Council to consider for one moment that the object of the inquiry is to ascertain facts, to sift facts, and if these facts are brought about by evidence, then it will be a very satisfactory thing. But how such an inquiry ought to be held is a matter for Your Excellency's Government to consider. It was said on the last occasion that an inquiry was to be made. Now, I submit, what was the reason for such an inquiry? That an inquiry should be necessary is an argument entirely in my favour. And if an inquiry is to be made, it should not be partial and private but comprehensive and public one. That is the object of my moving this resolution before the Council. It will appear that as regards the contamination of the water of the Bhagirathi there cannot be any doubt whatever. Your Excellency's Sanitary Commissioner has declared on various occasions that the water of this river is contaminated. Indeed, his good sense so much prevailed that he circularised the local officers saying that the water of the Bhagirathi should not be used by the people who live in the locality. If the river water was not contaminated, then, what was the necessity of issuing such a circular? This shows that the river water is contaminated, and if that is so, then on sanitary grounds at least I have a very strong case before the Council. If the question is considered upon sanitary grounds, then I stand upon a higher plane and I suggest that a public inquiry should be made. I again invite the attention of the Council that it is against the policy of the Government to hurt the religious sentiment of the people, and I believe there is not a Hindu who would disagree with me when I say that the sanctity of the Bhagirathi should be respected. When a comprehensive inquiry is made on the subject then the Government will be in a position to question why it is that I have brought the resolution for the consideration of the Council to-day. My Lord, it is not my intention to take Your Excellency's time unnecessarily. But I submit that I have faithfully represented the views of the Hindu community in this matter and if I have done so, no one ought to complain against me."

Khan Sahib Aman Ali.

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 16.

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that all practitioners who passed from non-recognised medical institutions be allowed to appear in the final licentiate examination of the State Medical Faculty to be held in May, 1919, along with the candidates who were plucked in one or two subjects in the said examination held in November, 1916.

He said:—

"My Lord, the resolution which stands in my name is a very simple one. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler in the September meeting of the Council told us that no one could be registered as a qualified doctor unless he passed the prescribed examination. My resolution is to get permission for passing the prescribed examination, which seems in no way to interfere with the desire of the Government. The Hon'ble Member also said that students who hold certificates from unrecognised schools are quacks, but I respectfully differ from him, and put in the figures of the results of examination with which I have been supplied by the Secretary of the State Medical Faculty, Bengal. These figures prove that the students who have passed during the concession period are greater in number than those from the Government schools, so it may not be said that unauthorised schools were producing quacks instead of doctors.

My Lord, the certificate-holders from the unauthorised schools are a great boon to the country and they have served heretofore in several mills, gardens and companies, but now they are removed from those bodies as their certificates, according to law, carry no weight with the Government. In this way their profession has greatly suffered, though the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler had said in his speech in September that their profession is not affected in any other way, except in this, that they cannot represent themselves to be what they are not. This means that they are not recognised as doctors under the Act, though they have been practising for many years.

My Lord, when their certificates are not recognised by Government, why did mill-owners, farmers and Government servants call them for their services, and if they are called for good reputation the patient shall have to take shelter of recognised doctors for certificates. This is another hardship for the patient, if they again go to the recognised doctors, why should they grant certificates when they did not treat them? This being the state of things it cannot be said that unauthorised doctors' profession has not suffered.

My Lord, I have not got the number of the candidates who got permission to appear in the prescribed examination during the concession period. I believe their number to be a large one, and they for some reason or another could not appear in the examination; if we add to that number those who could not get timely notice being residents of villages far distant from Calcutta, the number will be still greater. It is for the benefit of students who got permission, but could not appear in the examination, and those who could not get notice, being residents of distant villages, I am placing the resolution before Your Excellency's Government for consideration.

My Lord, this House is well aware that we are badly in want of good doctors. If the permission prayed herein is accorded, it will give us a considerable number of recognised doctors and remove the wants under which we are labouring.

My Lord, various epidemics, such as influenza, war fever, cholera and malaria are ravaging the province, and Your Excellency's Government are very anxious for the lives of the people, and the number of qualified doctors being small Your Excellency's Government could not meet the requisite wants in different places. If the resolution I have the honour to move be accepted, it will help in a great measure to allay the anxiety Your Excellency's Government is feeling now.

My Lord, the passed students from unauthorised schools are many and in the last examination during the concession period they have proved that they are not quacks; if the concession asked for in my resolution be accepted, the number of qualified doctors will increase in large numbers. It may be asked why they did not take advantage of the time conceded to them. My answer to that is, that they are residents of villages where the light of notice does not go and they were in the dark; secondly, the concession was allowed on very short notice.

My Lord, supposing that they are guilty of lapses, Your Excellency's Government might overlook the same in consideration that the numbers of sufferers are not small, and that on the other hand, the public will derive great benefit by these doctors by being treated by them when they will pass.

My Lord, this House is fully aware of the needs of qualified doctors throughout the province. My resolution is an attempt for the production of such doctors. Such being the state of things I place my resolution before the merciful consideration of Government and of this House."

The Hon'ble Sir NILRATAN SARKAR said :—

"My Lord, I confess that I find it extremely difficult to realise the scope of the phrase 'non-recognised medical institutions' in the resolution. The term implies a large number of medical institutions, some defunct, other existing, some of them teaching homeopathic medicines, some of them teaching kabiraji medicine, some other again teaching in low standards the rational system of western medicine, and there may be some teaching the Unani system of medicine. I do not understand whether it is suggested that the State Medical Faculty should provide for conducting examinations in all these different branches of medicine and pseudo-medicine. Then, my Lord, if it is contemplated that these schools teaching the approved western system of medicine, then arises the question of standard. The State Medical Faculty combining their efforts with those of the Council of Medical Registration have helped in the creation of order out of chaos in medical practice and medical profession, and it would be a pity if their efforts are frustrated in this way. My Lord, to seek for a hall-mark for dross instead of gold, is not to do good to anybody, but to do a world of harm to a large section of the people, for after all, it is they who suffer, some in money, many more in health, and not a small number in life. On these grounds, I think it my duty to oppose the resolution which will have the effect of whittling down whatever standard there is in our medical qualifications."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, I must apologise for, after so short an interval, taking up the time of the Council a second time on the subject of Medical Legislation in Bengal, but for the cause of it, I am not responsible.

As the Council are aware we discussed the matter on two occasions last year, once in January 1918 and again in September. On the first occasion Mr. Donald, who replied on behalf of the local Government, pointed out to the Council that the path of concession was a slippery path, and I submit that, all that has since happened amply bears out the truth of that statement. Because such and such a concession was made in one direction, we are now pressed for concessions in other directions, and if we accepted the different proposals that have been put before us from time to time, we should give away entirely the whole object for which these Acts were passed. On the occasion of the last debate I explained what these Acts were, and I do not wish to repeat what I then said, except to remind the Council that there is the Act of 1914, which set up a machinery for the registration of recognised practitioners and an authority for their supervision, while examinations were shortly afterwards instituted under the auspices of the Faculty. The second Act—the Medical Degrees Act—prohibits unauthorised people using colourable imitations of recognised degrees, and penalises the use or grant of them. That is, in outline, the policy of these two Acts, and with special reference to the subject of concessions, it is well to remember that we started with concessions. There was the first concession—and I refer to it in order to make it clear to the Council that the Act has been administered in a reasonably generous way—of the transitory clause, which originally was meant to enable existing practitioners to go up within a period of two years for the Faculty examinations, and if they could pass, to get registered. That was the scope of it as intended by the Government of India. The Government of Lord Carmichael extended that concession to students of unrecognised schools who passed out prior to the 16th March 1916, thus giving a second concession which, in effect, went further than the Government of India meant to go. But the two years then allowed did not cover the full number of examinations which they might be interpreted to have contemplated, and admission to another examination in November 1916 was conceded. In the resolution of January 1918, two requests were made, first that certain students of the Belgachia College should be allowed to go up for the Faculty examination, and secondly, that those who had failed to pass in one or two subjects at the examination of November 1916 should be allowed another chance of qualifying. For the reasons given by Mr. Donald, we were unable to accept that part of the resolution which had reference to Belgachia, but in order to meet the views of the Council, and to show our reasonableness, we granted a concession not only to the extent of giving a chance of one examination to those who had failed but of giving the chance of four. We have again only recently extended that concession up to the November examination of this year. Nevertheless we were further pressed last September to make registrable the Belgachia qualification, and I then explained why this could not be done. I do not wish to go over the same arguments again, although I was not successful in convincing the Council at that time. Now it is asked that all practitioners who passed from non-recognised medical institutions should be allowed to appear in the final licentiate examination of the State Medical Faculty to be held in May 1919, and I have no doubt that if we agreed to that and some of them failed, as most certainly a very large number would fail, we will be asked to hold another examination and so on till we go further down the slippery path of concession.

I am afraid I must again take the Council back to the original intention of this legislation, since it seems to be thought in some quarters that the local Government has no reason for its action except, apparently, an unreasonable desire to prevent certain innocent students from following a legitimate career which otherwise lay open to them. The facts, however, are otherwise. The action which eventually resulted in the Act of 1914, and which originated in this province in the discussions of 1908, was definitely taken at the request of the Syndicate of the Calcutta University, the medical section of the Asiatic Society, the Indian Medical Gazette (which practically voices the opinion of the medical profession), and a memorial signed by 49 leading Indian medical practitioners of Calcutta. It was taken in the interests of medical education, and at the instance of the recognised medical profession. The subsequent action which was recommended was largely influenced by a report of the late Sir Pardey Lukis on the so-called unrecognised schools, and I know of no more able and clear-headed man, and no truer friend of the real interests of medical education in this country, than Sir Pardey Lukis. He enquired into all the facts, and on previous occasions we have been content to mention chiefly that the type of instructions given in these institutions was held to be thoroughly unsatisfactory. Even now I have no wish to rake up ancient history, but on the other hand, I want to show to the Council what the kind of education which we are now asked to recognise really was. Accordingly I will read a few extracts from his report. His first note refers to Belgachia, but as Belgachia is now a recognised school, I will pass that by. Regarding another of these self-constituted medical schools in Calcutta, he wrote, however, as follows :—

'The founder himself appears to constitute practically the whole staff of this institution ; there are no proper arrangements for either practical or clinical teaching ; there is no hospital, and very few cases attend the small, outpatient department. Nevertheless it can boast of from 150 to 200 students upon whom it bestows the diploma of V. L. M. S. (Vernacular Licentiate in Medicine and Surgery), which is exactly the same title as that obtained by the pupils of the Government Medical School at Sealdah. Indeed, I am credibly informed that students of the Campbell Medical School, who were expelled after the strike of 1906, entered themselves at once at this institution and obtained their diplomas as V. L. M. S. in the short space of six months.'

I pass on to his remark about another school—

- 'The hostel attached to this school has a service of about 30 beds ; there are a certain number of class rooms ; and dissections are carried on in a haphazard fashion in a tumble-down bungalow.

'The fellowship (F. C. P. S.) is only obtainable, after examination, by members of two years' standing, but the standard of preliminary education for the licentiate class (L. C. P. S.) is very low ; all that is required is that the student should have passed the middle English or middle vernacular, or the Government examination for military medical pupils. Moreover candidates are admitted to both the first and second licentiate examinations on their merely producing evidence of having attended courses of lectures at "a school of medicine recognised by the college." It is very easy, therefore, for failed students from other institutions to obtain their diplomas; as examinations are held quarterly, the amount of time spent in attaining their object is, to say the least of it, not excessive.

'I know of at least one instance in which this happened. In 1905, two second-year military students were expelled from the Medical College for "ragging." They found shelter in this institution, and in the space of one year blossomed forth as duly qualified men with the license of L. C. P. S.

'This enterprising college has recently made a distinctly novel departure, and is now advertising the fact that for the convenience of gentlemen working in Government, mercantile and other offices, and desiring to undergo a thorough and complete training in medicine, the committee have decided to start evening classes, and that lectures will be delivered in all subjects from 6 to 8 P.M. daily.'

Coming to a third institution, he remarked as follows :—

'This has an accommodation for six in-patients: the beds however were rarely occupied, as patients were obliged to provide their own food. On first starting there were 150 students on the rolls, and by 1907 the number had increased to 300. . . . The number of beds was later increased to 16, . . . but for the reason given above, the sixteen beds have hitherto remained practically unoccupied, and the only opportunities for clinical instruction are afforded by the out-patient department where there is a daily average attendance of about 50 patients. A few class-rooms are provided, but there is no dissecting room, museum or library, and the teaching is entirely theoretical, being illustrated merely by diagrams.

'This institution, notwithstanding its many disadvantages, advertises itself as "aiming at imparting a sound knowledge of the healing art principally on Allopathic lines, and at investigating into truths underlying that art."

'It grants the three titles of L. C. P. S., M. C. P. S. and F. C. P. S., and announces that the M. C. P. S. is equivalent to the M. B.'

Finally, with reference to a fourth institution, he said :—

'Notwithstanding the fact that there are at present practically no teaching appliances or facilities of any kind, this college advertises that instruction is given in various abstruse subjects, such as balneology and electro-therapeutics, that are taught nowhere else in India. . . .

Not being satisfied merely with the L. C. P. S., M. C. P. S. and F. C. P. S. of the other Colleges, . . . it announces that in addition to all these it is prepared to confer the diploma of L. M. S. (Nat.), which is a colorable imitation of that which is issued to its licentiates by the University of Calcutta, and with reference to which the Syndicate has already made representations to Government. Moreover, although this college has not yet been in existence for twelve months, a considerable number of diplomas have already been granted, and were distributed at the recent "Foundation Day" celebration. It is obvious that the successful candidates cannot possibly have completed their training in this short space of time; they must, therefore, have been recruited from amongst the failed or rusticated students of other colleges.'

I apologise for the length of these extracts, but they seem to me to give a vivid picture, in the words of an able administrator now deceased, of what the position was regarding which he made proposals at that time. If we are now to accept this resolution and allow students who have passed out from institutions of that character to appear at the Faculty Examination.

Khan Sahib Aman Ali; Babu A. C. Datta.

I submit that we shall absolutely discard all that has been previously done by our predecessors with ample justification. If, again, we are to allow these students to go up for the examination, what is to prevent similar institutions springing up and students coming forward and saying 'Oh, let us too go up for the examination.' The Hon'ble Mover justifies his proposal by saying 'I am merely asking for permission for these students to appear at an examination; the country wants doctors, and that is why I ask for this.' But I put it to the Council whether a sound system of medical education has any real value at all. If medical education is merely a matter of passing examinations, then let us do away with our rules and regulations and merely hold examinations twice a year, and on the result grant licenses to kill or cure.

I would refer here to a minor point. If we are to accept this resolution the students of the Belgachia College in its unregenerate days will be allowed to go up for the examination, although this is not a privilege enjoyed by its students now that great improvements have been effected in it. To say the least, this would be somewhat illogical.

The final point I would submit to the Council for consideration is that the Faculty created under the Act of 1914, has attempted to get its membership recognised at Home, and if successful, this will eminently be to the benefit of those who pass its examination. They have not yet succeeded in doing so, as the English authorities apparently have not sufficient confidence in the standards that are taught here. One other province, I am told, is trying to raise its standard to get over that difficulty. But if here anything is done which is calculated to prejudice even our existing standard, it will certainly be known at Home; and we shall be told that if we are going to allow anybody and everybody to go up for the examination, it is impossible to afford it recognition.

For all these reasons, I can only take up the position which I took in September 1918, and advise this Council not to accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI said:—

"My Lord, on the face of the opposition which has come from Government I would only say that the students of unrecognised schools, such as the College of Physicians and Surgeons of India and the National Medical College, who went up for the last examination produced a very good result. The students for whom I am pleading will not appear at the Faculty Examination if they do not think themselves qualified. I am asking for an extension of time as Government have already given time, but the thing is that the students who pass from unrecognised colleges have also read the same standard as those who have been plucked in the examination of 1916. My resolution does not ask for further time and in that view I place my resolution for the consideration of this Council."

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 17.

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA moved the following resolution:—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that all détenus interned in Bengal under the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1916, be set at liberty.

Babu A. C. Datta.

He said :—

“My Lord, much has been said and written in and outside this Council chamber on this question of internment. Much has been said on behalf of the Government and much more on behalf of the people.

The Government had made many attempts to explain their position to the people and to satisfy them that the policy of internment was forced upon them and was justified by the course of events. On the other hand, it has been throughout insisted by, and on behalf of, the people that young men have been interned without much discrimination, and that amongst the interned there are many who do not deserve the punishment. But it must be confessed that the Government has so far failed to convince the people, and the people also feel that they have so far failed to convince the Government. Their views and versions are still poles asunder. The controversy has sometimes been bitter and acrimonious. The utterances made on behalf of the Government have not infrequently been mortifying to the people. On the contrary, the agitation of the people and their representatives very often irritated the Government. I am prepared to confess that in the course of this controversy we sometimes employed language which in all conscience was strong. But at the same time it must be said that our language was strong because we felt strongly in the matter. What is language but a medium of expression of what we feel? Whatever may be said on behalf of the Government as to the merits of the controversy, there is one thing which must be admitted, viz., that the feeling of the people was and is very keen on the question and that they honestly believe that many have been interned who should not have been interned. When the feeling is so keen and so widespread, it is the duty of the people's representatives to make it known to the Government. That is a duty which we owe as much to the Government as to the people. I do maintain, My Lord, that as non-official elected members of the Council we should be guilty of dereliction of a sacred duty if we sleep over the matter and do not invite Your Excellency's attention in this official manner. I have always thought that we are a connecting link between the Government on one side and the people on the other—a conduit pipe for communicating the wishes and thoughts of the country to Your Excellency's Government. That is the view that I have always taken of our position in this Council. In fact I feel that otherwise we have no right, we have no business to be here—otherwise there is absolutely no justification for our occupation of seats in this gilded chamber. That being my conception of our duty and position here, I thought I would not be true to the people whom I have the proud privilege of representing here—I thought I would not be loyal—really and genuinely loyal—for there is enough of hypocritical loyalty in this country—I thought I would not be loyal to the Government if I had not told Your Excellency what is just at the present moment the feeling of the people on the question of internment, now that the war is over. That, My Lord, is my justification for bringing up a matter which I know is positively distasteful in certain quarters.

Only three weeks ago the feelings and wishes of the people of the entire Indian continent have been crystallised in resolutions passed by the Indian National Congress and the All-India Moslem League urging general amnesty to all political prisoners. The whole country is absolutely of one mind over this matter. There are now various shades of political opinion in this country. Some are called Moderates, some Extremists. There are also such expressions as Moderate Extremists and Extremist Moderates. We have now got another school of thought who have styled themselves Progressive Nationalist Moderates. There is however one matter in which they all agree. They all insist that the internees should now be set at liberty. If public opinion must count at all in the Councils of the Government, the recommendation which my resolution seeks to make cannot be summarily brushed aside. In making this resolution I know and I feel I have at my back the united voice of the united nation.

My Lord, it has been urged that Mr. Justice Chandervarker and Mr. Justice Beachcroft justified the action of the Government in all but six out of eight hundred and six cases of internment. But the method adopted was hardly satisfactory and cannot be said to be in consonance with British idea and British ideal of finding out truth. The evidence was ex parte. It was not sifted and tested by cross-examination. These learned Judges had no more materials before them than those which the Government had to go upon. Our complaint has always been that it was the system of enquiry which was defective and which led to indiscriminate detention. Even if an angel were brought down from heaven and asked to work under such limitations no better result could have been obtained. The result is this enquiry has not succeeded in bringing about a change in the feeling and attitude of the people.

But the question arises has the verdict of these two eminent Judges been accepted by the Government? I venture to answer this question in the negative. I say that like the people the Government has also not accepted their conclusion that injustice was done only in a few cases. For, has not the Government released many internees after and in spite of their report? Has not the Government set at liberty many who were, according to the verdict of the two Judges, rightly interned? Are we to believe that they were released if the Government still thought they were guilty as they were found to be guilty by the two learned Judges.

We are grateful, My Lord, that some people have now been released. We congratulate Your Excellency's Government that justice has now been done to them. The whole country went on bended knees and begged for their release. But their prayer was not heeded at the time. Can it be contended for one moment that the Government still believes that the people now released were and are guilty? It must now be admitted that at all events with respect to the internees now released the people were right and the information upon which the Government proceeded was wrong. Belated justice however is better than denial of justice, and I take this opportunity of expressing the gratefulness of our people for setting at liberty many of our young men. While thanking the Government I feel constrained to say that release in dribblets has failed to evoke that enthusiasm which a bolder policy would assuredly have produced. My Lord, this resolution is an invitation to Your Excellency's Government to take courage in both hands and to complete in one stroke what seems to be proposed to be done piecemeal. It seems to me, however, that where conciliation is to be the policy, it should be whole-hearted, worthy of the great Government of this great country. It seems to me that nothing should be done to leave a rankling sore in the minds of those to whom kindness is shown. Nothing should be done which is calculated to blight their future prospect. It seems to me that home domicile or conditional release with the inevitable Criminal Investigation Department to dog their steps and to make their lives miserable entirely lacks in the virtues of whole-hearted conciliation. I can assure Your Excellency that a more courageous policy will go far in rallying the people to co-operation with the Government at a time when it is most needful.

And after all what are these detenus—a mere handful of misguided youths before the Irish rebels? Look, My Lord, to the latter's boldness of conception, boldness of plans and boldness of execution, and compare them with the revolutionaries of Bengal. Even if their guilt be assumed, they would seem as mere toy revolutionaries before the Irish rebels. And yet the British Government set the latter free after a few months of detention. If that was a good policy in relation to a people living so near the theatre of the war, there cannot be any earthly reason why the same policy will not be found hundred times more efficacious in relation to the revolutionaries or supposed revolutionaries of Bengal. Your Excellency's Government may well take a chapter from Mr. Lloyd George's administration in this respect.

Again the time is opportune for such a course of action which I am now urging. My Lord, if extraordinary times required extraordinary precautions and extraordinary measures in detaining persons on suspicion, such conditions do not now obtain. The war is at an end. The British Empire and the Allies have come out victorious and every subject of His Majesty is jubilant. Allow these people, My Lord, to come out and share in the universal joy. Allow them to come out and see for themselves the triumph of freedom, right and justice over despotism and autocracy.

Then, again, the country is on the eve of far-reaching constitutional reforms which, let us hope, will satisfy the legitimate aspirations of the people. My Lord, allow the ill-fated detenus to come out and see for themselves the immense possibilities of nationhood and of larger life. Allow them to come out and realise for themselves that the pledges of August 1917 are bound to be redeemed, and that as an earnest for such redemption, Sir S. P. Sinha has been given a seat in the British Ministry. Repression, My Lord, is altogether a mistaken policy in dealing with a civilised and progressive nation fully conscious of, and thoroughly imbued with, the spirit of the time. I plead, My Lord for conciliation, for conciliation is a sovereign remedy. It can make a foe a friend. I plead for more courage and bolder statesmanship on the part of Your Excellency's Government. I plead for the release of all prisoners still detained under the Defence of India Act. If Your Excellency be pleased to grant a general amnesty to them, I am sure there will be no reason to repent it hereafter. On the contrary I venture to think, and I sincerely believe, that under changed times and in changing conditions, the alleged revolutionaries will be zealous supporters of the Government. With these few words, I beg to move the resolution which stands in my name."

The Hon'ble MR. P. C. MITTER said :—

My Lord, originally I did not intend to take part in the discussion on this resolution but, My Lord, on further consideration I thought that I ought not to record my silent vote against this resolution. I thought, My Lord, that it is a duty which I owed as a representative member of this Council to tell my people through this Council some aspects of the question—aspects which are so often and so persistently ignored by some section of the public. The first point that I would ask that section of the public through the hon'ble member here, who has moved that resolution, to consider is—how is it that these dacoities and murders which were a thing of almost monthly occurrence, if not a thing of weekly occurrence certainly a thing of monthly occurrence, have ceased after vigorous action had been taken under the Defence of India Act. It is a stern fact which the hon'ble member and those who think with him cannot possibly ignore. Does the hon'ble member, and those who think with him, doubt the actual occurrence of the dacoities and murders like the Corporation Street dacoity, the Garden Reach dacoity, the Seth Bagan, the Beliaghata, the Arinenian Street and the Shibpur dacoities? I need not mention more, but any one, who has read the reports, appearing even in those newspapers which have sympathy with the thoughts expressed by my hon'ble friend here, must be familiar with the sad tale of dacoities and murders. Do my hon'ble friend and those who think with him doubt the occurrence of murders like that of the late Babu Ashutosh Biswas, the well-known public prosecutor of Alipur? The murder of Babu Basanta Kumar Chatterjee, the Deputy Superintendent of Police, who was ruthlessly murdered in broad day light in a public street of Calcutta?"

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA—"We do not doubt them."

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter :—"Well, if these facts are not doubted what is the outstanding position? These murders and dacoities took place and they have ceased as soon as vigorous action was taken under the Defence of India Act. I am not here to deal with the question whether any change of the Defence of India Act is necessary or not because the particular proposition before the House is whether these persons ought to be released or not. If the ordinary laws of the country are not sufficient in dealing with crimes like this, and if the extraordinary powers under the Defence of India Act really stamped out the crimes which were a disgrace to society—crimes which every patriotic Indian ought to feel sorry for—and if the operations of the Defence of India Act have to a great extent stamped out these crimes, then how can any responsible public man suggest to nullify the results of such action and to let society go back to that state of anarchy in which it was before such vigorous actions were taken? I entirely endorse the view put forward by the hon'ble mover that we have a responsibility to our people and to ourselves. I only hope that that responsibility will enable us to see that it is our duty to protect innocent people from being shot down and to see that the man, who by the fruits of his industry has made some money, is not ruthlessly pillaged. It is not a question of amnesty or mercy but it is a question of the necessities of society, and if necessities of society require that certain persons, who are nothing better than a cancer to the body politic, should be treated in a particular way, it is necessary in the interest of the body politic to treat them in that way. I do hope, My Lord, that if we are to realise our responsibilities, if the Reform Scheme is to be a reality for the future well-being of our country, I do hope that gentlemen of the position of the hon'ble mover will try and come up to that standard of responsibility for which I am pleading. I know that the hon'ble mover and I do not see eye to eye on various points and I do not ask the hon'ble mover to take anything from me, but I also know that the hon'ble mover and those who think with him have great respect for judicial decisions, specially the decisions of the Hon'ble High Court. I have no doubt that if the hon'ble mover sets that standard of responsibility which we have a right to expect of him, he should have, before he urged his motion in this Council, investigated the matter so far as it was possible for him to investigate from materials available to him. The decisions of the law Courts were certainly open to him, and if he had looked to the decision of Mr. Justice Mookerjee in what is known as the Dacca Conspiracy case, he would have found what an amount of harm many persons who are now safely interned and who were particularly connected with this movement, had done to educational institutions in this country. If the hon'ble mover had referred to a report of a certain commission which had investigated into a regrettable incident in the Presidency College, he would have found what an amount of mischief was done even in an institution like the Presidency College by persons for whom he is pleading. As I have said, I have no doubt the hon'ble mover has a great respect for the High Court and for the opinions of Judges like Mr. Justice Mookerjee and Sir Lawrence Jenkins, and if he had referred to some of the judgments written by either of these eminent Judges, he would have found how the solution of many problems, for the solution of which, I have no doubt, he keenly feels, has suffered on account of the activities of the persons for whom he is pleading to-day. I have no doubt he is pleading from a false notion of mercy, but I would expect of him and others who support him to examine the whole question from the point of view of the public as a whole before a motion like this was put forward. If they examined the question from the point of view of the public generally, then false notions of mercy alone would not appeal to them. They would then consider the facts from all points of view. In the judgment of Mr. Justice Mookerjee in the well-known Rajabagan Bomb case my hon'ble friend will find how religion has been perverted and how religious ideas have been misused by the persons for whom he is pleading before this Council. My hon'ble friend says that the whole country is with him. I hope, My Lord, that my friend is too optimistic in this matter. If there is apparent noise in some quarters, if there are men who are shouting their loudest, I am certain there are many others who feel equally strongly the other way, and if these men have not spoken out it is because that ordinarily they are not as vocal as others. Will the hon'ble member make some enquiries from the merchants, traders and money-lenders in the rural areas, who had suffered? My Lord, in the interests of that progressive realisation of the ideal for which the Congress has been pleading from 1885 onwards and in the interests of the great pronouncement which was made by the Secretary of State in August 1917, I plead with equal force that it is necessary to irradiate the cancer, that it is necessary to free the body politic of this poisonous growth, and in order to do so, it is necessary to apply the Surgeons' knife. I, therefore, say, My Lord, with all the emphasis at my command that a resolution like this should never be accepted, but, My Lord, at the same time I must say that I feel a great deal of sympathy for some of these youths—sympathy I have none with many who are nothing but unmitigated criminals—but there are those who have been led on by persons who ought to have known better, led on by platform orators who did not know what their speeches would lead to, led on by irresponsible journalists who did not know what dishonest journalism meant; and may I in connection with this last point draw my hon'ble friend's attention to the decision of Sir Lawrence Jenkins in the Alipur Bomb case? He will find there how an innocent young man, typical of many like him, living in the interior of the country, perhaps in the very district from which my hon'ble friend comes, was misled by the reading of Jugantar. After the minds of these unfortunate young men receive a certain turn by speeches and writings such as these, what happens? The unmitigated criminals come forward and warily enmeshes these unfortunate young men in the criminal revolutionary movement. For these young men I feel the greatest sympathy, but if I feel sympathy I also realise that in their own interest as also in the interest of society they cannot be let off so long as we do not get hostages for their future good behaviour, and if the Government has been releasing these persons by dribblets, it is not because Government is anxious to create effect, but because Government is satisfied that it is safe in the interests of society to release these persons. Therefore, My Lord, I say, with the utmost respect to my hon'ble friend that it is putting the case absolutely from a wrong point of view, to suggest that it is a question of 'striking the imagination of the people.' 'Striking the imagination of the people' may be a very good thing as a newspaper phrase, or as a piece of platform oratory, but for a practical Government the phrase has no place—at any rate in the solution of this particular question. It is absolutely necessary for a practical Government to realise that men who would ruin society, must be kept back from such a purpose."

Rai D. C. Ghosh Bahadur.

The Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSH BAHADUR said :—

"My Lord, the Hon'ble mover asks this Council to recommend to the Government that all detenus interned under the Defence of India Act be now set at liberty. Now, the persons who have been imprisoned by Government during the last few years without trial are either under the Defence of India Act or under Regulation III of 1818. All the prisoners to whom reference has been made by my friend, especially the persons whose cases were considered by Sir Narayan Chandravarkar and Mr. Justice Beachcroft, were not arrested and detained under the Defence of India Act of 1915. About 106 persons were detained under Regulation III of 1818, and I think my hon'ble friend's observations with regard to these persons are beside the point. He is not concerned in asking this Council to recommend to the Government that the prisoners under Regulation III of 1818, usually called State Prisoners, should be set at liberty. He is concerned with the large number of prisoners of whom a considerable body have been discharged from time to time within the course of the last year, and I think my friend will acknowledge that as regards these State prisoners, about 100 in number, whose cases were considered by the two gentlemen named by him Sir Narayan Chandravarkar and Mr. Justice Beachcroft, are cases which we need not concern ourselves now. As regards the persons who have been detained under the Defence of India Act of 1915, the Government are considering their cases, and we find that from time to time announcements are made in the papers that some persons are being released. All that my hon'ble friend now wants is that without any examination of individual cases all the persons should be discharged. Why this time has been selected for the discharge of all the persons, passes my understanding? I do not mean to suggest that Government should detain these persons for all time, but what I say is this, that because at a certain gathering of our countrymen there was a resolution passed that all these persons should be released, and that a general amnesty should be declared, and that, therefore, this Council should recommend to the Governor for their discharge. I do not think that it is a very judicious appeal. It is not pretended that the war is at an end; we are still in war time; armistice is not peace, and this Act of 1915 will exhaust itself some six months after the war is formally at an end, that is after the conclusion of peace. Therefore, at the risk of being considered unpatriotic, I would say that the time is not opportune for a prayer of the kind as made by the hon'ble mover, that there should be a general amnesty. It is not necessary for me to go over the ground taken by my hon'ble friend on my right, who has given considerable time, at the sacrifice of his professional business, to this matter, in the consideration of the cases of persons suspected to be seditionists. It is true that there are no dacoities, no murders now, and we have to be thankful to the Government for the measures taken by them. I am not suggesting that, as soon as these people for whom my hon'ble friend, Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, appeals are discharged, there will be a recurrence of dacoities and murders. This is a matter for the consideration of the Government who have the papers before them of individual cases. If they think that if the discharge of a particular person will be attended with grave risk for the peace of society, then certainly they are within their rights to keep such a person under restraint, and to put him before a special tribunal, under a slightly different procedure, as is contemplated. But we must rely upon the discretion of the Government in this matter, and I think therefore that my hon'ble friend's resolution ought not to be carried."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble SIR HENRY WHEELER said :—

"My Lord, the last two speakers have so ably put various points which are relevant to this resolution, that I might almost be content to leave it at that. But this particular matter is one in which the responsibility of the local Government is so close and obvious that, in the light of the controversy that has arisen round it, it is incumbent upon me to offer a few observations.

I regret that this resolution has been moved. It is to be regretted because, for reasons that are well known to this Council—which have been explained repeatedly by Lord Carmichael and Your Excellency, and have been endorsed by the Rowlatt Committee and Sir Narayan Chandravarkar's and Mr. Justice Beachcroft's enquiry—we cannot place before the Council in detail the many excellent reasons that we have for the action we have taken. It is to be regretted again because, however carefully and with whatever good will we approach the question, it is difficult to avoid expressions which exasperate feeling and excite controversy. Finally, I regret it in that it is speeches of the type of the Hon'ble Mover that give ground for the allegation that in Bengal the preservation of the public peace and the punishment of the wrong-doer is not always regarded as that paramount consideration which it is elsewhere. It is within the recollection of us all that an allegation on these lines from a responsible quarter excited much resentment not long ago, and it is just because we, who are officials in Bengal, believe that sentiment to be not in accord with the bulk of the common sense and responsible opinion in the province, that we regret speeches of the type that we have heard to-day from the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, in so far as they cast a slur upon the province which we repudiate. The resolution, however, has been moved, and it is a resolution which has a somewhat curious history.

On the 20th November 1917 the same Hon'ble Member sought to move a similar resolution. Your Excellency then made a detailed statement in this Council of facts, which were not known to many Hon'ble Members, and the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta was so convinced that he proceeded to withdraw his resolution. However, apparently between November 1917 and January 1919, his memory has weakened, and it is most strange that this should have happened, because in that interval we have had two very convincing pieces of evidence bearing out in fuller details the facts which Your Excellency related in outline only. We have had a full enquiry by the Rowlatt Committee; we have had a second enquiry by Sir Narayan Chandravarkar and Mr Justice Beachcroft, and in the face of these two facts it is strange yet again to find the Hon'ble Member for a second time coming up, unrepentant, to repeat a suggestion of which, apparently, at one time he thought better. Of course for his mandate we need not look further than a certain resolution to which reference has been made this afternoon—the resolution of the recent Delhi Congress, which having previously resolved that the preservation of law and order might safely be made over to the hands of the speakers, proceeded, with somewhat curious logic, to follow it by a proposal similar to that now made, which in the mind of all right thinking men, if given effect to, would certainly endanger the preservation of law and order. But, Sir, we are perfectly prepared to justify the action that has been taken by us, and we rest our justification on the findings of these two enquires before which the facts were submitted. We rest our justification again on the improvement which we believe has been effected in the situation in this province, and which must be patent to all. It is a somewhat melancholy fact in one aspect, but still it is true, that 1918 is the first year since 1906 that no member of the general public, excluding police officers and those assisting or believed to have been assisting the police, has been killed or wounded by revolutionary dacoits or robbers. This is so far satisfactory, although it induces certain rather melancholy reflections, and we believe that this change has been brought about by the skill of the police officers to whom the administration of these Acts has been committed, and by the extremely useful weapons which the legislature has thus put in our hands. We are now asked in this resolution to throw aside all that we have done, and to say that all the men now under restraint ought to be allowed to go free.

If we try to imagine various reasons which might be adduced for so doing, among the first I should personally have put one to which the Hon'ble Member has not even alluded, doubtless because he knows it is not true, and indeed, it is not true; that is to say, we might have expected him to urge that, whatever the revolutionary has been in the past, it is over, and therefore there is every reason now to exercise clemency. As I have said, that statement has not been made, neither is it correct. We have unfortunately the best reasons for going on with whatever checks have been imposed by the measures taken under the Defence Act. Men are still abroad who were known to be leaders in the revolutionary movement; they are still actively engaged in enlisting boys for their own ends and endeavouring to foment trouble, and simply because sedition has been checked for the moment, we should not be justified in assuming that it does not exist.

I pass to what really is the Hon'ble Mover's main reason for urging clemency, viz., his allegation that amongst the interned many do not deserve punishment. It is almost incredible that in the face of the enquiries that have been cited, despite the fact that, of 806 investigated cases, action was found to have been justified in 800 by the enquiring committee, and in the face of the detailed reasons which they have given in their report, justifying the method of their enquiry and their suggestions, he is able to get up and tell us that he still believes that many are not guilty. With that argument I cannot cope. I rest my case on the two documents of which I have made mention, and I leave it at that.

Then we come to a third reason, namely, that after all, even if there was a revolutionary movement, it was but a toy revolution. In answer to that I again ask Hon'ble Members to refer to the Rowlatt Committee's report, and the description it contains of what this movement really was.

Lastly, we come to the argument that we may safely take this action as the war is over. As a matter of fact, the war is not over; an armistice has been signed, but the state of the world is not exactly what one would call one of utter tranquillity even now. In the second place, this revolutionary movement in Bengal was not the product of the war. It was accentuated by the war, but there is no a priori reason why, because of the fact that the war is over, we should discard measures which we have found so useful. I submit that none of these arguments will hold water, or would be sufficient justification for taking the action which the Council is asked to recommend.

But, Sir, although we have not adopted this policy of general amnesty, and do not intend to adopt it, yet I would like to explain to the Council what we have done, the more so, as in this connection the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has allowed his feelings to lead him into a statement which is a vicious travesty of the true facts, for which I can see no justification. He has referred to the policy of release, and he has said that the fact that men have been released shows their innocence. He asserts that justice has now been done; that the people were right and the Government wrong; that belated justice is better than no justice. May I draw the attention of the Council to Your Excellency's speech delivered in November 1917 in which you referred to this policy of release. It was a statement which ought to be within the Hon'ble Member's recollection, and it afforded a clear explanation of the lines upon which we have been proceeding. Your Excellency then said :—

'I do not say for one moment that all those dealt with are guilty in equal degree. Certainly not. There are many who have been led to join the revolutionary movement under a misapprehension as to what they were doing. In many cases the regret which is often expressed by such men for their past action is no doubt perfectly genuine. And it is the policy of Government deliberately adopted with a full knowledge of all the facts, steadily to release such men as can in our judgment be set free without unduly endangering the safety of society and the public peace. Men who have been guilty only in a minor degree and for whose good behaviour security can be obtained, have been set at liberty from time to time during the year. . . . These men are on their honour. It is up to them to see that they do not abuse the trust which has been placed in them.'

In the face of that explanation I am amazed to find the Hon'ble Member making the—I can only characterise it—most mischievous statement which he has made this afternoon. We have released some of these men because we hold their confessions in our hands; they have given promises of future good behaviour, and the situation being as it is (and of course the armistice has cleared the air) Government have no desire to appear to be vindictive in this matter. We believe that these men have learnt their lesson, and we exercise mercy believing that it will have a good effect, and that the experiment was at least worth trying. The actual facts are that in one way or other we have dealt under the Defence of India Act with some 1,062 men, excluding cases of persons expelled from the province or cases otherwise disposed of. Of these we had prior to the armistice released many for the reasons I have stated, but we have accelerated our policy since the armistice was declared. We have released 481 in all, and we are in the process of releasing 196 more, thus making a total of 677. Of the remaining persons still detained, some 385 are in various domiciles, of whom 126 are in home domicile. We shall pursue this policy according as circumstances develop and according as we think ourselves justified in doing so, but I have cited these figures because I have seen it stated in some quarters that Government is releasing detenus by thousands, whereas we never even interned them by thousands. They also fully bear out the contention that, in exercising its powers under this Act, the local Government has not enforced a greater degree of stringency than the circumstances of the time required, and to the extent that circumstances permitted has already shown, and is showing, mercy. Beyond this we are not prepared to go, and I cannot advise the Council to accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHUNDRA DATTA said :—

My Lord, I would like to say a few words in answer to the arguments brought forward by the Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chandra Mitter. One argument is that dacoities and murders have decreased; that is a fact about which there cannot be any controversy whatsoever. But in answer I have to say this: It does not follow from the fact that there were dacoities and murders and that these dacoities and murders have ceased, it does not follow that all the interned people were concerned in these crimes. Before I proceed further I must make my position absolutely clear. I have never suggested either to-day or on any other occasion that all those people that have been interned are absolutely innocent. I have only said—I have on the other hand distinctly made it clear—that there must be many who were not guilty.

As regards the argument that dacoities and murders have decreased under the vigorous administration of the Defence of India Act, I want to submit this. I have also said on many occasions that I did not suggest for one moment that the authorities of the Government, who deal with these matters, deliberately interned persons whom they believed to be innocent. I have never said that. I have always said this—that the system adopted for the enquiry was defective and that the inevitable result of that was that in some cases there must have been blunder of judgment. I use the words 'blunder of judgment' advisedly: that is my position on this question.

As regards the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter's argument that dacoities and murders have decreased, I hope my hon'ble friend will listen to my argument and give his best consideration now and hereafter over this argument. Supposing 100 men were guilty of murders and dacoities and supposing 1,100 men have been interned—I do not say that that is the figure, but I take this figure just for the purpose of illustrating my proposition—does not that argument apply equally well in that case also; although 100 men committed murders and dacoities and 1,100 men were interned, still that argument of the decrease of dacoities and murders applies equally well. Supposing some of us now present in this Council Chamber were interned still that argument would be applicable, namely, that the crimes have now decreased. That argument is certainly fallacious. Of course, if my position was this—that all the people interned are innocent, then certainly this argument has some force but not otherwise.

Then, My Lord, I have also said supposing they are guilty—I put my case on that assumption—supposing they are guilty and even in that case the question arises whether they should be released or not. I do not know what my friend's answer will be to the release of Sien Finners : most regrettable atrocities were committed by them, but it was still thought proper and expedient in the interests of the country not to detain them ad infinitum. 'Once interned always interned' is an argument which is never accepted in any country. My hon'ble friend Mr. P. C. Mitter may be hard and unrelenting, but the Government has not been hard and unrelenting, and on behalf of the people, I feel it just to express their gratefulness for releasing some people recently.

My friend refers to my own district from which it is said many young men—innocent youths—that is his expression—were misled. Now that is precisely one of the reasons why I feel strongly on this matter. I do feel that there must have been many young men—I mean boys of very tender age—who were captured by anarchists and who were misled, but having regard to their tender age and having regard to the fact that they did not go deep into the movement, I have always thought from the standpoint of the people and from the standpoint of Government that it would be better for the country and for Government to reclaim them instead of interning them ad infinitum and making them confirmed anarchists. If it is permissible, I would remind Your Excellency that that is what on a certain occasion I tried to explain to Your Excellency in a private interview. I might refer to one particular case of a young lad of 14 or 15 years who was ordered to be interned and the order went from Calcutta to Comilla. Then, My Lord, the boy presented himself before the Superintendent of Police of my district under the orders received from Calcutta. The District Superintendent of Police seeing the young boy was simply amazed and thought it would be ridiculous to intern such an immature boy. He then made a reference to the higher authorities and the result was that the boy was not interned. This is one class of cases to which I would invite Your Excellency's careful attention.

Then about the observations of the Hon'ble Member in charge, I do not know if I deserved them but I have got them. I feel that he has done some injustice to me. I can assure him that if I have moved this resolution, I have moved it because I honestly feel that in some cases there has been blunder of judgment and in some other cases too young lads had been interned who ought to have been reclaimed : in either class of cases I may say that I believe that most of these young men, if released, would be staunch supporters of Government instead of being enemies. Because I honestly believe this I have brought up this matter before the Council. I need hardly say that it is not a pleasant duty for a Member of this Council to do this task. After all we know that this is not a very pleasant task, and I do not think that any man is so perverse as he would needlessly incur the displeasure of anybody if he does not really feel in the matter. Now it is said, My Lord, that some people have been released not because Government do not think them to be guilty but because Government do not wish to be vindictive. That is precisely my submission. I have never said that they are not guilty ; but I say because they are guilty it does not follow that they should be detained for ever. What, after all, My Lord, is my resolution ? My resolution is simply this—that the policy of release that has been inaugurated may be given effect to more completely, nothing more or nothing less than that. I do not say that Government are vindictive even in respect of the persons who have not been released. If Government have not released that is because Government feel that it will not be good for the country : whereas I believe that if they are released now, especially at this time when the war is over, on the eve of the constitutional reforms, they are not so perverse in their nature that they would not appreciate the kindness of Government. That is the real reason as to why I have brought up this matter."

The resolution was then put and lost.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 2.

The following questions which had been starred were put and answered :—

1.

(a) Is it a fact that an Assistant Master in the Faridpur Zila School has been continuously officiating for five years without being confirmed in his appointment, although several vacancies occurred during this period?

The case of an Assistant Master of the Faridpur Zila School.

(b) Is it a fact that on two or three occasions this Assistant Master was recommended by the Headmaster, by the managing committee of the school and its Magistrate-President, as well as by the Divisional Inspector of schools, but a Muhammadan was selected?

(c) Is it a fact—

(i) that the Muhammadan gentleman so appointed did not stick to the post or did not join at all; and

(ii) that on the last occasion, although the officiating Assistant Master was again recommended, another Muhammadan gentleman who is an outsider, was appointed, but has not yet joined the post or given the school authorities any information as to his intentions?

(d) Do the Government propose to confirm the Assistant Master in his officiating appointment?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) Babu Satyapada Lahiri, to whom the question apparently refers, has been officiating in temporary and permanent vacancies since 1914. He has not yet been confirmed in any post.

(b) On two occasions, in 1915 and 1917, he was recommended for appointment to two permanent vacancies in the school, but as the number of Muhammadan teachers in the school was disproportionately small (only 2 out of 15), the appointment of Muhammadans to these vacancies was considered proper

(c) (i) It is not a fact so far as the vacancy in 1915 is concerned.

(ii) Two Muhammadans were successively appointed to the vacancy caused in 1917, both of whom failed to join.

(d) Babu Satyapada Lahiri is now officiating in place of a permanent teacher who has been deputed for training. His permanent appointment in connection with the vacancy last mentioned is under the consideration of the Director of Public Instruction.”

of sadhus and sannyasis at Jagannath Ghât.

(a) For what length of time since the establishment of British rule in Calcutta have the sadhu and sannyasi mendicants been congregating at Jagannath Ghât on the bank of the river Hooghly in the town of Calcutta, and especially during the season of Poush Sankranti, with a view to a pilgrimage to Gangasagar?

(b) Is it a fact that these people are considered holy by the generality of the Hindu community?

(c) Were any complaints made to the police, regarding the behaviour of these persons, by any Hindu who had occasion to use this bathing ghât on the 3rd or 4th January, 1919?

(d) Is it a fact that alms are freely given to these people on such occasions and that no objections have ever been made to their congregating on the top platform of the ghât?

(e) Did Sub-Inspector Galloway of the Port police on or about the 4th instant arrest about a hundred sadhus, including female sannyasinis, at this ghât where they had been waiting for boats to carry them to their place of pilgrimage in Saugor Island?

(f) Were these pilgrims prosecuted before a magistrate on charges of obstructing a public thoroughfare and of begging for alms and was the prosecution subsequently withdrawn?

(g) Is it true that some of these sadhus were slapped and kicked, and had their cooked food spoilt and that the idols of sadhus—Damodar Giri, Kishenji and Harihar Giri—had been maimed and broken?

(h) Are the Government considering the desirability of placing a Hindu police-officer on duty at such pilgrim ghâts?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR:—

“(a) The practice has prevailed for many years.

(b) Yes.

(c) No.

(d) Alms are freely given to these people. No objections to their congregating on the top platform of the ghât have been brought to the notice of Government.

(e) The arrests were made, not at the ghât, but on the Port Commissioners' land above the ghât. The number of pilgrims proceeding to Saugor Island was unusually large this year, and on the occasion referred to, the Port police had to deal with over 25,000 persons who had congregated at the Jagannath Ghât and on the Port Commissioners' land above it and refused to obey any orders with the result that traffic was practically suspended. In order to restore order, a certain number of arrests were then made at the urgent request of the Port Commissioners.

(f) No. The Deputy Commissioner, Port police, discharged the accused.

(g) The Deputy Commissioner, Port police, was present throughout, but no complaints of this nature were made to him.

(h) A Hindu officer is now in charge of the section which includes the Jagannath Ghât.”

By the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur:—

*III.

(a) With reference to the communiqué issued by the Controller of Cotton Cloth from Bombay on the 30th January, 1919, and published in the Calcutta papers on the following day, will the Government be pleased to state whether the prices of dhoties, saris and shirtings now ruling in Bengal are not higher than what the poorer class of people in this province can afford to pay? High price of cloths.

(b) What are the rates at which such articles of clothing are being sold in this cold season to the poorer class of people in Calcutta and in the interior of the province?

(c) Do the Government get periodical statistics from district officers as to the ruling prices of such goods, as in the case of rice? If not, why not?

(d) Have the Government of Bengal drawn the attention of the Government of India during the past six months to the state of the Calcutta cloth-market in this respect and moved that Government to put the provisions of the Cotton Cloth Act, 1918, into operation for the benefit of Bengal and for supplies of standard cloth in this province, as the Governments of Bihar and Orissa, the United Provinces and the Punjab have done?

(e) When can this province expect supplies of such standard cloth and at rates similar to those fixed by the Controller for the other provinces?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DONALD:—

(a) The prices of dhoties, saris and shirtings are undoubtedly high compared with pre-war prices, and the poorer classes must be feeling the effects. It is to be noted, however, that the prevalence of abnormally high prices is common to most parts of the world, as the result of the war, the consequent decrease of production, difficulties of freight and the diminished purchasing value of money.

(b) A statement showing retail prices in Calcutta for the month of January is laid upon the table. The prices in the interior vary from place to place.

(c) Government get weekly statistics of the prices of various cloths from all district officers.

(d) Government have been in communication with the Government of India and the Controller of Cotton Cloth on the subject. For the answers to the latter part of (d) and (e) the Hon'ble Member is referred to the statement which will be made in connection with the resolution on the same subject which will be moved at the present Council meeting."

ement referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DONALD to question No. III (Starred), asked by the Hon'ble RAI DEBENDER CHUNDER GHOSE BAHADUR at the Council meeting of the 18th February, 1919, showing the retail prices in Calcutta for certain classes of cloth in common use.

Municipal Administration of Serampore
and Bansberia.

(a) With reference to Bengal Government Resolution No. 287 M., dated the 27th January, 1919, will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) what measures, if any, are proposed to be taken to set right the present municipal administration of Serampore and Bansberia in the Hooghly district; and

(ii) whether Government asked the several District Magistrates of the Dacca and Chittagong Divisions for explanations regarding their negligence in not making the usual inspections of the several municipal institutions in their districts?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the several explanations as rendered by them?

(c) If no explanations have been asked for, can the Government give any reason for such remissness on the part of the district officers?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY:—

“(a) (i) It is the duty of the municipal commissioners to reform the administration. A reference on the subject is being made to them.

(ii) The answer is in the negative.

(b) This question does not arise.

(c) In the absence of explanations, Government are not in a position to ascribe reasons.”

High Court decision in the case of the Secretary of State vs. the Maharajadhiraja
Bahadur of Burdwan.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the recent decision of the Calcutta High Court in the case of the Secretary of State vs. the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, reported in 22 C. W. N., p. 872, that chars formed in non-navigable rivers are not resumable under Bengal Regulation XI of 1825?

(b) Are the Government aware that in many small and non-navigable rivers in the Mymensingh district such chars formed after the survey settlements of 1851-52 are being resumed and assessed?

(c) If so, are the Government considering the desirability, in view of the above decision, of stopping further proceedings in these resumption cases and of releasing those lands which have already been resumed?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

“(a) The decision of the Calcutta High Court referred to by the Hon'ble Member is under appeal before the Privy Council. The effect of the decision has not however been correctly stated in the question.

(b) Government have no definite information, but understand that revenue is being assessed on such accretions as are resumable under the Bengal Regulations.

(c) No.”

VI.

(a) Is it a fact that industrial surveys were undertaken by the Government of Bengal at various times? Industrial surveys and improvement of industries.

(b) If so, has anything definite resulted from any of these surveys?

(c) Is it a fact that none of these surveys was made by officers with a technical knowledge of industry?

(d) Is there any appropriate organization of specialised experts for the improvement of the industries of Bengal?

(e) Has any substantial advance been made to remedy the deficiencies, if any, after the appointment of the Director of Industries, Bengal, and what definite progress has been made in the development of industries after this appointment?

(f) What steps, if any, are the Government contemplating to improve the local industries?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

“(a) Yes, noticeably by Messrs. Collin, Cumming, J. N. Gupta, Swan and Ascoli.

(b) The general improvement of technical education and particularly the appointments of a Superintendent of Industries and of a Government School of Weaving (with an expert as its Principal) may be taken as definite results of these surveys, while action was also taken towards the provision and extension of State scholarships for industrial education.

(c) Yes.

(d) Except the organisation provided by the Indian Munitions Board, of which the encouragement of local industries is a prominent object, there is no organisation of specialised experts. There is however an expert at the head of the Government School of Weaving, and there are experts in the Forest and Agricultural Departments, while an expert has been engaged as chemist to the research tannery now being established in Calcutta.

(e) The Director of Industries, almost as soon as he was appointed, was made Controller of Munitions for Bengal, and his activities have been largely directed to the fostering of such local industries as were of immediate value in relieving the war situation. Much has been done in that way as explained in a speech delivered by His Excellency on the 15th November last. A further and fuller account of some of the results achieved can be found in the Indian Munitions Board hand-book, a new edition of which is shortly to be published.

(f) Government are awaiting a pronouncement from the Government of India on the Report of the Industrial Commission before undertaking the development of the Department of Industries, but such development is regarded as one of the important needs of the province at the present time."

irrigation works.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the amount of money spent this year in each of the various districts of Bengal on irrigation works and the nature of the work done in each district?

(b) Are the Government considering the advisability of spending more money on irrigation for the benefit of the raiyats from the next year?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

" (a) The irrigation works in Bengal are—

- (i) The Midnapore Canal,
- (ii) The Eden Canal, from which areas in the districts of Midnapore, Burdwan and Hooghly are irrigated.

The amount provided for expenditure in the revised budget of the year 1918-19 is as follows :—

On the Midnapore Canal—

	Rs.
Extensions and improvements	1,600
Maintenance and repairs (The nature of these works are such as are found necessary for maintaining the canals in an efficient condition for purposes of navigation and irrigation)	87,000
Revenue establishment, which is necessary to be maintained for collection of irrigation water-rates and navigation tolls	33,000
Engineering establishment	19,000
Tools and plant and Refunds	17,200
The total expenditure will amount in the year 1918-19 to ...	1,57,800

On the Eden Canal—

	Rs.
Minor improvements	8,500
Maintenance and repairs	19,800
Revenue establishment	3,676
Engineering establishment	6,024
Tools and plant	350
Total	38,350

(b) The only new irrigation work now under consideration by this Government is the Damodar Canal Project. The project was submitted to the Government of India in the year 1915 and was received back with a note by the Inspector-General of Irrigation in 1917 for further consideration. In 1917-18 further surveys were taken up and continued in 1918-19. All the necessary data have now been collected and the project is being revised in accordance with the more recent instructions by the Inspector-General of Irrigation. During the year a provision of Rs. 4,430 has been made for expenditure on necessary surveys and this amount will be spent during the current year. In regard to future expenditure, this will depend on the sanction by the Secretary of State. As far as can be foreseen at present, the cost will be sixty lakhs.

Are the Government considering the advisability of observing the day of Saraswati Puja as a closed holiday in the Bengal Secretariat and its attached offices, so far as the attendance of Hindu assistants is concerned? Saraswati Puja holiday.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD:—

"The day of the Saraswati Puja is a public holiday under the Negotiable Instruments Act. The Bengal Secretariat and its attached offices are therefore closed for that day. Such urgent work as the exigencies of Government service make imperative is done as far as possible with non-Hindu assistants."

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS.

(Answers to which were laid on the table.)

By the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali:—

(a) Are the Government aware that in the month of February, 1918, a general election was held in the Kalna subdivision for the constitution of the Kalna Local Board? General election for the constitution of the Kalna Local Board.

(b) Is it a fact that a list of voters was prepared by Babu Ashutosh De, Circle Officer of Kalna?

(c) Is it a fact that the list of 1914 prepared by the same officer contained electors whose number was nearly double of those in the list of 1918 and that a large number of qualified electors was deprived of their franchise?

(d) Is it a fact that the circle officer struck off about half the number of names of electors sent to him by the President of the panchayat without giving any reason?

(e) Is it a fact that in the case of the Purbasthali chaukidari union, and especially the village Chopi, a large number of new names was put in the current list?

(f) Is it a fact that a large number of qualified electors applied to the District Magistrate for the inclusion of their names in the list, and that the applications were sent to the circle officer for disposal, who rejected nearly 90 per cent. of the petitions without inquiry?

(g) Is it a fact that in the Manteswar thana the circle officer is alleged to have used undue influence with some of the applicants who insisted on their right to exercise their franchise?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“ (a) The answer is in the affirmative.

(b) The officer's name is Babu Ashutosh Deb.

(c) There were 7,796 voters on the register in 1914 and 4,411 on the revised register prepared in 1918. A special inquiry has been made in four unions and it has been found that a considerable number of persons qualified to vote were omitted from the register in the latter year.

(d) It is reported that no names were sent up by the President Panchayat.

(e) The number of persons entered in the register fell from 286 to 201 in Purbasthali union and from 72 to 51 in Chopi village.

(f) Five petitions asking for the entry of 57 persons on the register were presented to the District Magistrate. They were sent to the Circle Officer not for disposal but for inquiry and report, and the District Magistrate himself passed orders on receipt of his report.

(g) Government have no information as to the allegations.”

Entry passes for taking forest produce, etc

(a) Are the Government aware that the forest officers of the Chittagong Hill-tracts require an entry fee (double if not paid at the time of entering) from every person, including those serving there, who take forest produce, etc., for domestic use?

(b) Is it a fact that the forest rules require that entry passes need only be obtained in the case of persons wishing to enter the forest for the purpose of cutting or purchasing forest produce for export?

(c) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of directing the Divisional Forest Officer not to insist on entry passes except in the case of persons who are dealers in the above produce?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

“ (a) The rule is as follows :—

‘ Persons wishing to enter the Chittagong Hill-tracts either for the purpose of cutting forest produce in the reserved or unclassed State forests (except those who go to cut sunn grass in the Government kholas) or for the purpose of purchasing from the hillmen forest produce, for export to the Chittagong Collectorate, must apply for an entry pass at one of the Forest Department toll-stations, and pay the prescribed fee of 8 annas per head.’

If this rule is infringed an offence is committed. Double entry-permit fees are not demanded, but offenders generally prefer to compound their offence by paying an additional 8 annas rather than go to Court.

Local residents of the Hill-tracts are not however required to take out entry-permits.

(b) The correct rule has been quoted above.

(c) No change in the existing rules regarding entry-permits is at present under the consideration of Government. The fact that entry fees have to be paid was taken into consideration when the existing schedule of rates for forest produce in the Hill-tracts was drawn up.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

3.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether it is the practice in the divisional offices of the Public Works Department and in the various district boards and municipalities to confine the call for tenders among only a limited number of contractors?

Call for tenders
by the Public Works Department, district boards
municipalities.

(b) Is it a fact that the late Executive Engineer of the Dacca Division made a departure from this practice by openly advertising, in newspapers and otherwise, for tenders from any contractor who satisfied certain conditions, including the making of a deposit?

(c) Is it a fact that the construction of large public buildings, such as the Mitford Hospital, has been undertaken by contractors at rates much below the Public Works rates?

(d) If the answer to clauses (b) and (c) above be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state whether the works were satisfactorily done by these outside contractors?

(e) Are the Government considering the desirability of directing that all tenders of the Public Works Department and local bodies should henceforth be openly advertised for in newspapers and otherwise?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley to a question on the same subject at the meeting of this Council held on the 26th November, 1918, from which it will be seen that the general practice of the Public Works Department and of local bodies is to call for tenders publicly, the degree of publicity varying with the importance of the work.

(b) and (c) The Executive Engineer, Dacca Division, followed the general practice and in the particular case referred to, viz., the reconstruction of the Mitford Hospital, received tenders at rates varying from $2\frac{1}{2}$ to $7\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. below the estimated rates. Such a result occurs frequently.

(d) Works in the Dacca Division are being satisfactorily carried out under the supervision of the officers of the Department by contractors who reside in the neighbourhood.

(e) As a result of certain recommendations contained in the Report of 1917 of the Public Works Department Reorganization Committee and in accordance with the conclusions thereon arrived at by the Government of India, the attention of all Public Works Department officers has again been drawn to the desirability of widely advertising for tenders with a view to the further encouragement of private enterprise in regard to the execution of Public Works."

(a) With regard to the method of distribution of the seed of Kakya Bombai jute and Indrasail paddy, referred to in paragraph 13 of the last annual report on Agriculture, will the Government be pleased to state how far the expectations of the Department have been realised in this matter?

Supply of seeds of jute and paddy to cultivators

(b) What arrangements are there to ensure that the growers, to whom the packets and bags of seed are ultimately supplied, follow the directions given by the Department for reserving the resulting crop for seed next year?

(c) How many cultivators have been so supplied with seeds, and in what areas?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McALPIN :—

“(a) The system of distribution has proved an effective method of distributing new varieties in the districts and has rendered it possible to give the cultivators of all the districts in East and North Bengal an equal chance of growing the seed instead of only those who live near the Central Farms.

(b) This depends on the people themselves; but every endeavour is made by the district staffs of the Department to see that the people understand the principles underlying the seed distribution.

(c) A statement is laid on the Library table. 165,076 cultivators have been supplied with Kakya Bombai jute seed and 25,688 with Indrasail paddy.

Latrine accommodation comprised 250 to 300 seats; 39 sweepers were engaged for latrine work. The water-supply was derived from two tanks which were fenced with bamboo and reserved for drinking purposes under a police guard; 221 constables were on duty at the mêla. Two other tanks were set aside for bathing and washing utensils, etc. In addition to water from the reserved tanks, some 200 to 300 large jars of water were taken to the mêla for the use of the police and others. The mêla site was laid out on a definite plan with thoroughfares marked on the ground; temporary quarters were erected for the Police and other supervising officers. The whole area was lighted with incandescent lamps. Some temporary sheds were erected for the treatment and segregation of the sick, and a supply of bamboo bedsteads and blankets provided. Hospital work was placed under the charge of a Sub-Assistant Surgeon. For the disposal of the dead, four Doms were provided. In addition to the medical staff provided by the District Board, the Ram Krishna Mission sent three or four medical men, who were also assisted by a number of volunteers. This voluntary organisation did excellent work during the mêla.

(b) The Sanitary Commissioner received intimation on the 17th and at once took action. Telegrams were sent to the Civil Surgeons and District Magistrates of districts through which the main pilgrim routes pass, warning them to take measures against the spread of cholera by returning pilgrims; the Sanitary Commissioners of adjacent provinces were also informed. A Deputy Sanitary Commissioner was deputed to Diamond Harbour and another was sent to consult with the Magistrate of Midnapore with a view to arranging for measures of prevention at Contai and the vicinity. The Railway Companies were addressed and asked to take precautions. Chairmen of municipalities were also communicated with and asked to take immediate steps in case cholera was introduced by returning pilgrims.

(c) (i) and (ii) 9 deaths from cholera occurred at Saugor Island and the Health Officer of Calcutta reports that up to 21st January 217 deaths took place among returned pilgrims in Calcutta.

(d) (i) The attached statement gives the names of the steamers and flats which conveyed pilgrims to and from Saugor Island together with the capacity of the water tanks carried by them. As stated in answer to question (a), there are four tanks on Saugor Island in the vicinity of the mêla ground, and two of these were fenced in with bamboo railings and reserved for drinking purposes, being guarded by police. In addition to this, large jars of water numbering 200 to 300 were taken for the use of the police and others at the mêla.

(ii) The two tanks reserved for drinking purposes were fenced and guarded, as already stated.

(iii) The District Board arranged for a temporary dispensary and hospital in charge of a Sub-Assistant Surgeon and a compounder was arranged for by the District Board. Besides this the Ram Krishna Mission and the Marwari Association sent three or four doctors and a volunteer staff.

As regards medical assistance on board the steamers, those belonging to the India General Steam Navigation Company and Rivers Steam Navigation Company employed three medical graduates and three officers of the Sub-Assistant Surgeon class. The steamers of Messrs. Hoare, Miller & Co. carried three doctors of the Sub-Assistant Surgeon class supplied by the Marwari Association.

(e) Government have called for and are awaiting a detailed report on the outbreak from the Sanitary Commissioner.

(f) No detailed statement as to the measures advisable to prevent a recurrence of similar outbreaks can be given until the report referred to has been received and considered."

Cess revaluation proceedings.

(a) In what areas are cess revaluation proceedings going on at present?
 (b) With regard to the cess revaluation proceedings that are going on, will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) whether the cultivating tenants who have sub-let any portion of their holdings to under-raiyats and have been recorded in the settlement proceedings as shtitiban-raiyat or madhya-sattadhi-kari, khajana bridhir jogya have been assessed to cesses as tenure-holders in respect of their entire holdings:

- (ii) whether agricultural lands in the khas possession of zamindars or talukdars, are being assessed on a basis higher than the prevailing rates of rent in the village:
- (iii) whether in the case of such khas lands when let out in barga to others, the value of the produce (which is higher than the prevailing rate of rent) has been adopted as the basis for assessment;
- (iv) whether in the case of lands, in respect of which the entries in the record-of-rights show either that no rent is paid by the tenant and accepted by the landlord, or that no rent has been fixed, the valuation for the purpose of assessment of cesses has been generally made much higher than the prevailing rates of rent in the village:
- (v) whether in respect of lands included in the landlord's khas khatian, as being patit, the valuation has been made much higher than the prevailing rates of rent in the village, and
- (vi) whether any cesses are being assessed on nullas and halats, which though included in the landlord's khas khatian are used by the public in general?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

“(a) Cess revaluation proceedings are at present in progress in the districts of Bakarganj, Midnapore, Mymensingh, Noakhali, Rajshahi and a part of the 24-Parganas.

(b) (i) Yes, except where the sub-letting is of a temporary nature. The practice referred to is in accordance with the provisions of the Cess Act of 1880.

(ii) No.

(iii) An estimate of the value of the produce received by the landlord forms the basis of assessment.

(iv) No.

(v) No.

(vi) Ordinarily nulla and halats are excluded from assessment.”

(a) Have the Government received any representation or scheme from the people of Jessore or from the District Board of Jessore, suggesting the improvement of the water-course of the river Bhairab? Improvement of the water-course of the

(b) If so, have the Government inquired into the possibilities of the proposals contained therein being carried into effect?

(c) What action, if any, do the Government propose to take in regard thereto, and when approximately?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state whether suggestions for the improvement of water-ways have been received from the people of any other district? If so, what action, if any, do the Government propose to take thereon?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

“(a) and (b) Suggestions for the improvement of the water-course of the river Bhairab have been received at intervals during the last half century from the District Board of Jessore and from persons, both official and non-official, interested in the question of the improvement of the rivers of that district. The problem is extremely difficult and complex. Various schemes were submitted by officers of Government between 1865 and 1906 for effecting improvements in the condition of the river. A scheme was worked out in 1906 for draining the bils lying on each side of the river into the main river, and for deepening and straightening the channel of the river below Jessore.

The cost of this scheme was estimated to be ten and a half lakhs.

(c) Government do not propose to take any action on the schemes previously prepared, as it was found that they did not entirely meet all the conditions of the problem. As an outcome of the investigations in the Jessore Drainage Division, a new scheme for the improvement of the river, including the admission of water for flushing from the rivers Matabhanga and Nava-ganga, is now under preparation, and it is hoped that a portion of the whole scheme will be ready for the consideration of Government in the course of the year 1919-1920. A sum of half a lakh has been included in the budget of 1919-1920 for making a commencement on the project, if it be found practicable as an engineering proposition.

(d) As regards other districts in the Presidency, suggestions for the improvement of waterways therein have been received from various sources. Action has been taken by Government to investigate problems of this nature from the points of view of navigation, sanitation, drainage or agricultural improvement in the districts of the 24-Parganas, Nadia, Khulna, Dacca, Faridpur and Bakarganj; but it is not practicable within the limits of an answer to the present question to give complete information on the subject."

(c) If the answer to either clause (a) or (b) be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table the letters which may have been received from the district boards on the subject?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY:—

Rates of pay of ministerial officers of civil and criminal courts in Eastern and Western Bengal.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing these rates of pay in all the different grades, as obtaining in the two parts of Bengal?

(c) If the answer to (a) be in the affirmative, what are the reasons for this inequality, and are there any proposals for its removal?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

“(a) Yes.

(b) As to the lower division, the following statement represents the percentage of clerks in different grades. With regard to ministerial officers on pay above Rs. 50 each office is provided for on its own merits.

For District offices in Western Bengal				For Judicial Courts in Western Bengal.
			Rs.				Rs.

10 on	45	10 on	45

30 on	35
33 on	30
<hr/>				<hr/>
<hr/>				<hr/>

(c) The principal reason for this inequality is the fact that the scales for Eastern Bengal and Western Bengal were laid down separately while these areas formed parts of different provinces. The question of the revision of pay of all ministerial officers in order to bring the Eastern Bengal districts and the Western Bengal districts into uniformity was considered in 1915, but financial consideration precluded Government from then giving effect to the scheme.”

(a) What are the terms and conditions on which probationers are employed in the offices of civil and criminal courts in Eastern and Western Bengal?

Employment of probationers in the civil and criminal courts in Eastern and Western Bengal.

(b) Is it a fact that unless the probationers succeed in being appointed to a permanent position within a certain period, they are removed from office?

(c) Is it also a fact that outsiders or officers from other offices are sometimes appointed to permanent positions over the heads of probationers; and that the inability of the latter to secure permanent appointments within the period fixed is sometimes due to such supersessions?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD :—

(a) Candidates as probationers must possess certain educational qualifications, must not be over 22 years of age and must produce a certificate of good moral character. Candidates are frequently selected after examination. The pay of probationers in Eastern Bengal is Rs. 15. and in Western Bengal Rs. 10.

(b) The period of probation is ordinarily limited to two years which may be extended to three years at the discretion of the head of the office. This rule is not strictly enforced.

(c) Probationers have the first claim to officiating vacancies in the office to which they are attached, but for permanent vacancies the head of the office has the power of introducing outsiders who satisfy the rules. As a matter of practice, it is believed to be seldom that other than probationers are given permanent vacancies which arise."

(a) Is it a fact—

(i) that the District Magistrate, the Sadar Subdivisional Officer and the Superintendent of Police of Bankura are in the habit of touring together in the interior of the district in the same motor car;

(ii) that they tour together regardless of the question whether their concerted action is necessary on any particular occasion or not; and

(iii) that in many districts touring on the part of officials consists more in driving than in actual camping?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of instituting an inquiry as to how touring on the part of district officials can be attended with a maximum of advantage to the people and with a minimum of cost to the Government?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a comparative statement showing, district by district and year by year, the amount of travelling allowances drawn by District Magistrates and Superintendents of Police in Bengal during the last five years?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

(a) (i) and (ii) No. The officers named have travelled together in the same motor car only on four occasions since the 1st April, 1918, and on each occasion reasons of a public nature necessitated their doing so

(iii) The allegation which is here inferred is of too general a character to permit of an answer as to its accuracy.

(b) The whole question was examined three years ago in connection with the report of the District Administration Committee. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the orders contained in Resolution No. 176 A., dated the 10th January, 1916, which was published in the Calcutta Gazette of the 12th January, 1916. Raising of a fund in Bankura for the reception of His Excellency the Governor

Is it a fact—

- (a) that the Sub-Registrar of Bankura realized a subscription for every document presented for registration before him to raise a fund for the reception of His Excellency the Governor of Bengal on the occasion of His Excellency's last visit to Bankura;
- (b) that he was asked by the District Magistrate of Bankura to raise subscriptions for the above-mentioned purpose and that he realized subscriptions under his orders; and
- (c) that the Munsifs and the Subordinate Judge of Bankura were similarly asked to raise subscriptions from the litigants?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“ The facts are as follows :—

When intimation was received of His Excellency's proposed visit to Bankura, a largely attended public meeting was held and a general reception committee of about 150 members was appointed, including all the leading officials and non-officials. The District Magistrate was elected President of the committee and the sub-registrar was one of the members. One of the resolutions of the meeting was that ‘ the members of the general committee be requested to raise subscriptions and to send the same to the Honorary Treasurer.’ In pursuance of this resolution letters were issued in identical terms by the President of the reception committee to a number of members including the sub-registrar, the secretaries of Bar libraries, the Principal of the College, zamindars, panchayats and others. The subordinate judge and the munsifs were not asked to raise subscriptions. The sub-registrar invited the public with whom he came in contact to subscribe. Out of 95 persons who registered documents while the subscription list was open, 66 subscribed and 29 did not subscribe.

Under the standing orders regarding the participation of Government officers in arrangements for the reception of His Excellency the Governor, they are at liberty to co-operate with non-officials and to preside over or serve on committees formed for the purpose, but they are prohibited from soliciting subscriptions. It has further been laid down that the collection of funds should be left to non-officials to whom it should be made clear that it is entirely optional for the people to subscribe or not. The District Magistrate of Bankura has been informed that his action in issuing an appeal for subscriptions is disapproved by Government.”

(c) If nothing has hitherto been done, will the Government be pleased to state whether they are considering the desirability of establishing a telegraphic communication between this island and the mainland?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. DONALD:—

(a) Government are not aware that His Excellency Lord Carmichael promised that steps would be taken to connect the island of Sandwip by telegraph with the mainland.

(b) The question does not arise.

(c) As explained by His Excellency the Governor on 6th August, 1918, in response to the addresses presented to him at Noakhali, during the war there were large restrictions on the use of telegraph material. As the situation in this respect has now presumably improved this Government will examine further the merits of a connection between Sandwip and Hatiya and the mainland."

Temporary services of Civil Assistant Surgeons.

(b) If so, does the temporary period count towards their pension and promotion?

(c) If not, are the Government considering the advisability of making such temporary service count towards their pension?

“ In normal times the answer to (a) is in the negative and so questions (b) and (c) do not arise. During the war, however, a certain number of Civil Assistant Surgeons has been recruited temporarily to fill the places of those deputed to military duty. Some of these have been confirmed on the occurrence of permanent vacancies, but in respect of their temporary service the answers to questions (b) and (c) are in the negative.”

Will the Government be pleased to state—

(a) what steps have been, or are being, taken in order to give effect to the relief measures foreshadowed in His Excellency the Governor's reply to the memorial presented on the 6th February, 1918, by the inhabitants of the flood-stricken area—

(i) by widening the Rohra khal,

(ii) by connecting the Kana Nadi with the Sarda khal by means of a channel, and

(iii) by widening the Gopinohunpur khal, with a view to drain away the spill of the Damuda;

(b) the nature and extent of the investigations carried on during the last flood season by the Public Works officer placed on the Damuda right embankment at Baikantapur; and

(c) whether, in the event of such investigations proving of considerable value, Government are considering the advisability of undertaking similar trial investigations at some such important centres as Khanakul in the Arambagh sub-division of the Hooghly district?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

“(a) (i) The Rohra khal is being surveyed: it is understood that the survey is approaching completion.

(ii) and (iii) The questions of connecting the Kana Nadi with the Sarda khal by means of a channel and of improvement by widening of the Gopinohunpur khal were investigated by Mr. Addams-Williams in April, 1918. As it is not anticipated that any good or stable results will follow the execution of either of these works, the proposals have been dropped.

(b) The inquiries made by the Public Works Department officer posted on the right bank of the Damodar at Baikantapur are confined to the embankment itself. As there was no flood of any magnitude during the year 1918, no observations could be made.

(c) No; Government do not consider any further observations are required at present, beyond those now being made in connection with the Rohra khal.”

Offending sermon at St. Andrew's Church.

“ A low type of religion may simply drive a man into unspeakable mire. An imperfect and incomplete religion, like Islam, may destroy the hope of full intimate personal communion with God, so great and paralysing is the gulf between Allah and the creature He has made, so far is the devotee from the assurance and joy of the Christian, comforted by the spirit bearing inward witness that he is God's Son; ”

(ii) that His Excellency the Governor was present when the sermon was delivered: and

(iii) that the Reverend gentleman in question receives a salary from public revenues?

(b) (i) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the Press Censor brought this matter to the notice of Government?

(ii) If so, when? and

(iii) What action, if any, have the Government taken in the matter?

(c) If no action has been taken in the matter, are the Government considering the desirability of taking some action in connection with this matter?

(d) If no action is proposed to be taken, will the Government be pleased to state the reasons for not taking any action?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR:—

(ii) and (iii) Yes.

(b), (c) and (d) The Press Censor brought the matter to the notice of Government on the 7th December, but in the opinion of the Local Government there was no occasion for interference on their part, and to that opinion they adhere.”

letter in the Epiphany.

“ Muhammadan world has been no philosopher in the true sense of the word nor has any freethinker born in them. Its founder Muhammad himself seems to have been a voluptuous man and as such he has established such a bad institution. We find not any such attribute in him that were possessed by the two latter. He had no touch of philosophy, and the Quran is but the translation of the Bible, only something altered.”?

(ii) If so, when? and

(iii) What action, if any, are the Government taking in the matter?

(d) If no action is proposed to be taken, will the Government be pleased to indicate why writings such as those which have been put in the Epiphany are allowed to pass with impunity?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“ The Press Censor brought the matter to the notice of Government on the 23rd January. For an answer to the rest of the question, the Hon'ble Member is referred to the communiqué which was issued on the 30th January.”

(b) whether the question of taking action against the said Editor under the Defence of India Criminal Law (Amendment) Act, 1915, and the rules made thereunder had been considered by Government; if so, will the Government be pleased to state the decision arrived at together with the reasons for such decision?

Appointment of a Principal for the Calcutta Commercial Institute.

(b) Has any attempt been made to secure a Principal in India?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) and (b) In pursuance of the recommendation of the Advisory Board of the Commercial Institute that a highly qualified Principal should be appointed at once and the post advertised for in India, the Government of India have been requested to move the Secretary of State to sanction the creation of a post for the Principal in the Indian Education Service and to grant permission to this Government to advertise for the appointment in India. LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.

THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919, be taken into consideration.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved, by way of amendment, that the Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, with the Report of the Select Committee, be republished.

He said :—

" My Lord, in bringing forward this motion, I beg to assure this Council that it is not my intention to delay by even a single day the introduction of a measure which, I can well foresee, augurs well for great improvements in the condition of the rural population of this Presidency. We are all agreed that so far as lessons in self-government are concerned, it is in the villages that the elementary principles must first be learned and that it is by experience in the lowest rungs of the ladder that we can aspire to a higher and higher measure of self-government in this country. It is because, my Lord, I feel the importance of this question that I have ventured to bring forward this motion in order that the public at large may have the fullest opportunity, not merely to discuss the provisions of the Bill as they now stand, but also in the light of experience and of local knowledge to place before your Excellency's Government such recommendations as will ultimately conduce to the success of this measure. It will be within the recollection of this Council that the Bill was originally introduced on the 4th April, 1918, and, in accordance with the rules, the Bill was duly published and circulated to various public bodies including District Boards, and to various leaders of public life and political thought in this country. A large volume of opinions has been collected when the Bill went into the Select Committee, and there are indications that all these opinions were very carefully considered, and I must say that the Select Committee devoted a good deal of time and labour in order to bring the provisions of the Bill in conformity with the opinions that had been expressed. But when all is said and done, it will at once appear from the list of amendments in the agenda paper that although substantial amendments have been made, the provisions as they stand are far from being satisfactory. There is one matter, for instance, to which I should like to draw the attention of this Council. There was a proposal at first to have a system of circle boards, which would have authority over what was originally thought to be village Committees, and these circle boards to work under the directions of the district boards. The Select Committee has done away with this proposal for having circle boards, the idea being that the work that was proposed to be made over to the circle boards would continue to be done by the present system of local boards. Whether the proposal for having circle boards or whether the suggestion of the Select Committee that it will be better to stick to the present system of having local boards—whether either of these two suggestions represents the considered opinion of the leaders of public thought in this country is a question which I need not discuss. But the fact remains that as soon as we get out of the very narrow area of operations as represented by the village committees, or the union boards, there are difficult and complicated problems which ought to be solved and solved in such a manner that the introduction of a system of self-government may be something like a real substantial measure. Having considered this question from the point of view which I am now submitting before this Council, I find, my Lord, that there are certain difficulties in the way—difficulties which in my opinion can hardly be ignored and which in some respects appear to me to be of a somewhat insurmountable character. I have read some of the opinions, and one comes from a gentleman who occupies the position of a non-official chairman of a district board in this presidency, who thinks that taken all in all the Bill itself is a retrograde measure and ought not to be introduced in this Council. So far as that opinion is concerned, I beg to differ from him: I do not consider this to be a retrograde measure, provided only some amendments perhaps of some substantial nature are made in the provisions of the Bill. But when all these matters are considered it will be seen that the Bill after it has emerged out of the Select Committee has been so thoroughly recast that it is necessary in the interests of all concerned that the public should once again have an opportunity of expressing their views on the provisions of the Bill. It may be said that with all these amendments before us, this Council will have the fullest opportunity of discussing them, and after these discussions it will be time enough to consider whether the law as it stands or as it will stand after the amendments are accepted by this Council, or at least some of them have been accepted, will or will not satisfy the requirements of the case. But, my Lord, it is one thing for Hon'ble Members here in taking part in the debate, which will be more or less of a formal, and until the Bill was committed to the Select Committee, and when the Select Committee sat over it, deliberating over the provisions and then submitted their Report to this Council, then and then only we woke up to the responsibilities of our position, and within the 14 days at our disposal we managed to send in notices of our amendments which came up to about 283 in number. I say all this because I feel that the country at large has now realised that Government is in earnest in introducing a measure of this kind, and whether they express their opinion or not, if they have got ultimately to complain, they will have themselves to blame, and judgment will go against them by default. The people do realise it now ; and therefore I venture to hope that if this Bill is republished, your Excellency's Government will find suggestions of a very important character coming from unexpected sources.

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

I do not wish to take up the time of this Council, because, shortly put, my reason is that in view of the very great importance of the provisions of the Bill and in view of the importance of the measure itself, it is necessary that the matter should be considered and reconsidered ; and, if possible, considered again before it is put on the Statute Book. There is nothing to be lost in a little delay, there may be much for which we may have to regret by hurry, and since there is no great urgency in the measure I beg respectfully to submit that the public should be given another opportunity, in view particularly of the fact that the Select Committee have made substantial amendments and that the Bill as it has emerged out of the Select Committee is in many respects a totally different measure from the one on which public opinion had been collected before the commitment of the Bill to the Select Committee.

With these few words, I beg to commend this motion for the acceptance of your Excellency's Government and of this Council."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I am unable to advise the Council to accept the amendment which has been moved. When I received notice of it, I was at some loss to imagine the reasons which the Hon'ble Member would put forward in its favour ; and I must say that, even now, after having heard his speech, I am still not clear, beyond the generalities with which he has favoured us, why precisely we should take the course which he now desires : neither does his argument seem to me to be always consistent. He begins by saying that he has no desire to delay a measure which, he admits, augurs well for the future of village self-government, and he is himself conscious of the importance of the development of that side of the administration. Then he proceeds to argue that as we have gone on so far without these changes, we may as well go on a little longer, and finally he holds out the prospect that even if we republish the Bill for general consideration now we might, even on receipt of the replies, advantageously do so a third time. Surely the disclaimer with which he opened his speech and the statement with which he closed it are hardly consistent.

Apart from this, as far as I followed him, his theory is that the Select Committee has materially recast the Bill and made changes of principle in it which render it, in fact, a different measure from what it was when Sir S. P. Sinha introduced it in April, 1918. That contention, Sir, I do not think is valid, nor will it be borne out by a study of the amendments proposed by the Select Committee. The one main amendment of substance which we made in the Select Committee was to drop circle boards ; but even that was not a proposal which sprang from the heads of the members of the Select Committee, having no basis anywhere else. It was merely action taken after consideration of the opinions that were received and the criticisms that were y those whom we consulted. Assuming that the circle boards be it cannot be said that we have made any further radical departure, we have fallen back on the existing system of local boards, and not, therefore, materially changed the lines of the present Local Government Act. I think I remarked at a previous meeting that I discarded the idea of doing away with local boards, leaving the whole system to be run by district boards, working possibly through a system of standing committees, which might have been described as a revolutionary change in the Bill as originally framed. Apart from that, I think it can be shown that our amendments are largely verbal and immaterial, following, for instance, from the dropping of circle boards, and changes in nomenclature by the adoption of the words 'union board', 'union council' and 'union court'; other verbal changes were designed to make various sections more clear, or to embody what seemed to us to be improvements. But, in substance, the Bill as it emerged from the Select Committee remains what it was when it was sent to the Select Committee: to say, the Bill is designed to set up small local authorities in groups which are called unions; to put in the hands of those local authorities the old powers of chaukidari panchayats and the duties of the local self-government committees; to give them extended powers in matters of sanitation, the like, so that they may exercise a greater influence for good, and to give them slightly wider powers of taxation so that they can finance these improvements; finally the Bill attaches to selected members of union boards minor criminal and civil powers. That is what the Bill started with, and that is what the Bill has ended with, at its present stage, and it cannot be said that it is substantially different from what it was originally. So, I maintain that it cuts away most of the grounds of the hon'ble member's proposal; and it is also curious that he can only tell us in general terms that the provisions are still far from satisfactory. That is a criticism which it is perfectly easy to make, but we surely may ask for more detail. The only specific point he mentioned was the abolition of circle boards, with which I have already dealt, although I am not clear whether the hon'ble member himself approves or disapproves of that change. It is noticeable that it has not been challenged in any amendment. Other hon'ble members tell us vaguely that the question is full of problems and difficulties, but they do not carry us much further. It brings us, however, to another proposition of the hon'ble member, namely that this Council is not fit to make amendments as it has not got the requisite knowledge, and that we refer the matter to public opinion at large. If we accept that argument, we may well dissolve ourselves entirely, as evidently we are absolutely incompetent to discharge our functions, but it is obviously a far-reaching proposition which will carry us into rather an unacceptable conclusion.

It is a fact that a great many amendments have been tabled; but the list is rather appalling at first sight. I think on analysis it would be found that there are not so many defects in the Bill as might be supposed.

Many of the amendments overlap; many of them are consequential on one another, and if we look at the main points which have been raised by them, they reduce themselves very much to the following:—There are a certain number of amendments dealing with the position of circle officers, whom some hon'ble members would apparently like to be eliminated. We have rather more amendments dealing with the position of the district board and the district magistrate respecting the superintendence of these union boards. Apparently, some hon'ble members have taken a blue pencil and have substituted the words 'district board' for 'district magistrate' wherever the latter occur, and have so tabled a considerable number of amendments of that class. Then, we have a certain number of amendments touching the qualifications of voters for these unions. That, however, is a matter of detail, and nobody has challenged the principle of election. Then, we come to a considerable number of amendments connected with the control over dafadars and chaukidars which, as I think we all know, is a subject of a very longstanding in Bengal. Whenever a Bill of this kind is brought forward, whether it is referred to the country two times or three times, I prognosticate that we will have the same old arguments in Council about the proper position of chaukidars vis à vis the village on the one side and the police on the other, which have been brought forward continuously for many years. Then, we have amendments dealing with the functions of union boards, but not in any sense challenging the main principles of the Bill, and amendments made with a desire to make it obligatory on Government and district boards to make statutory grants to these smaller bodies ; that again is a question of detail which can be discussed in Council, and it does not interfere with the fundamental character of the Bill. Lastly, we have minor amendments with regard to the procedure of union benches and courts.

That, Sir, is the general nature of the amendments suggested, and I submit that we are perfectly competent now to discuss them and to arrive at decisions. I would again point out to the Council that this is in no sense a new measure : it traces its origin at least to the Police Commission in Lord Curzon's time : from there we can trace it to the Decentralization Commission in 1907-09, and so to the District Administration Committee of 1913-14. Can anybody under these circumstances say that this subject is a new one on which the province has not had sufficient time to make up its mind ? It is not a new one ; it is almost grey with age. I submit that a further expression of public opinion would not help matters much, as singularly little interest has so far been taken in the matter, although, within the last two days, two prominent Calcutta papers have had articles on the subject. It is noticeable that one of these papers specifically approved of the abolition of circle boards.

Therefore, Sir, on all these grounds I submit that we should not be well advised to adopt the procedure which has been urged."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, there is always much to be said against slackness and in favour of despatch. I indicated at the very outset that the proposal that I made would entail some delay, but I sought to justify my suggestion on the ground of the importance of the measure which we are now discussing. It is true that I have confined myself more or less to making general remarks, because, on a motion of this character, I thought that it would not be open to me to go very much into details, having regard to the fact that my substantial proposal is that the provisions of the Bill may be again reconsidered by the general public. If this motion is defeated and if I am to move the next amendment, perhaps I will be able to go into somewhat fuller details. I never intended to convey the idea that this Council is not competent to deal with this Bill on the ground that we have not got the requisite local knowledge or experience. What I wanted to say was this—that we are here about 50 of us who would have to express opinions on the provisions of the Bill in a debate of a more or less formal character. We had just a fortnight under the rules to read the Bill as amended by the Select Committee, to go through the various opinions that had been expressed on the provisions of the Bill as it originally stood, and then formulate our amendments within this brief period of a fortnight. I hope the Hon'ble Members, on my left, who are members of the public service, will be pleased to recollect that the members on my right are not wholtime servants of this Council, that they have got other businesses to attend to, that their time is not their own and it is only by little snatches from amidst various engagements that they can find time to consider the subjects that come up for discussion in this Council, and in matters like this to make proposals or amendments as regards important legislative enactments : a fortnight is much too brief a period, I beg respectfully to submit, for a study of two big volumes like these, my Lord, to compare how far the opinions have become obsolete by reason of the amendments that have been made by the Select Committee and then consider the Bill as amended by the Select Committee and suggest amendments. I can say that if I am given a few days more, I can bring forward half a dozen more amendments of a very important character. I know some have escaped from my memory, and it even struck me last night that I could have suggested them. I am extremely sorry that I had not time to suggest them. So it is no use saying that we can certainly deal with amendments : we have got the jurisdiction to do so, and as a matter of fact we can dispose of the amendments after discussion one way or the other. But can it be said that this formal discussion will be sufficient for the consideration of the problem in all its aspects, and is it not somewhat different for a man who can read at leisure to consider it in all its bearings and take some time to make suggestions and amendments ? As a matter of fact, the amendments that we have got now before the Council are the amendments which the Hon'ble Members have been able to suggest in the briefest period of time, after having studied the collections of opinions in the two volumes which we have got. Therefore what I meant to say was that although we are certainly able to discuss the provisions of the Bill or to make whatever amendments which seemed to us to be necessary, it is something quite different for the Bill to be before the public once again, so that they might have time and leisure to formulate their opinions. I do not wish to repeat my arguments. I once again press this motion before the Council in the hope that the proposal will be accepted."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Huq.

The motion was then put and a division was taken with the following result :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Huq moved, by way of amendment, that the Bill be recommitted to the Select Committee.

He said :—

“In bringing forward this motion I do not wish to go over the ground traversed in the discussions on the previous motion, but I will put forward my reasons very briefly. The Bill as amended by the Select Committee was introduced in this Council on the 18th January, and under the rules the 3rd of February was the last date for sending notice of amendments. Fourteen days is the time allowed under the rules for giving notice of amendments, and although fourteen days may be quite sufficient for studying a Bill of ordinary importance, it is certainly not sufficient for the study of so important a measure. The information that was collated and compiled by the Legislative Department came up to two big volumes, the bare study of which would take several weeks. Over and above that, we had not merely to consider the opinions that had been collected, but also to consider the various provisions of the Bill with reference to the opinions that had been expressed, and after we had done all that we are called upon to formulate our proposals by way of amendments to the provisions of the Bill. I submit that the time at our disposal was much too short for discharging business of so important and onerous a character. Along with this, I would respectfully ask your Excellency's Government to consider what I have already submitted before this Council that most of us on this side of the House have got other important duties to attend to, and we have really very little time at our disposal to devote for consideration of important question like this. The Select Committee has no doubt made some important amendments to the original Bill, but even then there are certain matters which the Select Committee has not taken into consideration. I say 'has not taken into consideration' because I find that on the matters to which I now refer, there seems to be an almost unanimity of opinion that the provisions of the Bill ought to be changed. One of these is as regards the question of finance of the union board. I am surprised, and I say it with some regret, that there were Indian members in the Select Committee, and they did not realise the importance of this question from the point of view of making this experiment a success. We all know that the people in the rural areas are poor, but I do not know if the members of the Select Committee have really any adequate idea of the appalling poverty of the people in the rural areas. The District Boards in Bengal have got an aggregate average income of Rs. 3,88,125, and if we take the number of villages in a district on the average to be 3,000, that works out to about Rs. 125 as the amount that can be collected from the village by way of taxes and in the shape of road cess and public works cess. Now it may be that in grouping, these village union boards would consist of from 8 to 10 villages, and they would give us about Rs. 1,000 a year from road cess and public works cess, if the whole of that money goes into the hands of the union board. Possibly the District Boards will not agree to that, but they will make some grant. Let us say that the union board gets a grant which, together with the amount which they can raise by taxation in the village union, gives the union board an income of Rs. 1,000 a year. With this income they have got to pay the dafadars and chaukidars and to meet other expenses incidental to the union benches and union courts, and over and above that they will be called upon to undertake schemes of great importance, sanitary schemes, schemes for the improvements of the sanitation of the village, village roads, and some amount of money must be spent on elementary education, and so on. The question of funds, therefore, becomes of very great importance, and unless the union boards are substantially helped by grants from provincial revenues, I can say with the utmost confidence that any experiment in this direction is bound to end in failure. It is no use calling upon the villagers to form themselves into union boards, to tell them to improve the sanitation of the village, to teach them all kinds of things about improved hygiene and sanitation and at the same time to leave them to cope with their work with the slender resources at their disposal. We all know that some of the municipalities in this province have been condemned for inefficiency. I notice that there is at least one District Magistrate who attributed this inefficiency to the lack of public spirit on the part of the people of this country. I do not know whether that charge is well founded or not, because I have no experience of that portion of the country which is in charge of that particular magistrate, but I can say this much that the failure of the municipalities to produce better results is due not to the want of enthusiasm on the part of Indians, not for the want of capacity of the Indians to take upon themselves responsible tasks in the direction of self-government, but because of the lack of funds; and if the union boards are also called upon to undertake duties of such a responsible character with such slender resources at their disposal, the result will be a lamentable failure, which will be put to the discredit of the people of the country. I protest most strongly, my Lord, and I protest with all the emphasis that I can command, against the inauguration of a system of self-government in villages and leaving the people in the lurch and say—'you had better find funds for yourself'. The people are poor, and as will appear from even published Government reports, poor far below the standard in Europe or any other country. This is a matter which the Select Committee has not considered, and what will be the result? On that matter some mistakes have been made. Supposing I press that the whole of the money should come from local funds, that matter will be discussed in this Council, and there will be a division, and having regard to the fact that some of the non-official members from this side of the House are absent to-day, I know what the result of the division will be, and we will lose the motion. The result will be that the suggestion of such an important character, which has the unanimous voice of the country behind it, will be lost, simply because some of the members have not considered it their duty to come and attend the Council. My Lord, if this matter be committed to Select Committee, you will find that there is a large volume of opinion behind it, and if the members of the Select Committee take up this question, there will be no further necessity of discussing this matter in this Council. Then, my Lord, there are the amendments which are proposed that the District Magistrate should not be given all the powers that the Bill proposes to give them, and that in place of the District Magistrates, the appellate authority should be the District Board. This is by way of amendments which we have been able to put forward before this Council, and can't I see what the result of these amendments will be? Votes on my right are given solid, but votes on my right are divided, and there are also members who do not attend, and the result is that although we are a majority of non-officials in this Council, it is only an illusory majority. I do not wish to leave any amendment to be decided by a division of votes in this Council, but would rather appeal to the Hon'ble Member in charge to consider the suggestions in accordance with their importance and on their merits, and I would also, failing that, like these matters to be considered coolly and calmly by a Select Committee, where we can have a more informal discussion, rather than in a discussion which partakes of the nature of a formal debate. I have already indicated that the time at our disposal is too short. Having regard to the fact that this Bill is of such an important character, I beg to submit that the Bill, in view of the suggestions that have been made, be recommitted to the Select Committee so that we may have a further opportunity of discussing the Bill and proposing further amendments for the Select Committee who may choose to accept the suggestion which we put forward. My only reason is, I confess, that 14 days is not sufficient, and if a little more time is given, perhaps we would be able to make important and substantial suggestions. My formal motion might have meant delay which the Hon'ble Members perhaps were not prepared to accept, but this motion will not entail a delay of more than a few months, I think, or even a few weeks. If it is recommended by the Select Committee perhaps the Bill might be passed into law during this session of this Council."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Huq.

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, I am in favour of this resolution, but my reasons are entirely different from those of the hon'ble mover. One reason why I support this resolution is that I find 283 amendments still before us, and I dare say that many of these amendments must be worth considering, and I for one believe that the Select Committee is a much better place for considering many of these amendments than this Council. In the Select Committee, when matters are discussed across the table, reasons in favour and reasons against can be much better threshed out.

Then, my Lord, I find that the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has brought forward at least two amendments, No. 5 amendment to clause 1A and No. 7 to clause 1B. That at any rate indicates that after the matter was gone through in the Select Committee, the Hon'ble Member in charge thought that it was necessary to have these amendments. There are also various important questions which require consideration. For example, there is the question about the residence clause of the voters, and the residence clause of the members. It has been suggested in the Bill that although a certain person may be tax-payer, if he is not ordinarily a resident in the village he should not be a voter even. Some of us think that if he is not ordinarily a resident in the village, he does not take sufficient interest to enable him to sit as a member of a village union board, but so long as he is a tax-payer, he ought to be a voter. There are various other important questions of principle upon which amendments have been brought forward. For instance, my Lord, there is the question of finance of these village boards. I do not agree with my Hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq that the district board or the village boards will not be able to find sufficient money to carry on the duties which will be entrusted to these unions. If they are not able to find the money, then I would say that it is no good having an Act on paper if money cannot be found to carry out the provisions of the Act. To start with, my Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

Hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq is not right when he says that the total income of the district boards is 78 lakhs of rupees—it is over a crore of rupees, and there are 24 district boards, and their total income is about a crore and 7 lakhs of rupees. I do not expect that the district boards will pay all their income to the union boards, but I do expect that the district boards will pay some portion of their income as contributions to the village union boards, if not for any other reason, for the simple reason that the village boards will take up some of the responsibilities of the district boards. So far as the contribution of the district boards is concerned, the Select Committee has decided that the matter should be left to the discretion of the district board. There may be a good deal to be said in favour of that decision. Another view has been put forward, that a certain portion of the total expense of the union boards should be met by the district boards. There may be a good deal in that also, but these are points which can perhaps be better discussed in Select Committee, and I suggest, my Lord, that the matter may be referred to the Select Committee, with all these 283 amendments, so that when the whole thing comes back to the Council. I hope it may be possible for the Council to deal with this matter within the course of this official year, but even if it is not possible to do so, I hope it will be possible to finish the matter at the Dacca sitting of the Council, and when the time for discussion comes, perhaps the official members may be in a position to accept some of the amendments. If they are not, perhaps they will be able to give full consideration in the presence of non-official members in Select Committee and discuss matters fully with them, so that ultimately when the matter comes back to the Council, much time will be saved. For these reasons I support the amendment."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"I rise to support the motion of my hon'ble friend to my left and I do so on the simple ground that, even after the 3rd February, the last day for sending in amendments, I, and many of my hon'ble friends, have received communications from our constituents suggesting various amendments, and I think it is desirable that the Bill should be recommitted to the Select Committee for the consideration of these 283 amendments and of many other suggestions which we had not the time nor the opportunity to make. Besides that, the real grievance of my hon'ble friend appears to be that the time at the disposal of the members of this Council was not sufficient, not only to consider the provisions of the Bill, but also to consult their constituents, and I hope, my Lord, that Your Excellency's Government will accept this resolution and allow us to have further time to make our suggestions and let the whole question be again considered in the Select Committee, who might be able to put the Bill in the form which will be acceptable by the non-official members of the Council and by the people at large. When this Bill was introduced Your Excellency was pleased to observe that this Bill was the Bengal Government's contribution to the constitutional building, and I may add that this may prove to be the foundation of the building, and I hope that it will be well and truly laid so that the edifice may be strong. I hope that the Hon'ble Member in charge will accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, after all the speeches that have been made I should like to say only a few words. I have in the first place listened to the arguments of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq and the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter. I think if you weigh the arguments on both sides you will find, specially after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq and the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, that the main contention on behalf of the non-official members is this : This measure emerged from the Select Committee on the 18th January last. It has been in our hands only for fifteen days, which is the usual time allowed in connection with all Bills that emerge from the Select Committee. In this brief interval we are expected to digest the report of the Select Committee, and the voluminous collection of opinions which we have here in two volumes, to discuss the matter with our friends who are better acquainted with mufassal life, and to formulate our suggestions and submit them to the Council. This is too short an interval, particularly for people who have also other business to attend to. Even to those members of Council who are in a position to devote more time to public affairs, a period of fifteen days is quite inadequate for the consideration of such an important measure as this, which, as has been observed by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, will form the foundation of the edifice of self-government in Bengal. My Lord, what is primarily intended, notwithstanding the wording of the motion, is to gain more time in order to consider the matter more fully and discuss it among ourselves both in this Council and outside it, and to find out if there are any important matters which have not occurred to any of us and to prepare additional amendments on them and submit them for the consideration of the Council. If I may be permitted to move an amendment, I would move that the consideration of the report of the Select Committee be postponed for a month and be taken up by the Council thereafter here or at Dacca, though I would prefer the matter to be taken up in Calcutta. My hon'ble friend has commented upon the absence of certain non-official members to-day. It is not compliment to the public spirit or the patriotism of the non-official members who are the chosen representatives of the people to be absent to-day. I, therefore, cannot help thinking that if this measure is referred to the Dacca meeting of the Council, as has been suggested by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, the position will be worse. I am afraid the attendance there will be such that my hon'ble friend will wish that he had never moved for the postponement of this measure. Having regard to these facts I am still of opinion that if Your Excellency can see your way to extend the time for at least a month it will meet the situation. I am not in favour of referring the Bill back to the Select Committee, for, after all the Select Committee will consist of more or less the same gentlemen as before. They have already considered these very points in the Select Committee and also the suggestions and objections which have been urged by public bodies and individuals, and therefore it is no good referring the Bill back to the Select Committee. But as I have said, in order to gain time we will vote for whatever motion is before us. The main thing we want is more time, which I submit is not a very unreasonable request. I think that, having regard to the importance of the subject and to the fact that the attention of the whole country is fixed on this Bill, I hope Your Excellency will see your way to grant this request."

Mr. Aminur Rahman.

The Hon'ble Mr. Aminur Rahman said :—

"My Lord, in his previous motion the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq wanted us to accept a doctrine which if adopted would throw the whole system, by which legislative enactments are made, into absolute confusion. He told us that an important Bill should be referred over and over again for public criticism till someone somewhere is satisfied that all possible criticisms have come in and have been considered. That motion has been disposed of and I see that my hon'ble friend has cut down his demand considerably in his second speech. He has said that we ought to have more time to consider the alterations that have been made by the Select Committee. And now he is putting forward another motion on the same principle as the first one. He says, if you do not refer it back to the public refer it back to the Select Committee. The public had nearly a year to think over the whole Bill. In the Select Committee we considered all the criticisms that have been made by various public bodies and by distinguished men, public officers and public men in this province. It is in the light of these criticisms that the Select Committee made the alterations. If the public were indifferent to the Bill for one whole year what guarantee can my hon'ble friend give that the public will take more interest in it now? If the public had about a year to send in their criticisms we can safely assume that we have had in all the criticisms that could be made upon the Bill. A perusal of the amendments that have been put before us for consideration to-day would show that these amendments have been suggested on the lines of the criticisms that have already been made by public bodies and public men. If the Bill is now sent back to the Select Committee we shall have to consider the same points over again, go through the same process of reasoning and probably come to the same conclusion. The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq has brought forward one point, and in that connection he has accused the Select Committee of indifference and also of ignorance. He has said that the Bill as altered by the Select Committee has not made any provision for the financing of important projects by the union boards. Clause 46 distinctly says that the district board may make to the union board such grants-in-aid from the district fund as they may think fit in order to enable the union board to carry out any of the purposes of this Act, and may attach to such grants any conditions that may appear to the district board to be reasonable. Assuming that the district boards only undertake such work as their funds permit, and assuming also that the union boards will not be able to initiate any kind of work which they are not able to undertake themselves, we must come to the conclusion that the district boards would not saddle the union boards with the responsibility of any important work unless they could provide funds forthwith. The union boards also will have other means of income, as indicated in clause 47. Now considering that this clause was inserted in the Bill I cannot see how my hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq can accuse the original authors of the Bill or the members of the Select Committee of indifference or ignorance. I do not see what purpose will be fulfilled by referring the Bill as altered by the Select Committee with the amendments that have come before us to the Select Committee again. I think my hon'ble friend will agree with me that this House should ultimately decide what should be the form and contents of the Bill, and if that be so, I think that this is the proper place where alterations made by the Select Committee and also amendments suggested by the members of this House should be jointly considered. The effect of my hon'ble friend's motion would be that the final acceptance of the Bill would be delayed, and if my Hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur's suggestion is adopted probably it will be indefinitely postponed, and another effect will be that in a discussion of the Bill in the Select Committee, and again in this House, the larger aims of the Bill would be lost sight of and we shall simply raise issues of ordinary importance which will make the Bill much worse than what it is. Therefore, I cannot agree with my hon'ble friend's motion that the Bill should be referred to the Select Committee again."

Mr. Crum.

The Hon'ble Mr. Crum said :—

"My Lord, I am not going to vote in favour of this amendment if it is not acceptable to the Government, but I would like to suggest that Government should consider the suggestion, though from rather a different point of view to what has already been put forward. There are before us some 300 amendments and they are sure to take up the time of this House for 3 or 4 days. I admit that I have not studied these amendments very carefully and that I have not read through all the opinions which have been given since the Bill was first published. But I would like Government to consider whether by referring the Bill back to the Select Committee for the discussion of these amendments it would not be possible to accelerate matters. In the Council when a subject is discussed—as for instance the resolutions on the reform proposals—we take up a tremendous lot of time and everybody likes to make a formal speech. But in an informal committee the work can be got through very much quicker. It may be, as the Hon'ble Mr. Aminur Rahman has said, that all these points have already been discussed in the Select Committee and that they are not prepared to go through them again, for they have done the best. If that be the case, I have nothing to say. But if in any way the work can be accelerated by the Bill being referred back to the Select Committee for the discussion of the amendments, then I think Government should consider the suggestion."

Mr. Irwin ; Mr. Phelps ; Babu M. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin said :—

"My Lord, in view of the extreme importance of the Bill I beg to support what the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has said on the subject. I think it would be in the public interest that more time should be given to the consideration of this Bill."

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps said :—

"My Lord, I feel some hesitation in addressing the House so soon after my initiation. But there is one aspect of this Bill which does not seem to have occurred to the Select Committee. The Bill, as I understand, refers solely to villages in existence. I have travelled through Eastern Bengal several times recently and I have been impressed with the fact that villages and townships have arisen where there were none before. What happens is this. In the jute district a Calcutta firm wishes to establish a new agency. They choose a spot on a waterway suitable for the purpose and they secure, say, one hundred or two hundred yards of land (or whatever they may want) on the foreshore for the erection of their godowns and model bungalows for their manager and his assistants. To this nucleus of a new town is attracted all those people in the vicinity who are interested in jute ; but it appears to me that these people are allowed to establish a village or township without any regard to roads. The huts and godowns even extend down to the water's edge in a higgledy-piggledy manner so that there is no 'strand road' and no place where the inhabitants can assemble and enjoy social amenities and discuss their affairs. The roads seem to be non-existent between these corrugated iron sheds and godowns. But if this Bill goes back to the Select Committee, I would like to suggest that some provision be made in the Bill for the regulation of the lay-out of new villages and townships. I am not one for advocating delay ; but if the Bill is going back to the Select Committee, I would suggest that they should take up this question."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I had no desire to speak on this motion, and I wanted simply to vote in support of this motion, but for what the members of the Select Committee have just stated. We worked very hard under the presidency of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler and we did our best ; but we are not infallible : and when I find 283 motions in the shape of amendments before the Council, of which 20, not 2, come from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler himself, representing more than his proper share of the whole number, there is to my mind no doubt that the matter is one for re-consideration, and I shall therefore support this motion."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“My Lord, I am not prepared to advise the Council to accept this amendment, largely on the ground that it is proposing a particular course, although the speakers who have advocated it admit that they do not really want that course to be taken but that they want to achieve another purpose.

“May I draw the attention of the Council to the Rules of Business, especially to rule 41, which says that every report by a Select Committee shall be presented to the Council, and shall be taken into consideration by the Council as soon as conveniently may be. That is what we have done in this particular instance. We were instructed, I might remind the Council, to submit our report by a particular date; and we did so. After this presentation a convenient date was suggested on which we should deal with the report of the Select Committee. The next relevant rule is rule 46, which contemplates that any member may move that the Bill which has been amended by the Select Committee, be republished or be recommitted to the Select Committee. We have already had a motion for republication which has been lost, and about that I propose to say nothing more. We have now a second amendment for recommitting the Bill to the Select Committee. What is the object of so doing? And to understand the suggestion, we should see what the Council Rules enjoin us to do. Under our ordinary procedure, we introduce Bills in Council and circulate them for opinion: we then usually receive a number of opinions. In this case, we had a fairly large mass of opinions; and the system of Select Committees is designed to avoid the worrying of Council with voluminous papers by delegating the task of examining them and making proposals regarding them to some of its members. The recent Select Committee accordingly did so, and presented its report to the Council; and under the recognised procedure, the Council should now proceed with the Bill with the assistance of having had this preliminary examination done by a smaller body from among its members. That being our procedure, a recommitment to the Select Committee must mean that the Select Committee has not in some way or other done its functions properly; but that argument is entirely cut away by the admission of the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq in the first speech which he made, to the effect that we had done our work—I do not remember whether he said very well—but at least fairly well. He seemed to admit that we had done our best to consider the opinions and to amend the Bill in the way that we thought best in the light of them. But if the Select Committee has already done its duty, which is that of the examination of these opinions, what else new is there that we should recommit this Bill to the Select Committee for?

“Now, we have been told by one or two members that there are certain points in the Bill with which they do not agree. Mr. Mitter has raised the question of residential qualification of voters which, I submit, we can discuss when that point comes up. The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq has expressed grave doubts about the financing of these union boards—a matter relating to which various amendments have been moved—which in due time we can also discuss. The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps has suggested that there should be some provision for the inclusion in unions of new villages and enabling them to lay out proper roads, especially on the riversides. Possibly the Hon'ble Member is under a misapprehension, as, when a village of sufficient importance springs up, there is nothing in the Act to prevent its inclusion in a union, and in clause 31 considerable powers are given to union boards to make alignment of streets. Well, Sir, if there is no new matter which can be recommitted to the Select Committee for reconsideration, the whole thing boils itself down to certain points on which some Hon'ble Members do not agree with the conclusions of the Select Committee, and on which they are at liberty to move amendments, a liberty of which they have already taken full advantage. If this is so I would again ask, what is the Select Committee to do, as it is admitted that it has fulfilled the purpose for which it was created ?

"The only answer we have is contained in the arguments of the Hon'ble Messrs. Crum and Mitter, that as there are numerous amendments to the Bill, it might save time by making the Select Committee examine them. But I submit, Sir, that such a step will place the Select Committee in a position which is not contemplated by our rules of procedure, under which it is not the duty of a Select Committee to go through a list of amendments, even if they do happen to be numerous. If we adopt a procedure of that kind, I do not know where the process will stop, and it might go on perpetually, since whatever the Select Committee reports it is not likely to be acceptable to all. Therefore, on the merits of the proposal to recommit the Bill to the Select Committee, I submit that a case has not been made out.

"I then come to the real argument which has been adduced by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur. He has admitted quite frankly that he wants a little more time to consider these amendments and the opinions received on the Bill. I may remind Hon'ble Members that the first collection of these opinions was sent out in September 1918, and we are now in February 1919, which has already given a fair amount of time to Hon'ble Members to read the papers : and although the second collection went out on the 26th November 1918, owing to their late receipt, Hon'ble Members have even then had an interval of two months if they cared to avail themselves of it. Moreover, the duty of a minute analysis of the opinions is particularly the function which the Council entrusts to the Select Committee to discharge. Therefore, when we are asked for more time and for a further postponement, the Local Government are not prepared to take the responsibility of recommending it. The extent of the delay, if the Bill is not proceeded with on this occasion, might be considerable. We are coming on to the Budget, and its discussion will occupy most of the rest of time available this cold weather. We have already been told by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur that it will be impossible, without considerable inconvenience, to take the Bill up at Dacca, and it may mean, therefore, that the Bill may not come up before next cold weather ; or in other words, it will be delayed for a year. Of course, if Hon'ble Members choose to vote that this should be done, it will be done : but I would disassociate the Local Government from any advice to that effect. I have already explained that this is not a new proposal—it dates back to the early days of this century : and the Local Government has perpetually been told that it has been remiss in not previously pushing on with this reform. The recommendations of the Bill have practically been before the country since 1913-14, and on a previous occasion I mentioned that the present Government of His Excellency would have been only too glad to have seen the Bill passed by our predecessors. That having not been done, it was one of the first tasks to which His Excellency applied himself to push through the recommendations of the District Administration Committee ; we have done our best to do so, at considerable personal inconvenience, and we have placed the result of our deliberations before the Council for discussion : if the Council thinks that we may wait for another year, the responsibility for doing so, as far as the Local Government is concerned, will lie upon the non-official members of the Council.

"There is only one other point to which I would like to make reference. The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray says that the work of the Committee could obviously not have been very well done, because certain amendments are down in my name. It is true that there are ; but if Hon'ble Members look at them, they will find that most are of a verbal character, and those of importance in substance were inserted with the object of meeting and improving some of the amendments which have been put forward. It does not necessarily follow that amendments which are drafted by non-official members are always put in the best shape, and it is a normal procedure that, if Government sees its way to move some way in the direction of an amendment, it should place the amendment in a more acceptable form, which is the reason why some amendments of substance stand against my name.

Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq.

"Well, Sir, that is the position which the Local Government would take in this matter. First, there is no justification on its merits for the motion as it stands, and secondly, in respect of the delay which the acceptance of the amendment would involve, it would be deprecated by the Local Government in the light of all that has been said (much of it by Hon'ble Members of this Council) in favour of the urgency of effecting a reform in this portion of the administration of the province."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq said :—

"My Lord, I will be very brief in my remarks because I feel that the question has already been discussed at a very great length, and it is time that we should decide and make up our minds one way or the other. I wish to make one or two points clear before I proceed to make a few remarks on the suggestions that have been made by some of the Hon'ble Members who have spoken in support of my motion. The Hon'ble Member in charge seems to think that the acceptance of my motion would mean a sort of reflection on the Select Committee. I do not know if that would really be the interpretation which could reasonably be put on a motion of this character. But I wish to make it clear that it is absolutely far from my mind to cast any reflection on the work that has been done by the Select Committee. I find, as I also said in the course of my speech on the first motion, that a recommitment of a Bill to a Select Committee is not without precedent. I find that in the proceedings of the Legislative Council of the 25th August, 1909, reported at page 226 of the Council Proceedings, there was a recommitment of a Bill to a Select Committee: later, on the 4th January, 1910, the proceedings recorded at page 4, there was a similar recommitment, and even in this present Council, on the 1st September, 1913, at page 728 we find that a Bill was recommitted to Select Committee. It is not for the purpose of saying that the Select Committee has done its work perfunctorily that I make a suggestion of this character. I have already made it clear, and the Hon'ble Members who have spoken in support of my motion have also made it clear, that it is because the matter is of extreme importance and that the time at our disposal was not sufficient that it would be better, in order to pass the Bill in a manner which would be of an absolutely non-contentious character, that the matter should be again reconsidered in Select Committee. I do not wish to make any reference to the speech of my hon'ble friend Mr. P. C. Mitter beyond this, that he slightly misunderstood me when he said that I spoke of the total income of district boards amounting to about 78 lakhs. I wanted to say something about the total income, but what I really said was about the average income of district boards which works out to something like Rs. 3,88,000 and odd, then I worked out that on an average the income that would be derived from local funds would be about Rs. 125. I may not be quite correct in this calculation, because I have made a rough calculation; but what I meant to convey was that the income that could be derived from local rates in the villages would be very small indeed, and unless substantial grants are given by the district board or by the Local Government the union boards would have to depend upon local taxation for raising the funds that will be required to carry out the scheme. I say that the people are poor and it would be expecting too much that they would be able to tax themselves to raise the requisite funds. I proceeded to say that if the funds at the disposal of union boards were not sufficient, the experiment would be bound to end in a failure. However, I need not labour upon that point. I do not wish also to refer to the other speeches that have been made ; but I wish to say just a few words with reference to the remarks that have been made by my hon'ble friend Mr. Aminur Rahman ; and I do with as much liberty as I can command, because I find that he has declared himself against me. I am not apprehensive of losing his vote, because he has already told me that he is not going to vote in favour of my motion. My friend remarked that the public had one full year to send in their suggestions. As an Indian he ought not to forget that there is a little failing in the Indian character which induces us to postpone matters up to the very last moment. I am saying so with the utmost deference, that if he has somehow or other got over the innate lethargy which is the characteristic trait of Indian character, he has no right to expect that all Indians generally have come up to that standard which teaches them to lose as little time as possible in the discharge of their duties. Now, supposing for a moment that the public had one full year, what about the Members of this Council ? Surely, we were not expected to send in amendments before the Bill had been considered by the Select Committee and had been presented to the Council. The position therefore is this : it does not matter whether the Bill had been before the country for one year or even for five years or 15 or 20 years. So far as the Hon'ble Members of this Council are concerned, they had only 14 days and nothing further. Before the 18th January last we had no jurisdiction to send in our amendments. It was on the 18th January that the Bill emerged out of the Select Committee and was presented to this Council when the members had an opportunity of considering the Bill and the opinions and sending notices of amendments. It is no use telling us that the Bill had been before the country for about a year ; it may be so. We were waiting to see how the Bill would be amended by the Select Committee. So, after all, his argument that we had the Bill before us for one year is beside the point, as it does not touch the very important question which we raise that we had not sufficient time to consider the provisions of the Bill. My hon'ble friend also seems to think that if this Bill is recommitted to the Select Committee, all these matters will be considered over again. True but the Select Committee will find that some of the amendments that have been proposed represent not merely the opinions of the public at large, but these opinions have got behind them the considered opinion of the Members of this Council, and although it may be that the Select Committee at the first sitting did not consider it of importance to accept the opinions that had been received from various sources, it may be that the Members will find that the opinions, which have come from various sources and have been endorsed by Hon'ble members, are entitled to sufficient consideration and due weight, and should be accepted. That changes the whole situation—283 amendments change the entire aspect of the case. It shows that the Hon'ble Members of this Council have also accepted some of the suggestions that have been put forward in the opinions, and although the suggestions may have been rejected by the Select Committee, they may be accepted in view of the fact that the opinions are endorsed by the Hon'ble Members of this Council.

“There is another important matter on which I wish to say a few words. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler seems to think that a recommitment of the Bill to the Select Committee would entail a year's delay—absolutely nothing of the kind. It may be recommitted to the Select Committee : the rules are not very strict on that point : a time-limit may be laid down within which the Select Committee will be able to finish their deliberations and present the Bill before the Council before it breaks up at the end of this session. I may, say this that if the Bill is recommitted to the Select Committee, the Bill will be presented before the Council in an absolutely non-contentious form, and this will save time instead of going on with the consideration of these 283 amendments with all the speeches for and against. I submit that it would be an economy of time, if nothing else, to allow this Bill to go back to the Select Committee, so that it may emerge in a form for which there will be no necessity for sending notices of amendments.

"I do not wish to say anything further about district boards being saddled with grants to union boards. My hon'ble friend, Mr. Aminur Rahman, has pointed out to me that there is a provision in the Bill for district boards making some grants to union boards. I did not lose sight of that provision and if he will look at the amendments he will find that I have given notice of an amendment so far as that particular provision is concerned. But what I say is this, that there is a provision for using discretion as regards the levy of fees and if that discretion is exercised in favour of union boards there will be lack of funds. However, I do not wish to discuss the subject because it will be taking up the time of the Council quite unnecessarily.

"Before I sit down, I would submit that this Bill touches us—the Indian members—on the most vital points of our daily life in villages. So far as the European members are concerned, I wish to make one earnest appeal. I ask them to remember that this system of self-government is one of the greatest boons that the beneficence of England can confer on the people of India, and if that is so, let it be a reality, and if it is sought to be made a reality, let us not hurry this measure through the Council in this form. My first motion might be considered to be unreasonable in the sense that it would entail a long delay, but this is a more modest proposal, and I have already indicated that matters may be so arranged that the recommitment and the final consideration of this Bill may all be finished before we break up at the end of this session. Therefore, my Lord, once again I commend this motion to the Council and I hope that it will be accepted."

The motion was then put and a division was taken with the following results :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

THE BENGAL PREVENTION OF ADULTERATION BILL, 1918.

The Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, moved that the Bengal Prevention of Adulteration Bill, 1918, be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Major-General Robinson, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar, the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha, the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps, the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali and the mover, with instructions to circulate their report in time for its consideration in Council at the meeting to be held on the 27th March, 1919.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I may be pardoned if I make a suggestion for the addition of one name to this Select Committee. As your Lordship knows this Bill is a Bill which affects not only the mufassal, but also the town of Calcutta. Food-stuffs which come to this town are supplied by the country generally, and those representing the Corporation of Calcutta in this Council are interested not only as members of this Council, but also as members of the Corporation of Calcutta, to see that the right measures are enacted for the prevention of adulteration of food. The Bill excludes Calcutta from its operation, but Calcutta is vitally interested in this Bill, and, with the leave of the Council, I would suggest that my colleague the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, who has great experience in the working of the Corporation of Calcutta, should be associated with this Select Committee, so that he may have an opportunity of utilising this experience in the passing of this Bill through the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, I think the Hon'ble Member is under some misapprehension, because so far as Calcutta is concerned the question will come up when the Calcutta Municipal Bill is brought before the Council and really this Bill, as he must have already seen when it was originally introduced, is going to affect the areas outside Calcutta, and that was made very clear in the Statement of Objects and Reasons. I therefore am sorry at not being able to accept the proposal made by the Hon'ble gentleman. I may further point out that so far as the Calcutta Corporation is concerned, I do not think that on the Select Committee there could be a better advocate than the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps whose name we have already included."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; Babu M. N. Ray; the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; the President.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I wish to say one or two words. When a motion is made for the appointment of a Select Committee, although our votes are required to carry that motion, we have practically no voice, but simply have to say 'ditto' to the Hon'ble Member who moved for the appointment of the Select Committee. I thank my Hon'ble friend to my right for moving my name, but I am not very anxious to serve on the Committee, because the Hon'ble Member in charge apparently does not desire my services. The constitution of the Select Committee does not commend itself to a considerable number of the members on this side of the House. Now, my Lord, if it is a mufassal measure affecting mufassal municipalities only, I do not know why some of the experienced and prominent chairmen of some of these municipalities have been left out. Why have not the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur and the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray been included in this Select Committee? Then, my Lord, I should have liked to see the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter on the Select Committee, but what I find is that none of the un-official members proposed are connected with any mufassal municipality. I do not know if the Hon'ble Khan Sahib Aman Ali is connected with any municipality—(A voice—'He is the Chairman of the Chittagong Municipality'). I am glad the Hon'ble Member in charge has selected one eminent member from distant Chittagong, although he has overlooked places nearer Calcutta. If I am permitted, I would move that the Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray be included in the Select Committee."

The Hon'ble Babu Mahendra Nath Ray said :—

"No, thanks, I do not want to serve."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"Then I would move that the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur be included."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, I think it is always a great danger to go into the personal question in a matter of this kind. All the other members of the Council will have ample opportunity to discuss the provisions of the Bill when the report of the Select Committee is submitted. Moreover, we have put in gentlemen in the Select Committee who have got special knowledge and concern with a measure of this kind, so far as it relates to trade and commerce. Then we have got Sir Nilratan Sarkar who takes great interest in such matters to advise us; we have also the Chairman of a mufassal municipality. I really, therefore, do not think that by the addition of any more names to the Select Committee we shall really attain any great object, and I therefore recommend the Council to accept the motion which I have just moved."

The President said :—

"Does the Hon'ble Member wish to move an amendment?"

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; the President ; Babu S. N. Ray ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said : " Yes, my Lord. "

The President said : " Will the Hon'ble Member who is concerned tell us whether he is prepared to serve on the Committee or not ? "

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said : " My Lord, I am much obliged for the amendment which has been moved, but I consider that my services will be of no use and I would not like to accept the offer. "

The President said : " In view of the disinclination of the Hon'ble Member to serve on this Committee, does the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur still desire to move his amendment ? "

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said : " My Lord, I have no other alternative but to give up my motion, when the two hon'ble gentlemen have been scared away by the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja. "

The motion was then put and agreed to.

THE BENGAL PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that the Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1919, be taken into consideration.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that the clauses of the Bill be considered for settlement in the form recommended by the Select Committee.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 1.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that for the word " rural " in line 2 of the long title and in line 3 of the preamble the word " other " be substituted.

He said : —

" My Lord, the amendment which I have to move refers to the preamble. I submit that for the word ' rural ' the words ' other areas in Bengal ' be substituted, because the word ' rural ' might put us into some difficulty. The word ' rural ' is often understood as opposed to ' urban '. We do not know yet whether we shall not have to introduce this Bill to urban areas also, because the distinction between ' urban ' and ' rural ' has not yet been decided. We do not know what the Reforms Committee will do in connection with municipal or non-municipal areas, so that by including ' rural ' areas only we restrict the scope of this enactment, whereas by substituting the words I have suggested, we make the scope of the Bill wider. "

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said : " My Lord, I have pleasure in accepting this amendment. "

The motion was put and agreed to Babu S. N. Ray; Babu A. C. Mazumdar; Mr. O'Malley.

AMENDMENT No. 2.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that after the word "modifications" in line 3 of the proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 1 the words "for the purposes of adaptation" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, the reason why I move this amendment is that you cannot change the spirit of an Act. It must be merely for the purpose of extending the provisions of the Act, and for the purposes of such extension to make such purely formal alterations as may be necessary."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 3.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the words "to any" in line 4 of the proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 1 the words "other town or any" be inserted.

He said :—

"I would draw attention to the provision of clause 1, sub-clause (2), where it is said 'with such modifications as they may deem fit to any area in a union constituted under this Act'. But I would substitute the words 'other town or any' for the word 'to any', simply to bring in the very next stage in the development of primary education and make it more obligatory. First of all, we shall have the municipal towns, and then after that we shall have to deal with the subdivisional headquarters and other important centres where there are no municipalities, but which are all the same quite important urban areas. I should therefore like to have any other town, not simply a municipal town, but also any town municipal or non-municipal introduced, and that is why I propose this amendment. It follows exactly the line I proposed in the preamble."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment, and the reason is that there may be towns without any public bodies, and this Bill when it is passed will have to be worked by public bodies, so if there be any towns, without any public bodies, the Act will be nugatory."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I beg to support the Hon'ble Member in charge. The object of the amendment is obviously to allow this Bill, when it becomes law, to be extended to places which are not under the Bengal Municipal Act or under the Bengal Local Self-Government Act. And if it is said that there are many places which are of an urban character, though they have no form of municipal law, then I venture to submit, Sir, that if a town is not advanced enough for local self-government it is not advanced enough for the system of education contemplated by this Bill. In such places, the Act would be unworkable without any public local organisation, such as a Union Committee or Municipal Board. It would be extremely difficult, for instance, to arrange for such bodies as school committees and it would be very hard to make the necessary adaptations in extending the Act."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"I wish to disabuse my hon'ble freind's mind. He is apprehensive that if we were to use the words 'any other town', there may be no public body or local authority to give effect to the provisions of this Act. What I mean is this. The Bill should be extended to any other town or area in a union constituted under this Act. My Lord, I shall be borne out by the Hon'ble Members to your right that many of these towns have been amalgamated and formed into unions. There are many subdivisions where there are no municipalities, but they are also united. Secondly, there would not be any want of proper authority to give effect to the provisions of the Act if the word 'town' is introduced. On the other hand, we shall be giving a very good opportunity for extending the provisions of the Act, or of introducing primary education on a larger scale simultaneously with such introduction within municipal areas."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 4.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar :—

"That after the figures '1885' in line 6 of the proviso to sub-clause (2) of clause 1 the words and figures 'or under the Bengal Village Self-Government Act, 1919,' be inserted."

He said :—

"My Lord, I ask permission to withdraw this amendment because the Village Self-Government Bill has been postponed and not yet been passed. If Your Excellency will permit me I will put it in this way—'or any other enactment to that effect', otherwise it may be dropped."

The President said :—

"I think the Hon'ble Member must necessarily withdraw the amendment in its present form because it refers to an Act which does not exist, and which, in view of what happened this morning, may never exist. It is out of order for the Hon'ble Member to move the amendment in this form, but if he alter the wording of the amendment, without altering it in substance, I am quite ready to accept that, and I am sure the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill will be ready to consider any proposal he wishes to make. If the Hon'ble Member will suggest other words for his amendment, I will consider it."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said : "I think I had better withdraw the amendment altogether."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 5.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that for the words "the School Committee for such school" in lines 4 and 5 of sub-clause (1) of clause 2 the words "the Commissioners, the Union Committee or the Union Board concerned" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, my object is clear enough. I want to give some power to the Commissioners, to union boards and union committees, and not to leave everything to the school committee. It is very necessary that when you ask the Commissioners to extend this Act and to impose a cess and so forth, they ought to have a word to say about the attendance of the boys and not leave everything to the Select Committee. Therefore I propose this amendment."

Babu S. N. Ray; Mr. O'Malley; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment because it is unnecessary, regard being had to the proviso of clause 1, sub-clause (2). This is covered by the proviso in the case of union committees and union boards. What good would delegation of part of the function to the Commissioners do? It is the function of the School Committee."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, I also beg to oppose the amendment on the same ground as has been mentioned by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, namely, that the School Committee is in fact a better machinery for fixing the days and times in which schools will work than the Municipal Commissioners at a meeting. I also beg to state a second objection. The amendment as worded mentions the union board, whereas there is no such body in existence. It depends upon the Village Self-Government Bill and that has not yet become law."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"I think the Hon'ble Members are under a misapprehension. The word proposed to be left out stands part of the clause. I understand that was the sense of the Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

After lunch.

AMENDMENT No. 6.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the words "elementary education" in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (6) of clause 2 the following be inserted, namely :—

"in reading, writing and arithmetic together with such elementary rules of hygiene, sanitation, agriculture and other industrial pursuits as are suited to local conditions and requirements".

He said :—

"My Lord, the object for the amendment of the definition of primary education is this. As the clause now stands, it is left entirely to the Education Department to lay down what the primary education should be. I want to indicate the line on which you want to impart primary education through the Education Department; and therefore I propose that after the words 'elementary education' may be added not only reading, writing and arithmetic but also rules of hygiene, sanitation, agriculture, etc. My Lord, why primary education has not made much progress in this province by this time is, I think, because this education—purely literary education—has not been very attractive to the people for whom such education is primarily intended. People, particularly the cultivating and the labouring classes, ought to know that the primary education which we are going to impart will not be purely of a literary character but of such a nature as may help their children in their ordinary avocations of life. Of course, it may be said that the Education Department will do so, but, my Lord, the Education Department have not up to this time done anything of that nature. I want to give the little boys some training in elementary rules of agriculture, hygiene, etc., and I therefore wish to indicate by this definition to the Education Department the line on which they should proceed. By the inclusion of my amendment, the Act itself will prove an attraction to the labouring and agricultural classes to send their boys to schools more readily than they are disposed to do at present."

Raja Hrishikesh Laha.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha said :—

"My Lord, I have a similar motion standing in my name. If my hon'ble friend accepts the insertion of the words 'civic and manual training' I shall be glad to support his motion.

My reason is that exclusive instruction in reading writing, and arithmetic will, I am afraid, render a boy unfit for the work of their parents and guardians and they very probably will look down upon it with contempt. In the words of the Resolution on Indian Educational Policy as issued by the Governor General in Council on the 11th March, 1904. 'the aims of the rural schools should be not to impart definite agricultural teaching, but to give to children a preliminary training which will make them intelligent cultivators, will train them to be observers, thinkers and experimenters in however humble a manner, and will protect them in their business transactions with the landlords to whom they pay rent and the grain dealers to whom they dispose of their crops' The policy laid down here should be a proper guide for imparting primary education to children with a view to make them useful members of their family and of society when they shall be called upon to perform the practical duties of life. My Hon'ble friend, Mr. Cumming, from his place in Council, in reply to a resolution, expressed an opposite opinion to the declared policy of the Government of India by stating that 'the attempt to teach agriculture in primary schools should be definitely abandoned' as 'the obvious difficulty lies in the provisions of suitable teachers' (see Calcutta Gazette, 6th February, 1918, page 210). This difficulty may no doubt at the present moment be great, but not insuperable; but as Government is in full sympathy with the education of the boys of the cultivating class, this difficulty should not stand in the way of what I consider to be an obvious duty of the Government. And the undertaking of such duty by the State, I presume, has been foreshadowed by the august authors of the report on Indian Constitutional Reforms. They say in paragraph 185 that 'the spread of education among the lower classes is also attended by peculiar difficulties. India is a predominantly agricultural country, and an agricultural population is always and everywhere suspicious of the effect of education upon rural children. Here again is the need—a need realised equally in Europe and America—of making rural education more practical, and ensuring that the school shall make the average boy who does not aspire to university education a more practical farmer instead of transforming him into an indifferent clerk.' It is simply a question of time, and if Government is bent upon it, trained teachers would become available within a reasonable period. What I have said regarding agriculture would apply mutatis mutandis to other subjects which are necessary for the education of the masses. Hitherto the primary schools have not been attractive, as the instructions given in them are too theoretical and have no reference to the condition of employment and livelihood of the people. Indeed it is the total divorce of education from the needs and possibilities of the life of the masses that has made education unpopular and barren and the same evils will become more intense and widespread if the present system continues to lay emphasis on an over-literary education,—what is wanted, is practical education. Instructions

*Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; Raja Hrishikesh Laha ; The President ; in handicrafts and agriculture should go hand in hand with vocational guidance which would secure a better preparation for life's occupation and avoid aimless drifting of the choice of unsuitable employments. I would like also that a course of civics embodying imperial ideas should form a permanent curriculum in our school. They are sure to help our youths to render themselves better citizens and I need hardly remind this Council that the study of civics in elementary schools has worked most satisfactorily in Japan, United States, etc. Let us take an example out of their books."
Mr. Arden-Wood.*

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I beg to enquire where my friend wants to introduce these words."

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha said :—

"After the word 'agriculture.'"

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"I have no objection."

The President said :—

"Might I suggest that if the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar is prepared to accept the inclusion of the words 'civic and manual training' after the word 'agriculture' he should move the deletion of the words 'rules of' and insert 'instruction in' in their place, as it would read better."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"I have no objection, my Lord."

The Hon'ble Mr. W. H. H. Arden-Wood said :—

"My Lord, I am very anxious that the nature of primary education should not be too specifically laid down in clause 2 of the Bill, because I feel very strongly that the most important thing of all is the character of the education that is to be given under the denomination of elementary education, if it is to be really effective in the way we want. I do not think that we know at present either in England or in India what the best form—certainly not what the final form—of elementary education will prove to be.

Now I notice that there is a good deal of apprehension expressed in the criticisms upon the Bill, lest this new elementary education should be too literary—too much the same kind of education as that now being given in existing schools of higher grade, so that it would be possible to regard the higher form of education as a continuation of it : so that this elementary education might come to be regarded as preparatory to another grade of education, instead of being self-contained—a thing of itself, which is really what we want it to be. It is thought, not I understand without reason, that a good deal of what is now given as primary education has an unsettling effect, making its recipients discontented with the ways of life that their fathers follow, and tending to make them swell the number of those who do not want to work on the land. I submit that it would be disastrous to do anything to increase that tendency. Therefore we must be particularly careful what kind of education the new elementary education is. We are really confronted with a very great problem. I think the future welfare and happiness of India will very largely depend upon the solution of it. There can be no doubt that one of the things that has to be faced in the future is the problem of increasing the material welfare of the masses of the people. This is a crowded country, and it is in consequence even more true here than elsewhere that that man is a great benefactor who makes two blades of grass grow where only one grew before or, what comes to the same thing, makes the soil produce what is of twice the value. India, we hope, has a considerable industrial future before it, but for all that agriculture must remain all important, and therefore the education given to the agricultural classes should be such as to fit them to get more out of the land rather than to drive them away from it. This means that their education should have the effect of making them interested in the processes of agriculture by making them capable of understanding them better, and of practising them with intelligence. We want them to adopt improved methods in place of their ancestral methods. Now I venture to think that we shall not succeed in doing this by prescribing such special courses in hygiene, civics, agriculture, etc., as are advocated in the two motions before us. I really feel tempted to ask the Hon'ble Members if they really know what boys of six to ten are—what mere children they are. What we really want to do in the very short time available, in addition to giving them such instruction in the 'three R's' as will develop their general intelligence and enable them to protect their own interests, is to alter their mentality in a way that will persist after they leave school, and that will not be attained, I submit, by such a course as is here proposed. It seems to me that we want something to develop such a sense of necessary causal connexion among familiar natural phenomena as will prepare the ground for profitable vocational instruction at a later stage—I should say something of the kind we call nature study. But I hesitate even to say that, because here again so much depends upon how a subject is taught, and that raises the old problem of getting proper teachers, which is one of the problems that this Bill has to solve. If it is to be a success, we have to solve the problem of getting proper teachers. I trust, therefore, that the Council will not accept these two motions. This Bill is very largely experimental, and we have got to give those who are concerned with the administration of it as free a hand as possible."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. Unless the Education Department chooses to include all these subjects, how can the curriculum suggested by my hon'ble friends be given effect to? The Bill leaves the programme of primary education to be developed according to the wishes of the Education Department alone. Then, the curriculum ought to be different in different localities. How can you teach practical agriculture or agriculture in any shape in the town of Calcutta, because the Bill extends also to the town of Calcutta? Then, as my hon'ble friend Mr. Arden-Wood has said, a boy of ten is a mere child, and how can you give instructions in all these subjects—in civics, in manual training and sanitation in a primary school? So we ought to leave these subjects entirely to the Education Department; they are the best authority on these points and we ought not to interfere."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, speaking on behalf of the Education Department, I am afraid that I cannot advise the Council to accept this amendment. The reasons are two, and they have already been mentioned by the previous speakers. In the first place, the interpretation of elementary education and its curriculum must vary from time to time. A Bill like this is not a place for a definition of education, which should not be stereotyped by legislative enactment. The section, as drafted, gives some latitude and permits of variation to meet the development of ideas about education and its objects, and education is a subject about which ideas are constantly developing. The second reason is that the subjects proposed are in some respects too advanced for the minds of small children; and those who have children themselves must admit that it is not altogether desirable that young minds should be overloaded."

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I have already said that I accept the small verbal amendment proposed by the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha, so that my amendment with Your Excellency's suggestion will read thus :

'in reading, writing and arithmetic together with such elementary instruction in hygiene, sanitation, agriculture, civics, manual training and other industrial pursuits as is suited to local conditions and requirements.'

The Hon'ble Mr. Arden-Wood, though in full sympathy with the object of this amendment, thinks that the age of boys being fixed at ten, they will be mere children and that it will be impossible to teach them these subjects. With reference to that remark I would simply say that by this amendment I do not mean to suggest that rules of hygiene and higher sanitation should be taught to them; but I do not think it will be at all difficult to satisfy the requirements of this amendment by simply teaching a boy of ten that he ought to have dirty water boiled before using it for drinking purposes or to tell him that he ought to remain neat and clean. These are the ordinary elementary rules which should be imparted to them. I do not suppose that a boy of ten in this country will be found wanting in appreciating such lessons.

Then as regards agriculture and other manual training, I may inform the Council that at the age of ten the boys or children, as you would call them, of labourers, artisans and agriculturists do assist their fathers in tilling the soil, in helping in the work of carpenters and they would easily understand these lessons; but if you keep it still confined to literary education, I am afraid you will find that the primary education which you seek to give to these children will be very very problematical and the result will be very doubtful. I have therefore entered these amended words for elementary rules. My Hon'ble friend, the Member in charge, has taken the safest position of leaving everything to the Education Department and he seems to think—'let the responsibility rest on their shoulders—we have nothing to do with it'. I am not going to endorse a view like that. I do not want to take away from the hands of the Education Department any power which they possess for the purpose of fixing the curriculum or regulating the studies, but we want to indicate the line in which the Education Department ought to move. It has not moved on that line for the last 20 years: and my earnest request to the Hon'ble Members present is—let them by this enactment make it attractive; let the people understand that this education which is meant to be given to them is of an useful character. If we are to leave everything to the Education Department, I do not think it is necessary at all to do anything more than to say that the people will pay an education cess and the Education Department will prescribe the course. For the purpose of spreading primary education we should indicate the proper line and let them give elementary lessons in sanitation and so forth along that line.

Then, my Hon'ble friend has started a serious objection and has asked how this could be done in Calcutta, but Calcutta is not the whole world. I may point out that I have guarded myself against such a contention by saying

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

'suited to local conditions and requirements': there the Education Department will be able to suggest modification for Calcutta. As this Bill will be for Calcutta and the outlying districts, I do not understand why this simple amendment has been opposed. In fact, I am perfectly certain that unless we declare what sort of education we are going to give to children, we will fail altogether. It is not simply my view, but in the voluminous report I find that many district officers and other important persons have also suggested that there should be some sort of education which might be useful to the people for whom it is intended."

The motion was then put in the following amended form :—

"That after the words 'elementary education' in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (b) of clause (2) the following be inserted, namely :—

'in reading, writing and arithmetic together with such elementary instruction in hygiene, sanitation, agriculture, civics, manual training and other industrial pursuits as is suited to local conditions and requirements.'"

A division was then taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENT No. 7.

Amendment No. 6 being lost the following motion which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha was deemed to have been withdrawn :—

“That at the end of sub-clause (6) of clause 2 the following be added, namely :—

‘including vocational guidance, elementary instruction in civics, agriculture, manual training and sanitation.’”

AMENDMENT No. 8.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the word “children” in line 1 of sub-clause (a) (i) of clause 2A the word “girls” be substituted.

He said :—

“My Lord, by this amendment I propose to substitute the word ‘girls’ in place of ‘children’ in clause 2(1)(i) of section 2A. As the Act is intended to provide first for voluntary education and if it is successful, then only to think of compulsory education, and as we have to provide for education of the boys to be made compulsory up to the age of 10, why should it be children, I mean both boys and girls? In arranging for voluntary education in the first instance I, therefore, think that as in the next clause it is provided that necessary enquiries should be made for the boys only, so in this clause also if we are to enquire into the requirements for the girls only, that will serve the purpose. The difficulty which I feel in moving this amendment is that there is in section 21B that whatever cess may be imposed may be spent for voluntary or compulsory education, so if a larger sum is spent for making provision for voluntary education it will be very difficult to make provision for funds for the compulsory purpose. If we are satisfied with making arrangements for compulsory education for boys up to the age of 10, why should we be anxious for making arrangements for voluntary education for boys up to the age of 11, I really fail to understand, and that may stand in our way of successfully dealing with the provisions of the Act. The cess, whatever cess we may impose, should not be very excessive, and if a greater portion is spent for persons for whom compulsory education is not provided, we may be satisfied with making provision in that case for the girls only. There is another amendment which I will deal with hereafter, but in this amendment, I move for the word 'girls' in place of 'children.'"

Babu S. N. Ray; Mr. Wordsworth; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment of my Hon'ble friend. The effect of this amendment would be to make the scheme of voluntary private education applicable only in the case of girls between the ages of 6 to 10, so that if provision is made for the education of girls between 6 and 10 who are willing to attend primary schools voluntarily, a municipality would be entitled to make primary education compulsory in the case of boys between 6 and 10 under Part III. This supposes that there would be compulsory education for boys as soon as voluntary education for girls is provided. It does not provide for primary education for boys on a voluntary basis. There would be no obligation to provide for compulsory education under the voluntary system in the case of boys. Many municipalities may not for some time to come take advantage of Part III of the Bill. In that case there would be no impetus to primary education for boys. The effect of the acceptance of the amendment would be practically to exclude boys, which was never the intention of any one who has the extension of primary education in the country at heart, and for which object this Bill has been introduced."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I have to recommend the Council to accept the point of view of the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, and not to support the amendment. The Bill aims first at the development of all the possibilities of a voluntary system of education, and secondly at the application of compulsion to a certain limited number of boys. It is reasonable that the number of children proposed to be affected under the voluntary system, should be larger than that proposed to be affected under the compulsory system, and the Select Committee in modifying the Bill deliberately proposed that it should be regarded as the duty of a Municipality adopting the Bill to provide voluntary education for all boys and girls up to the age of 11 before they proceed further. Having done that, they may proceed to apply compulsion to all boys between 6 and 10 not yet affected by the provisions of the Bill. The amendment appears to be based on a misunderstanding of the situation, and I would call the attention of the members of the Council to paragraph 4 of the report of the Select Committee. I think that puts the matter clearly, and indicates why Government is unable to accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that my amendment was not made clear to the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill. By clause 2A it is provided that a statement should be prepared showing the number of children not being less than six or more than eleven years of age, and the number of boys up to ten years of age, so by substituting the word 'girls' for 'children' it is not proposed that the case of the boys should be excluded altogether. The only difference is, as I have explained, that we should be concerned with the boys up to the age of ten in every case not only for voluntary education, but also for compulsory education, otherwise it may be that whatever cess may be imposed according to the circumstances of the municipality of the locality, the greater portion or the entire portion will be spent for making provision for voluntary education. To avoid that difficulty, we are making provision for compulsory education up to the age of ten in the case of boys, and similar provision should be made in the case of girls too. There will be no exclusion in the case of boys under clause 2A. There is a provision for the preparation of a statement for boys as well. Of course I have read paragraph 4 of the report of the Select Committee. There it is stated that voluntary education will be provided first up to the age of ten. There are of course various objections to it, and I say it should not be done. In that view I still hope that my amendment should be accepted.

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 9.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that for the words "eleven years" in line 2 of sub-clause (a) (i) of clause 2A the words "ten years" be substituted.

He said :—

"This motion, as I have already explained, is for voluntary education. We should make provision for boys up to the age of ten years and not eleven years. The same arrangement should be made for voluntary education as well as for compulsory education. That is all I propose by this amendment; it is not necessary to speak in detail."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry to have to oppose this amendment. My Hon'ble friend has already referred to the report of the Select Committee, and we have raised the age from ten to eleven years in the case of education on the voluntary basis, and the reasons given by the Select Committee are as follows: "Compulsion is to apply to all boys between the ages of six and ten and to them only, whereas the obligations under Part II of the Bill have relation to both boys and girls between the ages of six and eleven. Briefly the effect of the Bill will be to ensure proper provision in the first place for the primary education of all children between six and eleven desirous of attending schools under the voluntary system, and subsequently if and when due provision has been made for their education under the voluntary system for the primary education of all boys between six and ten under the compulsory system." We accepted this recommendation of the Select Committee, and I therefore cannot accept the amendment of my Hon'ble friend."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I beg to support the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill. It was the feeling of the Select Committee, and Government concurred with it, that municipalities may reasonably be called upon to provide education for all boys and girls who wish it, between the ages of six and eleven, before they proceed to apply the principle of compulsion between the ages of six and ten. For this reason, the acceptance of this amendment would be a serious and unacceptable modification of the principles of the Bill."

*Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Rai R. U. Pal Bahadur.The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"I have already stated my reasons; I do not think it is necessary to say anything more. If it is not the pleasure of the House to accept the amendment, I have nothing more to say."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 10.

The following motion which stood in the name of Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

If motion No. 8 be carried, also to move that for the word "children" in line 1 of sub-clause (c) (i) of clause 2A the word "girls" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 11.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that the words "including the receipts from any education cess under clause 21B" in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (f) of clause 2A be omitted.

He said :—

"The Bill has undergone a remarkable transformation in Select Committee. The Bill as introduced by my hon'ble friend took power to introduce an education cess with the consent of the municipality concerned, such consent being given by a majority of not less than two-thirds of the Commissioners for the purpose of the imposition of an education cess, in addition to such other receipts, including Government assessment, which the municipality may receive. So it was originally quite optional on the part of the municipality to impose an education cess, and there was such a safeguard as a two-third majority. Reading the collection of opinions which we have received we find that not an inconsiderable number of municipalities have suggested that the number should be increased to three-fourths, and not a few of them have opposed the education cess. Now, my Lord, in Part II of this Bill, the heading is 'Voluntary primary education.' In this clause it will be found that in the statement to be furnished to the Local Government the amount of income and receipts already available as well as the income from any education cess under Section 21B which may become available to meet such expenses should be shown. Now, my Lord, there was a condition precedent in the original Bill that it should be compulsory primary education, and it was furthermore compulsory free primary education. That is now all deleted, and we are offered compulsory or voluntary education and it appears that an education cess is required to be levied upon the ratepayers of the municipalities concerned. Now, my Lord, having regard to the consensus of opinion expressed on this Bill, I think that this should be omitted, and unless it is so omitted, it will defeat the very object of the Bill. As regards voluntary education, I think the Government and the municipalities concerned with their existing resources should be able to carry on the work as best they can. If they are unable to do so, I think the Government ought to come forward and assist them. But if they choose to have compulsory education, they will certainly have to impose an education cess to which I believe the Council has, in a manner, agreed, and therefore I think that this clause ought to be modified by deleting the words which I have moved to be deleted from sub-clause (f) of clause 2A. Further, I may point out that in the Punjab, in Assam and the Central Provinces and other places, it is not enacted in the Bills that they have passed that an education cess shall be levied by the municipalities concerned for the purposes of carrying out voluntary education. I believe, my Lord, I am correct. Although I have not got the papers before me now, I am quoting the substance and I also believe that your Government is prepared to make substantial contribution for the promotion of primary education in Bengal. Looking at the figures which have been published, I find that the Government spends in Bengal Rs. 2,29,000, with a population of 23 millions. Bombay with a population of 10 millions, spends 30 lakhs and Madras spends a little over 17 lakhs. It will be seen, therefore, that the Government contribution to primary education in Bengal is certainly, I would not say niggardly, but certainly very, very small, and I think Your Excellency's Government is sincerely anxious that this Bill should be welcomed by the people, and that definite steps should be taken for the promotion of primary education in Bengal; therefore, I think that this clause should be modified by deleting the lines which I have indicated."

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose my Hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal. My friend's motion really ought to be taken as a part of the motion which is tabled as item No. 34 where, with regard to clause 21B, my friend says, in effect, that there should not be any education cess so long as the voluntary system is in existence. But if my Hon'ble friend will turn to clause 21B he will see that what is proposed there is that if the existing resources of the municipality including any grant from the Government are not sufficient to cover the expenses, the Commissioners may, with the previous sanction of the local Government, impose a tax called the education cess. My friend's motion seems to be that so long as education is carried on on the voluntary basis, there ought not to be any education cess. With that I emphatically disagree, but at the same time I say that it is as much the duty of the municipality as of the Government, so far as resources are available to help the cause of primary education. This is amply provided for in section 21B. It is only when the resources of the municipality and the Government are not enough, it is then only that power is given to the municipality to raise money by an education cess. Now, if the power be not reserved to the municipality then the whole scheme of the Bill will be rendered nugatory; as I understand the idea underlying the Bill is this: try to do your best under the voluntary system, and it will then be time to come to Part III. Now, if you do your best to promote the voluntary system it must be admitted that it will be possible to educate more boys. Over and above municipal funds and Government grants, more funds may be necessary. There is however one matter which I should like to mention in this connection, and that is about the contribution of the Government. I drew the attention of the Council to that point some time ago. I do not think it will be out of place if I again refer to it. In Bengal in the year 1916-17, it may be 1915-16, I speak subject to correction, altogether about Rs. 37,40,000 were spent on primary education, out of which only about Rs. 2,21,000 was spent directly from provincial revenues. Thirteen lakhs and 15,000 were contributed by district and local funds, and only Rs. 66,087 were contributed by municipal funds, Rs. 17,56,000 were contributed from the Moshin fund and fees, and two lakhs in all were contributed by private individuals, from private sources, so that out of a total expenditure of about 37 lakhs, the direct contribution from Government from provincial revenues was only about Rs. 2,21,000. In Bombay out of a total expenditure of 54 lakhs, 30 lakhs were contributed from provincial revenues. The district board and local boards contributed six lakhs as against our 13 lakhs. Municipal funds there contributed Rs. 7,81,000 as against our Rs. 66,000 and odd, and the reason is obvious, because in Bombay there are rich mufassal municipalities full of industrial enterprises. Now, as regards fees, we contribute Rs. 17,95,000 as against Bombay's Rs. 4,42,000 and from private sources the contribution in Bombay is Rs. 4,87,000 as against our 3 lakhs in all. We find that the contribution of the district boards in fees and by private individuals is far more satisfactory than what it is in Bombay, and that the direct contribution from provincial revenues is far less than what it is in Bombay. But I ought to point out in all fairness to the Government that the contribution of 15 lakhs and odd from the district boards is largely lent by the Government. But my point is that it may have been difficult in war times to find more money for primary education so far as Provincial revenues are concerned, but it ought to be possible, at any rate, I hope it will be possible in the future, to spend more from Provincial revenues, and from what Your Excellency and the Government have said in the past, I have every expectation that my hope will be realised. As clause 21B provides for Government contribution and also income from the municipalities, and it is only when such income is insufficient that the municipalities will be allowed to impose an education cess, there are ample safeguards, therefore I am of opinion that the clause as provided ought to stand."

Babu S. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I think I ought to accept this amendment. The Bill as introduced contemplates an education cess only when primary education has been made compulsory and made the imposition of such a cess a concomitant of making primary education entirely free. It appears to be quite reasonable that the second condition, namely, of making primary education free as a condition of the imposition of an education cess, should not be insisted upon. But the amended Bill permits an education cess to be imposed for the purpose of financing primary education even on a voluntary basis.

The statement to be submitted to Government under clause 2A, sub-clause (f), will comprise an estimate of receipts already available and other probable income, including receipts from any education cess. After this statement is submitted, Government will determine the amount of financial assistance to be given by them for enabling the Commissioners to provide for an extension of primary education on a voluntary basis under Part II. There is therefore some ground of apprehension that Government may not be willing to make any adequate contribution unless the Commissioners are ready and willing to impose an education cess. Education cess in that event becomes the rule, and may be made in practice a condition precedent to Government aid. The Government may not have any such idea but the Bill leads itself to such construction in the public mind.

Education cess should not be thought of, except as an optional concomitant to the introduction of compulsion. Such a cess may not be imposed even if primary education is made compulsory by a certain municipality, but it should never be capable of imposition unless such education is made compulsory. This seems to be in accord with public opinion. The capacity of our people for paying taxes is limited and no fresh impost can be justified except in very special circumstances—compulsory primary education may be considered to be such justifying circumstances by certain municipalities, it may not be considered in that light by others. A perusal of the opinions of the municipalities on this Bill will convince anyone that an education cess will be quite unpopular and in certain cases unbearable to the people.

Mr. Blackwood, the District Magistrate of Bakarganj, says :—

'The problem is mainly one of expense, and it will be observed that while all the opinions given are in favour of the Bill, a number express the hope that Government will contribute such a sum as will render the imposition of an education cess unnecessary.'

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The District Magistrate of Burdwan says :—

‘In my opinion the question of cost precludes the introduction of such a measure at present. Municipalities are at present unwilling to spend enough money on essential services, such as roads, water-supply and sanitation, and it would be unwise to saddle them with a heavy additional burden.’

The Chairman of the Noakhali Municipality says :—

‘None of the Commissioners raised any objection to the Bill to be legislated for the extension of the primary education in all municipalities in Bengal. But the necessary expenditure which will be incurred on this account will hardly be met with from the insufficient fund of this municipality. Most of the ratepayers of this municipality are very poor, and this will be a heavy burden on them if the education cess as laid down in the Bill is imposed on them for the purpose. In such a case, contribution from Government will essentially be necessary to give effect to the Bill, if passed.’

The Chairman of the Midnapore Municipality says :—

‘This Municipality, however, earnestly hopes that the State will, as soon as normal conditions are restored after the conclusion of a general European peace, continue to bear the entire cost of giving primary education to the people of this country or at any rate bear a major portion of it.’

There are other municipalities and public bodies which have given expression to similar views.

It must be remembered that these opinions are based on the Bill as it originally stood, which contemplated an education cess only after the introduction of compulsion and as making primary education free. How much more unpopular will the present provision be which permits such a cess even without the introduction of compulsion. If the provision is retained in its present shape, the inclination of the municipalities will be to give the measure a wide berth. The Bill as amended invests Government with authority to exercise some sort of compulsion on municipalities in the circumstances set down in clause 2B for the purpose of expanding education on a voluntary basis. But it is to be doubted whether Government can compel any municipality to take advantage of the Bill if it means the imposition of an education cess which the municipality may be unwilling to impose.

Government must be prepared to make liberal contribution, and at the same time relax the high standard they have set up for buildings and equipment of the primary schools. And education cess should be excluded from calculation while considering the question of expansion of education on a voluntary basis under Part II.”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“My Lord, when the Bill was originally published it received a hearty welcome from the people. But I may say now that since the Bill has emerged in this form out of the Select Committee, there is a considerable volume of opinion opposed to this measure, and the reason is simply this : that a cess is going to be imposed even when education is voluntary. If it is to be compulsory, the people are prepared to make a sacrifice, but if it is to be voluntary and they have to pay a cess, I would like to know, as many people whom I have consulted are desirous of knowing, if there is any country or province where education cess is imposed when education is carried on only on a voluntary system. As far as I am aware this is a novel provision. We shall have elementary education on a voluntary basis and at the same time pay a tax for the same. I do not know how many municipalities will be encouraged under these provisions to come forward to introduce this measure within their jurisdiction, and there could not be a surer way of making this Bill, if not altogether a dead-letter, I say almost an unqualified failure than to provide an education cess even on a voluntary basis."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; Sir Nilratan Sarkar.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, having been connected with many municipalities and having had charge of many primary schools, I venture to offer a few observations in support of the amendment that has been made by my Hon'ble friend. I may here also add that I have had the opportunity to discuss this subject with responsible people who can advise on the subject. My Lord, the municipalities will not welcome such an education cess on a voluntary basis and neither in my humble opinion is it proper that education cess should be given on a voluntary basis. Before the Bill was talked of the gurumahasyas used to get their wages in the shape of mangoes and other gifts which the students distributed to them. The people were not in a position to pay them adequately till we find from the history of education that Government took up the question in right earnest. The result is that there are various complaints in many quarters as to the proposed imposition of an education cess on a voluntary basis. The question is quite different if compulsory education is imparted, but, my Lord, I venture again to submit to Your Excellency and to the Council that the proposition will be considered very hard if such an imposition of education cess is to be made when education will be given on a voluntary basis. My Lord, I do heartily support the amendment which has been made by my Hon'ble friend".

The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar said :—

"My Lord, I would not like to give a silent vote in connection with this resolution. I am, I might be excused for mentioning, unconnected with any municipality except as a tax-payer. We have heard what the opinion of most of the municipalities would be because we have so many representatives of municipalities on this Council. But I am afraid the municipalities have a duty to do in this connection. Much has been made of the idea that the proposal is one for the spread of education on a voluntary basis. I suppose none present here thinks that it should be voluntary for any of the municipalities to impart or not to impart education to the children living within its jurisdiction. By the word 'voluntary' as used there, I understand voluntary on the part of the parents of the children. But suppose in this city of Calcutta we find after ascertaining the facts carefully that there are one lakh of children who would come forward voluntarily to place themselves under tuition. Now, how are we to train them? Are we expected to make bricks without straw? How much can we expect from Government? Government can spend a large sum, but the question of primary education can be solved from the financial point of view only after spending a much larger sum. Do we expect that the Government from the public exchequer should bear the whole cost of primary education. And even if they are disposed to do so, how should they manage the other departments? Then there is the other question. There are the local bodies, the students and their guardians. Do we expect a very large sum from the guardians of these students of the lower classes, or a very large contribution from the local bodies? My Hon'ble friend Mr. Mitter has already given us an idea of how the sum of 38 lakhs in Bengal is made up. I do not think that if the present system is allowed to continue, the sum could be stretched to a much larger figure—it might come up to 40 or 50 lakhs in five or ten years. Then, what is the use of this Bill? If we are not prepared to vote for a cess, directly the Bill would be useless, or indirectly, the money must come from the people. If Government has to pay, Government has to collect that in the shape of taxation or in some other shape. Why not do it directly? I do not say that much importance can be attached to the matter of spreading education on a voluntary basis. This, of course, will only make the way smooth. Compulsory education was the thing aimed at in the original Bill; but the Select Committee found that to be an impossibility in the present conditions, especially on financial grounds. If we could have a very large sum at present we should certainly adopt education on a compulsory basis at once. Of course, by introducing it on a voluntary basis, we considerably reduce the number of students who are likely to join schools; but, on the other hand, we gradually train ourselves to defray the educational expenses of our children. By taking up the lighter burden first and gradually taking up the heavier burden we can in course of time meet the difficulties and solve the problem. If we want primary education, which is not a luxury but a necessity, which we must have, we must spend our money for it, and the municipalities must agree to introduce cesses in their jurisdiction, and other local bodies must also try to raise funds from local sources; otherwise, it would be just as well to give up the measures."

Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

" My Lord, I am unable, on behalf of Government, to advise the Council to accept this amendment. It is, in my opinion, the most important amendment on the paper and it cuts at one of the fundamental principles, if not the most important principle, of the Bill. As the Bill was originally introduced in Council a cess was made a concomitant only of free and compulsory education. This aspect of the Bill was considered at great length and with great care in the Select Committee. The opinions which had been received on the Bill, including those quoted to us by the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, were then carefully considered; and the Bill, as now amended, was finally decided on without a dissentient voice by the Select Committee. The Hon'ble Member who has moved the amendment and the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill were members of the Select Committee; and they have signed the report of the Select Committee and accepted the new principle without a word of dissent, and the Hon'ble Member who has moved the amendment has not clearly explained the reasons for his change of front. The view of the Select Committee—and this is the view that commends itself to Government—was that the inclination of the people towards education should be fully utilised before municipalities were allowed to have recourse to the principle of compulsion. Compulsion in education is new to Bengal: it might prove in practice to be an unwelcome principle, and we think that any advance against opposition should be guarded against by utilising the wishes of the people as fully as possible before recourse was had to it. It was therefore felt to be fitting that the Municipal Commissioners should be given every facility for developing education on a voluntary basis. These facilities included facilities for increased resources. I am afraid that it has been suggested to the Council, or if not suggested, I am afraid some members of Council may have assumed, that the imposition of this cess is an obligation provided for by the Bill. If they will refer to the clause in question, they will find that the cess may be imposed at the instance of the Commissioners. The imposition of the cess is therefore an optional matter: presumably no cess would be imposed unless local opinion was reasonably favourable to its imposition. The Hon'ble Member's motion would limit the facilities offered to the Commissioners for the development of education within their areas. The imposition of a cess would be in itself a definite act, but this act would be the culmination of a long process of development, and the act itself might reasonably 'be regarded as a part of that process of development, since its consequences would be inseparably merged in all the consequences of that continued development. It is not to be supposed that if compulsion were applied to any area, there would be separate schools established for the benefit of boys brought to school under that act of compulsion. When the Bill is fully adopted in any municipality, there will be three kinds of children at school. There will be all boys between the ages of six and ten, who must go to school; there will be all boys between the ages of ten and eleven who may wish to go to school; and there will be all girls between six and ten who may wish to go to school. There may be other classes of boys and girls of other ages, for the Bill does not limit the powers of the Municipal Commissioners in that respect. But these three classes of children will not be provided for in separate classes of schools. The Municipal Commissioners will naturally consult the question of finance, of organization, and of economy, and children brought to school under the act of compulsion will presumably be distributed amongst the schools that already exist under the voluntary system. It is not clear, therefore, how and with what justice the Commissioners should be debarred from imposing this education cess at any part of the process. They cannot keep separate accounts for the children brought to school under the act of compulsion and say that this money comes from an education cess and therefore shall be devoted only to the children who attend under compulsion. On the other hand, if this education cess is to be devoted to the welfare of education within the municipality, it is not clear why the process, which may be a long process lasting for many years, should not be financed by additional resources until the Commissioners are in a position to impose compulsion and so obtain the cess. For these reasons, Government lay great stress upon the fundamental principles of the Bill and consider that if the Bill is to have any effect, the Commissioners should be enabled to do all that they can and this cess is one of the means by which they will be enabled to develop their resources for this purpose. There need be no apprehension that the imposition of a cess and its utilisation for education under voluntary conditions will impair the hope or prospect of adequate Government assistance. This is nowhere contemplated in the Bill. It is impossible for anyone to say now what resources Government may be able to contribute for this purpose in future years; but enabling the Commissioners to impose a cess will not impair their hope of assistance from Government. If we take a municipality in which say 65 per cent.—not an reasonable figure for some municipalities—of the children go to school, it is difficult to see why the Commissioners should not be empowered to add to their resources unless they force the other 35 per cent. to school. If the Commissioners care to assume responsibility for the efficient education of the 65 per cent., surely they should be enabled to provide ways and means. The amendment, if accepted, would give considerable advantages to municipalities which are very backward in education as compared with those which have made considerable progress and will make considerable progress under the voluntary principle. I think that we all agree that progress under the voluntary system will be more valuable than progress under the application of compulsion. For these reasons, I am unable to recommend to the Council the acceptance of this motion.'

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, in the first place I should briefly reply to the points that have been raised by the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, that I as a member of the Select Committee did not record any note of dissent, but I was moving this amendment here. I do not know whether Mr. Wordsworth is aware that I signed this report of the Select Committee subject to the right of moving amendments; this proviso has not appeared in the report. I do not know whether it is usual for it to be printed or not, but I was told that I had the right of moving amendments. However, that is one point, and then Mr. Wordsworth might refresh his memory that in the Select Committee this Bill underwent a wonderful transformation beyond recognition. So many amendments and such drastic changes were made—I say some with my concurrence—and the drafting was hurriedly done and changed the next day in pencil first and then it was typed—that one could not always keep in mind what particular wordings of the clauses were accepted by the Select Committee. I make a frank confession, my Lord; if that is a fault on my part, I plead guilty to it. That is one of the reasons why I claim a right of moving the amendments.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Then, my Lord, with reference to the argument adduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, and I think it covers the arguments that have been adduced by other speakers, that the municipalities are not bound to impose an education cess, I know very well that they are not, but what I say is this—that under clause 2A for the promotion of voluntary education the Local Government may call upon the municipalities concerned to submit a statement of receipts and expenditure and the receipts should include the amount recoverable from education cess and then the subsequent clause is that the Local Government will, after considering that statement, determine the amount of contribution that is to be given from the Government Exchequer, and will then issue directions. My apprehension and that of the outside public are that you will be taking away by the left hand what you give by the right hand. I submit that this should not be the position of Government with reference to a matter like education. My friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Mitra, who has opposed this amendment, has shown that out of a total expenditure of 37 lakhs of rupees, the Government contribution is Rs. 2,28,000. Having regard to the opinions that have been expressed by the municipalities, and having regard to the conservative nature of the country, I think that a great advance has been made in that the municipalities have consented to the imposition of an education cess, if education is made compulsory in their areas and provided a substantial grant is made by Government. Mr. Mitter says—perhaps he has forgotten in his enthusiasm that it is not so—that there are ample safeguards. I emphatically say that there is absolutely no safeguard, but there was a safeguard in the original Bill—two-thirds majority at a special meeting of the municipality—which has been removed altogether. As there is no safeguard and having regard to the volume of public opinion in this matter and the poverty of the municipalities, I think it would be better not to impose an education cess for the promotion of elementary education. Government ought to be liberal with them and ought to show that they were doing their best to promote voluntary education, and it was now the turn of the municipalities to come forward and make it a compulsory one and tax themselves for the purpose. Education and public opinion have so far advanced that you will find that there will be ready response to that request of Government. I submit that Mr. Mitter sitting comfortably in his house within the four corners of Calcutta can say anything he likes, but I can lay a wager with my Hon'ble friend that if the Bill which is now materially modified in the Select Committee is published again, there will be a considerable volume of public opinion against it. The education cess will affect the rich and the poor alike and therefore what I beg to submit is this—let Government show their utmost generosity and give tangible proof that they are willing to promote voluntary education by giving them sufficient funds and thus lead them on the onward path. Let them then say to the municipality, now it is your turn to make your foot steady and proceed with a cheerful heart and attain your goal. That is the reason that has prompted me to move this amendment."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; the President.

(At this stage a division was called for.)

The motion was then put.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"May I be permitted to draw Your Excellency's attention to one matter. There is a misapprehension in our quarter whether we ought to vote 'aye' or 'no'. The question has been put in a way which is rather confusing to us."

The President said :—

"I am sorry if I have confused some Hon'ble Members. The question has been put in the ordinary way in which an amendment is put in the House of Commons. If an Hon'ble Member wishes to vote for the clause as it stands, as it appears in the Bill, then he will vote 'aye'. On the other hand, if they wish to see the clause changed in the way suggested by the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, then they vote 'no.'"

The noes being 11 and the ayes 23, the motion that the clause should remain as drafted was agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 12.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that in clause 2A, the word “and” at the end of sub-clause (e) be omitted, and after sub-clause (f) the following be inserted, namely :—

“and

(g) the amount of grant or assistance from the Government which the Commissioners consider would be necessary to enable them to provide for primary education within the municipality, or any part thereof.”

He said :—

“My Lord, in clause 2A it is proposed that the municipalities concerned should submit a statement showing certain particulars which are enumerated as (a), (b), (c), (d) and so forth, and in clause 2B it is provided that the Government after considering that statement and also after determining the amount of financial assistance from the Government may direct the Commissioners to assume any management and control. I submit that in sub-clause (f) we have given all the details that may be required by Government, but I think an opportunity should be given, at the very earliest opportunity, to the municipality concerned, to say what amount of grant it should require from the Government, and therefore I propose to insert a sub-clause (g) after sub-clause (f); so that, in the statement to be given by the municipality, it ought to be allowed to state what amount of assistance it would require and then the Government under section 2B would be in a position to determine the amount of assistance. I think this is very reasonable, and the amendment should be accepted.”

Babu S. N. Ray; Mr. O'Malley; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“My Lord, I have great pleasure in accepting this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“My Lord, Government also are prepared to accept the amendment.”

The motion was then put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 13.

The following motion which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

“That for the words ‘eleven years’ in line 11 of clause 2B the words ‘ten years’ be substituted.”

AMENDMENTS Nos. 14 AND 15.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that at the end of clause 2B the following be added, namely :—

“Provided that the amount of financial assistance from the Government mentioned in this section shall not be less than 30 per cent. or more than 50 per cent. of the total expenditure involved in each case.”

He said :—

“My Lord, much that I have to say in regard to this amendment has already been said by many of the members of this Council. Clause 2B provides that the Government will determine the amount of assistance. My proposition is that the amount of financial assistance from the Government mentioned in this clause shall not be less than 30 per cent. or more than 50 per cent. of the total expenditure involved in each case. It is the sacred duty of Government to provide for the education of the poor, and I think the figures that have been placed before this Council by my friend the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter are very striking. He has shown that the Government of Bengal spend much less than the Government of Bombay for the purpose of primary education. I know Government contemplate the provision of as much as they can for primary education to help the municipalities in extending the provisions of this enactment, but I think Government ought to have courage and generosity enough to come forward to announce to the public that the Government do not keep it entirely at its sweet pleasure, but that it is prepared to make substantial grants for the purpose of extending primary education in the country, and therefore I think that the least they can do is to say that Government are not going to pay less than 30 per cent. and they may go up to more than 50 per cent. But, my Lord, having regard to the trend of these grants which we have seen from time to time with regard to education. I have not been bold enough to rise to the top of my courage in this matter, and therefore I have kept it between 30 and 50 per cent. My Hon'ble friend on my right was just telling me that it is 50 per cent. in England, but I know India, and for the matter of that Bengal, is not England, and if we can get substantial assistance from the Government, namely, not less than 30 per cent. it will be some encouragement to the municipalities to come forward to extend the provisions of this Act; but if they are left entirely in the dark as to what amount Government will grant, probably many will not venture to come forward with a prayer for extending the provisions of this enactment within their jurisdiction. Therefore I think that Government ought readily to say that they shall grant at least 30 per cent. And in order that the people may also tax themselves, I have not gone beyond 50 per cent. It is for the purpose of making this enactment operative that I propose that Government should readily come forward with substantial help, and if it is not prepared even to grant 30 per cent, what the fate of this enactment may be, may easily be conceived."

Babu S. N. Ray; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

" My Lord, I leave this amendment to Government to decide, but I should like to say a few words with reference to the Government contribution. The success of this measure, I mean the extension of primary education in the country, must depend on the share which the Government is prepared to bear of the cost. Mr. Gokhale in introducing his Primary Education Bill in the Imperial Legislative Council, said that in England the Parliamentary grant covers about two-thirds of the total expenditure on elementary schools. In Scotland it amounts to more than that proportion, whereas in Ireland it meets practically the whole cost. I think we are entitled to ask that in India at least two-thirds of the new expenditure should be borne by the State. The resources of the public bodies of this Province are limited. In Bombay the municipalities as a general rule get very substantial contribution from Government. While there is a general desire in this country for extension of primary education, people are afraid of the cost. I have already placed a few of the remarks on the question of Government aid and imposition of an educational cess while speaking on the amendment of my Hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal, so I would not like to say anything more on the subject."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

" My Lord, I would also leave this amendment to the Government, but in doing so, I desire to point out one aspect of the question which seems to have been overlooked. I mean the question of taxable limit, whether it be by the Municipality or the Government. Some of us may think that so long as we say that Government should contribute more, we are really serving the people. Others again may take too narrow a view of things, and think that it is possible for municipalities to raise large sums of money, but what are the facts? The municipalities in Bengal, at least most of them, excepting Calcutta and perhaps Howrah, are very poor. If you compare the condition of municipalities in Bengal with Bombay, or for the matter of that with Madras and the United Provinces, you find that the Bengal municipalities are poor. What are the conditions of municipalities in general? Only a collection of houses, where pleaders and officials live, and perhaps a few zemindars. Without manufactures, without industries, it is not possible for municipalities to find large sums of money, and therefore it is not possible for the municipalities to incur large expenditure for the cost of primary education whether it be voluntary or compulsory, so it is a question of the Government augmenting the resources of the municipality, and not of the municipality augmenting the available resources of the Government. If the Government on the one hand merely admits that 30 or 50 per cent must be paid by the Government and so long as that percentage is not paid, work should remain at standstill, then who suffers? The people who live in the jurisdiction of the municipality suffer. At the same time, if the Government takes up the attitude that so long as municipalities do not help themselves, they will not help them, then as a question of abstract principle it is all right, but in the result perhaps the interest of the Government and the municipality in the matter of education will suffer. Therefore I am inclined to think that perhaps the best course would be to leave matters as they are. If we fix a percentage of 30 or 50 per cent. perhaps those who have the interest of primary education at heart may be confronted with the hard-and-fast rule laid down in the statute. With these remarks I leave the matter to the Government."

Mr. O'Malley.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"This is the first of three amendments designed to impose financial liability on Government. In each case a minimum is to be fixed for the Government contribution. Under this amendment the minimum is to be 30 per cent. and under amendments Nos. 15 and 30 it is to be 50 per cent. From the point of view of Government all the amendments are open to the same objection. It is arguable in the first instance whether it is right to impose a financial obligation on Government in perpetuity by a legislative enactment. The amount which Government can give in any one year must depend on the amount available as well as the other needs of the administration. This is a familiar principle on which the Budget is generally framed. I may further point out that Government already makes considerable grants to local bodies for purposes of education, although admittedly only a portion of the grants is derived from provincial revenues. Recently I had occasion to refer to the figures and I find the following result. In 1917-18 local bodies in Bengal spent 14½ lakhs on education. Of this sum nearly 11½ lakhs consisted of Government grants made over to local bodies. This was in addition to direct expenditure by Government of 82½ lakhs on education. I would invite special attention to these figures, and I may say in explanation that I am here not making a distinction between Provincial and Imperial revenues, but have lumped both together as showing State expenditure. In the last year, as in other years, the Government grants to municipalities were much smaller than those made to district boards, but still they represented a little over one-third of the amounts found by the municipalities themselves. Government intend to continue to make grants to local bodies for education. Government is in entire sympathy with the object of the Bill which is to stimulate the extension of primary education, but the actual amount given by Government each year must depend on the amount at its disposal, and the share municipalities get must depend on the other demands for education. For instance, Government can scarcely be expected to starve district boards, with their vast areas and great population, for the sake of municipalities which after all only account for a small portion of the population. The needs of both district boards and municipalities have to be considered and a fair and equitable distribution made of the money available. Another objection to the amendment is that we do not know what will be the total amount necessary for a proper system of primary education in municipalities, or how much can be met from different sources, such as fees, education cess, endowments and so on. Without definite knowledge on this point, it is impossible to say what grant would be required from Government. In some places it is possible that a Government grant would not be required, and if so, the amendment would merely transfer to public revenues a charge which could be met from other sources. Government cannot accept a liability of an indefinite kind such as this amendment contemplates now that the financial future is dark and uncertain. The Council are aware that a new system of provincial finance is contemplated under the Reform scheme. A scheme of settlement has been proposed which aims at the separation of

Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

Imperial and Provincial resources and responsibilities in the matter of finance. The present system of Imperial subventions will cease, and it would be unwise, to say the least, for the local Government to entertain expectations of assistance beyond that which it can afford from provincial resources. The report on the Reform Scheme gives an estimate of the provincial revenue as 734 lakhs and of the expenditure as 675 lakhs; the contribution to the Government of India, however, is put down at 69 lakhs and the provincial surplus is therefore only 10 lakhs. It is at present impossible to say what will be the demand on the provincial surplus, but as things are at present, the Government is obliged to decline to be bound by law to a liability of an indefinite amount as proposed in the amendment which I must therefore oppose on behalf of Government."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said : —

" My Lord, after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley it gives grounds for distrust that the Government do not mean to devote any appreciable part of their revenues for the promotion of mass education. Otherwise, such a modest proposal as this—as the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar says, the Government contribution should not be less than 30 per cent. of the total cost and not more than 50 per cent. of that cost—should find a place in the statute-book instead of being opposed by a pronouncement on behalf of Government. This leads me to refer to a little ancient history. When the East India Company came to sovereignty and after the Government became settled, the land revenue of the country was secured by a wise act of the British Government. When the President of the Board of Control was Mr. Dundas and the Prime Minister Mr. Pitt, their instructions for a permanent settlement of the land revenue were carried out by Lord Cornwallis in this country; after that the Government gradually found time to consider the question of education in this country and during the time of Lord Bentinck the idea of fostering western education was taken up. Mass education was not thought of at that time. The reason of course was clear. In England there was no mass education at that time and in England it was not till the year 1870 that any serious effort was made to introduce primary education in that country. The East India Company by their despatch of 1854 broached this idea and though their despatch did not exactly result in the introduction of mass education, a great impetus was given to education in the country. The East India Company were composed of commercial men—not men of broad views—and they could be excused if they did not take a very high view of their duties of sovereignty. Then came the transfer of the sovereignty from the East India Company to the Crown, and it appears that mass education was not very seriously considered for some considerable time. The attitude of Government was this : they must spend some money for education; otherwise it would look very disreputable. That was how matters stood. In 1870 when mass education was introduced in England and by the Act of 1870 and the Act of 1876 education was made compulsory there, we find that England having recognised that the duty of the State was to see that every child in the land got education, it slowly dawned upon the horizon of this country that similar things should be done here also. But there was not a proper conception of the duties of sovereignty in this respect in this land for a considerable time. I take it that the primary duties of the State are the preservation of peace and order, the administration of justice and the giving of education to every child in the land. The third duty has very slowly dawned upon the Government of this country. It is said that the revenues are not sufficient and my Hon'ble friend on my right, Mr. Mitter, considers that the purse-strings of Government should be kept tight when any demand for education is made. He says that if Government were to allow so much as 30 or 50 per cent. for mass education, it is your money going in a shape, and therefore the best thing is to leave things as they are. I want to leave no room for Government hereafter to get away and say 'Oh, you are able to provide for your education and we will not allow you any grant from Government.' That is our suspicion and the answer of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley supports that suspicion. When it is said that the revenues of Government are not sufficient, it is meant that the allotments made by the Government of India to the Government of Bengal for purposes of administration will not be sufficient if we are to make such grants for mass education. The Government of Bengal has only to apply to the Government of India and to move that Government to make a larger allotment. I think I am not far wrong that taking the revenues of Bengal, without the Government of India having the lion's share of it, they are amply sufficient for giving free and compulsory education to the masses of the soil. The proportion of literates in the population in this land is exceedingly low. I have forgotten, Sir, the figure which my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mitter has furnished us—I think it is 6 per cent., but still it is very low. If the members feel that India may be made more prosperous and a boon to the rest of the world, for this purpose every sou must be given to education. If India has to contribute to the general intelligence of the world, and to the better advancement of scientific truth and industry there should be no shirking of duty as regards the promotion of education amongst the masses. If there be a statutory provision for the grant, that will be some security for that. I may be permitted to mention—and I may also correct the Hon'ble Mr. Mazumdar—that the state of things in England is this: I am not aware that there is a statutory provision in England for the proportion of State-grant, but I recently requested, in view of what Mr. Gokhale said some eight years ago in the Imperial Legislative Council that the State in England provided $\frac{2}{3}$ rd of the cost, a proper person to look into the matter for me and I found what the figures are for the year just preceding the war (1913-14); the contribution of the State for primary education in England and Wales was about one-half of the total cost, and that is the state of things which, I believe, has been going on for some time. I do not know what the state of things in Ireland and Scotland is as I have not got the figures with me. Therefore we are entitled to say that if in England the local bodies are helped to the extent of one-half of the cost of primary education by the State, may we not venture to ask for some thing here, and I should not have asked for a statutory provision if my suspicion as regards the future attitude had not been confirmed by the observations of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley. I think, my Lord, there is a feeling amongst our people that Government is not doing fairly with us as regards the promotion of mass education. Do we forget that some ten years ago, when Mr. Gokhale moved in the matter for the introduction of mass education in India, the local Governments opposed him and the Bill was opposed by the Government in the Council and was defeated. That shows, Sir, the reason for a statutory obligation on the Government that they must provide a substantial portion of the cost."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; the President.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, just following the motion of my Hon'ble friend Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar the next motion is mine. I do not know whether I shall be in order to move my motion at this stage."

The President said :—

"It depends entirely on whether the motion which is before the House is accepted or not. If the motion is not carried, then the Hon'ble Member will not be in order."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; the President.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My motion is that the financial assistance from the Government shall not be less than half the total amount of expenditure. Therefore, I submit, that my motion precedes that of my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mazumdar.”

The President said :—

“The question in the two amendments is the same, the only difference being in the figures. The most convenient way will be for the Hon'ble Members to discuss both amendments now and they can vote for one when it is put from the Chair. I must take them in the order in which they appear on the agenda paper.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, the matter has been very fully discussed and I do not wish to say much on the subject because I can well understand the fate of this motion. The Hon'ble Members who were members of the Select Committee will perhaps remember that I was one of those who wanted that some statutory proportion should be fixed in the Bill. I am not prepared to accept the motion of my Hon'ble friend Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, because he fixes the minimum of 30 and maximum of 50 per cent. I have tried to follow him in the speech he has made, but I do not quite understand on what grounds he limits the maximum to 50 per cent. This matter had been fully discussed in the Corporation and the Corporation, it will be found, recommended that for voluntary education Government should pay half and for compulsory primary education an amount not less than double the amount set apart by the municipality for primary education. This was unanimously accepted by the Corporation which is composed of all sections of the community. Then, my Lord, my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Mazumdar, is the President of an Association which is well known in the city—the Indian Association (The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar—Not now), and that Association I find have made out a strong case for a contribution from Government, and they say that a clear provision should be made in the Bill about the contribution by the Local Government towards the cost of compulsory primary education within a given area and the proportion of such contribution should be fixed at two-thirds of the entire cost. Then, my Lord, they conclude by stating the proportions that prevail in England, in Scotland and Ireland and they give figures which show that in Ireland practically the whole cost of elementary education is borne by the State. Surely, my Lord, the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley would not grudge at least half the amount to his fellow citizens, brethren, under the same sovereignty in India, when he and his own countrymen get practically the whole cost from the State in their country. My Lord, my friend the Hon'ble Rai Debendra Chandra Ghosh Bahadur has said very forcibly that there is an impression in the public mind that what the Government will do upon the passing of this Act is simply to get the education cess realised, and then when the time comes for contribution, however much we may go down on our knees and pray with folded hands, they will compel the people to submit to it. If the Government is sincerely anxious to foster and stimulate primary education in this country, I think Government should at least consent to the provision that they will contribute half the cost from the public revenues. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has said that Government have got many other items of expenditure to provide for and that there is also the Reform Scheme coming. I do not remember all the items, but I submit that the promotion of primary education should be one of the main duties of the State supplemented by local resources.

*Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; The President ;
Sir Henry Wheeler.*

As regards the argument of my Hon'ble friend Mr. P. C. Mitter that in this matter we shall tax ourselves, I admit that it is quite true, but it is a local taxation by which the poorest of the people in the far outlying municipalities in the mufassal will be taxed. Therefore there is a difference between this taxation and other general taxations such as the tax on jute. So we need not be carried away by the eloquence of my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mitter. On these grounds I support the general principle of my friend's amendment. I will not however make another speech when I shall move my own amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"There is a third amendment, in which I ask for 50 per cent. contribution (Item No. 30)."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I pray that my motion may be put first."

The President said :—

"The position will be this : I should put the motion of the Hon'ble Babu Ambica Charan Mazumdar first. All those Hon'ble Members who prefer the motion of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur will vote against the first motion. After it is voted on I should put the motion of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, there may be some of my colleagues who might be, if the larger piece is lost, content with the smaller crum."

The President said :—

"If the Hon'ble Members have no objection, I will put No. 15 first and then if it is not carried I will put No. 14. Is that the Hon'ble Members' wish?"

The Hon'ble Members agreed.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I had hoped to escape the obligation of speaking on this motion because it seemed to me that the objections to it were so patent that they would commend themselves without much discussion in Council, but in view of the two speeches that we have just heard, and as I am particularly concerned with the financial side of the Local Government, it is perhaps desirable that I should add a few words. The speech of the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur, on his own showing, is based on suspicion and distrust, but I am not concerned with the workings of the Hon'ble Member's mind and I find it difficult to cope with them. If he is filled with distrust and suspicion I can only regret the morbidity of his point of view and take it from him that his mental attitude is as stated. But on the other hand I am entitled to put it to the Council that on the grounds upon which he bases his suspicions there is little to justify his conclusions. He says that he is confirmed in them after hearing the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, though I should have thought that he would have been more confirmed in a suspicion as to our financial competence if we accepted the amendment. But even taking the speech of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, what are the three propositions that he laid down? First, Government, as a matter of fact, in comparison with the contributions of local bodies, does at present contribute in a liberal proportion towards education : secondly, that Government is in sympathy with the object of this Bill and hopes, after the Bill is passed into law, to assist its fulfilment, and thirdly that it is not possible for Government to accept an indefinite liability, in the face of an absolute indefiniteness as to its future resources. These are the three points which the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has emphasized.

The President.

"As to the first, I submit that there can be no question, since the figures he has given speak for themselves. As to the second, the attitude of Government towards this Bill, and its attitude towards education in general, have been frequently explained, and are borne out by the action which has been taken in the past and which it is hoped to take in the future. As to the third point, it is a simple matter of fact. We do not know what the financial liability may be, if effect is given to the provisions of the Bill either in whole or in part. That is not a matter of conjecture but of fact. The expenditure likely to be involved under the scheme of the Bill has still to be ascertained, and it is not defined by the mere insertion of an arithmetical fraction in the Bill. As to the indefiniteness of our resources, it is also a fact that we do not know what our financial position will be under the Reforms Scheme, but I think I have on a previous occasion mentioned in Council that we are not likely to find ourselves in any too affluent circumstances. When the Hon'ble Rai Debendra Chandra Ghosh Bahadur tells that we simply have to ask the Government of India for more money, he seems to betray an entire ignorance of what future relations are likely to be. Are Hon'ble Members of this Council not aware of various criticisms which are made against the financial proposals of the Reforms Scheme? It is held strongly, for instance, in the Punjab, Madras and Burma, that Bengal is going to be extremely well treated under the financial scheme which has been outlined in the Reforms proposals in comparison with other provinces, and these provinces are likely to represent that their contributions to the Central Government will be too heavy and ours too small. In the face of that contention is it likely that, merely for the asking, we shall be able to extract from the Government of India whatever sums we may require? But, apart from that, we do not know at present what the actual figure of our future income is likely to be, though if, so far as we can foresee, we are not likely to have a wide margin over obligatory expenditure, there is all the more reason that we should not rashly accept vague liabilities. When this scheme of provincialization of local finance comes into force, surely we shall have to consider in respect of each specific demand whether it will be wise to admit it, and if we decide to admit it, it may even necessitate the imposition of further taxation. In view of these two factors,—the desirability of each scheme as weighed against the available resources and the possibility of fresh taxation—our successors will have to come to a conclusion. But, in the state of uncertainty which exists at present, I submit that it would be absolutely unreasonable to expect the Local Government now to accept an arithmetical obligation."

The President said :—

"I am sorry that I confused Hon'ble Members by the way in which I put some of the amendments this morning. If they prefer it, I will put the amendments as far as possible in the form in which they appear on the agenda paper so as to avoid any confusion. If the Hon'ble Member wishes to vote for the amendment, that is to add certain words to the Bill, he must vote 'aye'.

Now I shall put No. 15 to the vote."

*Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; The President.The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“ May I say a few words in reply ? ”

The President said :—

“ Does the Hon'ble Member wish to make any further remarks upon No. 14 ? ”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“ Yes, my Lord. I have listened to the debate on my motion with some degree of disappointment. The Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has left it to Government ; my Hon'ble friend Mr. P. C. Mitter has also left it to Government, but the Government, through the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, has given us practically a curt refusal. He says that the Government cannot commit itself to any grant. The word 'distrust' may be a strong word, but certainly it is disappointing. I was under the impression when this Bill was introduced by my Hon'ble friend to my left that it was a great act for which we ought to be grateful not only to him, but also to the Government which received it. But it now comes to this, that while we asked for bread, we are simply going to get stones. We were proud to think that we were going to participate in the passing of this Bill, but now it comes to this, that there will be an education cess, the burden of which may not be felt by my Hon'ble friend Mr. P. C. Mitter or my Hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Ray, but which will fall upon the public in general very heavily without any adequate return for this cess. We shall have an education cess, and then we shall have an education department to extend our primary education. That is all and nothing more. Now referring to the opinion which has been expressed by the Hon'ble Director of Public Instruction in his published opinion, I find that he has drawn up a statement showing the immense disparity in the number of persons receiving education in municipalities and under the district boards. While there are 2 per cent. of the people receiving education under the district boards, the percentage in municipalities now is 10 and sometimes 12, and he has expressed regret that such has been the state of things in municipalities. Why ? He falls back on the old story of efficiency and inefficiency ; he says they have not provided good school buildings, furniture and so on, so that it shows inefficient education. We can now very well understand what the Education Department will do when this Bill becomes law. They will go upon efficiency, although we know at present we would rather prefer to give education to our agriculturists and labourers sitting under a banian tree rather than in commodious houses. Many of us (belonging to the bhadralok classes) received our education sitting under a tree and writing our letters on plantain leaves. However, this may not be tasteful to the men who now lead our society, and who want everything to be left to the tender mercies of Government, but I submit if Government do not come forward to spend even 30 per cent. on education, it is as good as saying Government declines to contribute anything. If, my Lord, I have not succeeded in doing anything, I have at all events succeeded in drawing some one out of the bag, and to show that Government is not disposed to pledge itself to any grant. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has referred to the Reform Scheme which is coming on. Yes, I am aware of it, but is the Reform scheme going to swallow up primary education ? I ought not to make any unpleasant remark, but I can scarcely resist the temptation of saying that money is forthcoming for police buildings, and other things, but when primary education is concerned for which Government has shown so much solicitation in accepting the Bill which has been presented to us this day, then of course Government cannot commit themselves to any undertaking, not even a bare 30 per cent. of the cost. This raises a very gloomy aspect before me at all events : when I came to the Council, it was with the satisfaction that I was going to be a party to an enactment which was intended to relieve the ignorance of my poorer countrymen, but I do think that if you reject even this modest proposal of mine, that many of us will go back with sad reflections that we have been a party to a measure which threatens only taxation and taxation and nothing but taxation."

The following motion (Amendment No. 15) which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur was then put, namely :—

"That at the end of clause 2B the following be added, namely :—

'Provided that the financial assistance from the Government shall not be less than half the total amount of expenditure to be incurred by the municipality in carrying out the direction of the Local Government under this section.'

A division was then taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENT No. 16.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray moved that for the words "the Commissioners" in lines 2 and 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 2D the words "three-fourths of the total number of Commissioners" be substituted.

He said :—

"What I want is that instead of the application being made by a bare majority, it should be made by three-fourths of the total number of Commissioners. My Lord, the introduction of compulsory primary education in the mufassal is a matter of far reaching consequences. Many important side issues are involved in it. Whether local conditions will permit a large number of boys to be spared from agricultural and domestic necessities, and whether it will be desirable for the children of certain communities to be associated with the bulk of the people at a certain school, and whether it would be possible for the majority of the population to bear an education cess and to pay the necessary school fees, are all very important issues which require careful consideration before compulsory education is introduced in any municipality. The clause now lays down that at any meeting of the municipality the Commissioners may decide that compulsory education should be introduced within its area. Now, my Lord, there are impatient idealists everywhere who in their enthusiasm often overlook the practical difficulties that will stand in their way. If such a person be in authority, it would not be very difficult for him at one of the meetings to have his own idea regarding the introduction of the compulsory education system carried even if the bulk of the ratepayers do not want it. My Lord, rule by majority is now an accepted principle in all self-governing institutions, but if successful administration is the aim this principle would however have to be qualified according to different existing conditions in different institutions. As I know something about the condition of our mufassal municipalities, and union committees, I cannot but hold that it would be dangerous to allow municipalities to decide the fate of such an important matter by a bare majority. I therefore suggest that effect should be given to the recommendations on this subject only when at least 75 per cent. of the total number of the Commissioners be of opinion that compulsory education should be introduced within their municipality. I hope my colleagues will realise the anxiety which I feel for the simple ratepayers of our mufassal municipalities and support my amendment. I find that the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha who has extensive experience of our rural areas is also anxious for a somewhat similar provision, but I want to meet the difficulty just at the beginning before the definite proposal is sent up to the Government."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. It is impossible that 75 per cent. of the members should be present. My Hon'ble friend knows very well—he must have read some of the Acts by which the meetings of public bodies are regulated, such as the Bengal Municipal Act and the Local Self-Government Act—and in these cases we find that at an extraordinary meeting the number fixed is two-thirds and not three-fourths. My Hon'ble friend has spoken of impatient idealists, but if there are impatient idealists in the mufassal towns, there are also retrograde reactionaries there too. We thought that it was necessary that the number should be fixed, and we found in other Acts of a similar nature that the number was two-thirds and not three-fourths."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"Sir, no number has been fixed at all. The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray says two-thirds. But nothing has been mentioned here."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Raja Hrishikesh Laha ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"I beg your pardon. I meant a bare majority was sufficient."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 17.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that the words "if any" in line 4 of sub-clause (3) of clause 2D be transposed so as to come after the word "newspapers" in line 3 of that sub-clause.

He said :—

"This is a verbal amendment and I think it may be accepted."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 18.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha moved that at the end of sub-clause (4) of clause 2D the following be added, namely :—

"and at which not less than two-thirds of the total number of Commissioners are present."

He said :—

"As primary education is to be made compulsory, it is necessary that the notification should have the support of a majority of the representatives of the people who are supposed to know the educational needs as well as the willingness of the people of the area in which such compulsory education is to be enforced, specially as they will have to bear the burden of educational expenses if imposed upon them under clause 21(b) of the Bill."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

I have much pleasure in accepting this amendment.

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 19.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the words "of Schools" in line 2 of the proviso to clause 7 the words "at least one Commissioner" be inserted.

He said :—

This motion refers to the constitution of the School Committee.

"I fully realise that this clause does not make the list exhaustive, but I wish to add that at least one of the Commissioners should also be on the Committee; there may be more, but things may so happen that only the Deputy-Inspectors and the Sub-Inspectors and one or more residents of the municipality may constitute the Committee. I think the municipality which will levy the tax and realise it, should have at least one member. It may well be argued that the Commissioners may have no room at all, but if you want to have one or more residents of the municipality, and the Deputy Inspector and a Sub-Inspector, there should be at least one Commissioner as well."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Raja Hrishikesh Laha ; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"I accept the amendment, although I think it unnecessary as the Commissioners themselves will appoint the Committee, but still I accept it."

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 20.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha moved that for the words "ten years" in line 4 of sub-clause (1) of clause 8 the words "twelve years" be substituted.

He said :—

"A course of education for four years only from the age of six to ten is not expected to confer any appreciable benefit to the boys or to be of any material service to them in after-years. Moreover, their attendance would vary according to seasonal demands, and hence their presence in the school would be only half-time. Their power of comprehension must necessarily be in a very undeveloped state, for which due allowance ought to be made, and I, therefore, suggest that the period of training should be extended to two years more and the age-limit be raised from ten to twelve. This, of course, presupposes a further expenditure on the boy for two years more, but I would not grudge it having regard to the fact that the object of the Bill is to make the boy more practical and a better citizen—an object for which no sacrifice is too great.

In support of my amendment I beg leave to quote from the Cyclopedia of Education, Volume I, page 287, the following passage :—

'Parents or guardians of children from five to fourteen (originally five to thirteen) were put under obligations to send them to a certified school every day that such school is in session. In case children are sent to an uncertified (inspected and approved) school, the burden rests on the parent to prove the competency of the school. Five to thirteen is still admitted as the compulsory age in certain rural districts.

'A considerable list of exemptions, however, existed. At twelve children could be examined, and if found proficient, could be excused from further attendance. A system of part-time attendance could also be permitted by local authorities, that is for children from twelve to fourteen (eleven to fourteen in agricultural areas) if they have attained a certain standard of proficiency or made during five years a required number of attendances.'

Moreover on humanitarian grounds the age-limit should be raised to twelve, namely, the necessity of protecting the boy from labour beyond his physical capacity, as the poverty of the parents may induce them to get him into an employment, which, on account of excessive labour, would very likely tend to deteriorate his health."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"I think, my Lord, the proposition of my Hon'ble friend Raja Hrishikesh Laha is to have a six years' course from six to twelve. If we increase the period of compulsion by two years more it will add very considerably to the expenses incurred. I have tried to work out the figures and I have very grave doubts as to whether we will be able to find the money for providing compulsory education for a period of four years, and if we make it six years it will be well-nigh impossible."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. Wordsworth ; Raja Hrishikesh Laha.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I support, my Lord, the amendment of the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha. I was of the same opinion in the Select Committee. I think, quite apart from the question of expense, if the object is to give some training to the boys, the age-limit ought to be increased to twelve years, especially in a country like India, because the period between eight to ten is the period when boys begin to understand things and pick up knowledge. To fix the maximum age at ten years under the period of compulsion will, I believe, having regard to the development of the boys in this country, be too low. When we are trying to give them some sort of education it is better to increase the age to twelve years ; although it will involve some additional expense I think it will be in the long run to the benefit of the country. I therefore most cordially support the motion."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I cannot accept this amendment. Your Lordship will be pleased to see that in Bombay where the Bill has been passed into Act the age is fixed at ten. In the Punjab where the Bill has recently been passed it is also fixed at ten, and in the Bihar and the United Provinces Bills, the age is also fixed at ten. I have therefore followed the lines of these Bills. Moreover, I think a four years' training in the vernacular will be quite sufficient to impart to the boys some sort of education which is the object of primary education. In fact, I myself left the vernacular school at the age of nine. For these reasons I oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I am unable to recommend the Council to accept this amendment. The Bill provides that municipalities shall, if they so wish, make arrangements for the provision of education under a voluntary system for all children who wish it up to the age of ten. It will obviously lead to confusion if the Commissioners proceeded to apply the compulsion to all boys up to the age of twelve. It is obviously desirable that education should be extended as far as possible, but here in this particular section we are dealing with compulsion—a new principle in Bengal—and the Select Committee considered and Government considers that the age of six to ten is as much as we can reasonably expect to bring under compulsion in the first instance. After experience of compulsion, if it is found that compulsion is welcomed, it will be possible to modify the Bill, but as a first essay Government feels that the age of six to ten is sufficient."

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha said :—

"My Lord, I have heard what has been said by my Hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Ray, but I do not think the cultivating classes are so very intelligent as to learn everything in nine years. He says that he left the primary school at the age of nine. From my personal experience of lower and upper primary schools, I do not think any benefit will be derived if the period is not extended by two years. Now, after only four years' training the boys will go back to their work and will forget everything and will forget even to sign their name. That is the result of four years' training, and if you do not extend it by two years more, it will be better not to give primary education at all."

Raja Hrishikesh Laha.

AMENDMENT No. 21.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha moved that the word "or" in line 3 of sub-clause (2) (b) of clause 8 be omitted and that at the end of that sub-clause the words "or of his being the sole bread-winner of his family" be added.

Babu S. N. Ray; Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

He said :—

“My Lord, as compulsory primary education is intended for the mass of the people who live from hand to mouth, precaution should be taken that compulsion does not act with great hardship upon them. The words ‘domestic necessity’ in this clause are indeed intended to cover such cases as the amendment proposes, but they are too vague to be given effect to in the practical administration of the law. It is better, therefore, that the circumstance implied by the amendment should be more clearly defined than left to be interpreted according to the uncertain comprehension of those who are authorised to administer the law. It is needless to say that the deletion of the words “or the” in the third line is necessitated by reason of the amendment I have submitted for your consideration.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“My Lord, I accept this, though I do not understand how a little boy can be the sole bread-winner of his family.”

The motion was put and agreed to.

AMENDMENT No. 22.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray moved that at the end of sub-clause (2) of clause 8 the following be added, namely :—

“(d) that the boy is not likely to stay within the Municipality for more than six months.”

He said :—

“My Lord, sub-clause (2) of clause 8 makes several exceptions where a boy should be exempted from attending a school under compulsion. To them I propose to add that if a boy comes on a short visit to a place where compulsory education is in force, he too should be exempted from attending the local school. The object of this amendment is obvious : if the boy is going to stay there for a short while, it will do him no good if he is got hold of and put into the school. On the other hand it might interfere with the system of education which he might be undergoing at his permanent place of residence. There is also every possibility of this procedure being resented by his guardians. Now, take, for instance, a boy goes on a short visit to his uncle : it might not be always that a suitable teacher goes along with the boy. In this case if he is forced to take admission in the local municipal school, I am sure this action will be strongly resented by his guardian. I therefore hope that my amendment will be accepted.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accede to the request of the Hon'ble Kumar. Under this excuse the boy will be kept out of school for an indefinite period. The School Committee will be fully competent to deal with these and other cases by virtue of the discretion vested in them by clause 8, subsection (1). Sub-clause (2) does not give an exhaustive list of ‘reasonable excuses.’ I am sorry I must oppose this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, this question was raised in the Select Committee, if I remember aright ; and I must say that the existing section gives sufficient grounds why the boy should not be admitted to the school in a place where he has gone temporarily. The School Committee will consider all these grounds. Further, we are all interested in the promotion of primary education. I think that there should be a little compulsion as we know our countrymen ; otherwise all sorts of excuses will be put forward. The Act will keep many openings or loopholes and there will be no end of excuses and the Act will be made nugatory and no one will come to these schools."

Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray ; Raja Hrishikesh Laha ; Babu S. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"My Lord, I find that my friends are not opposed to the spirit of my resolution. I do not see any reason why they should not make it explicit in the Act and exempt these boys."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 23.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha moved that at the end of sub-clause (2) of clause 10 the following be inserted, namely :—"or may adjourn such hearing for adequate arrangements to be made for the efficient elementary education of the boy otherwise".

He said :—

"My Lord, there may be circumstances by reason of which it may not be possible for a guardian to willingly comply with the magisterial order when made. As, for instance, when the guardian should, for the time being, happen to be an illiterate and uneducated woman as is common in this country without any male member of the family at hand to advise and guide her or she may be arranging with some other individual, better circumstanced, for the proper education of the boy. It is to provide against such contingency and against any unnecessary hardship being inflicted on the guardian that I propose to confer upon the enquiring magistrate a discretion which I have no doubt he will always exercise with care and deliberation."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. This amendment contemplates an alternative system of primary education which is not recognised by the Education Department to be permissive."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 24.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha moved that after the words "section 10" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 11 the words "without any reasonable excuse" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, in order to enable a guardian to submit a reasonable explanation why he has failed to comply with the order of the magistrate, I think the words 'without any reasonable excuse' should be inserted between 'section 10' and 'shall'. If the guardian has made proper arrangement for the education of the child in a village other than his own I think he should be allowed to submit a proper explanation and exempted from the payment of any fine."

*Babu S. N. Ray; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I cannot accept this amendment. It will be found that on failure to obey an order it would be open to a guardian to take the plea that he had a reasonable excuse for such failure to obey. It should not be allowed."

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 25.

The following motion which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Raja Hrishkesh Laha was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

To move that for the words "ten years" in line 3 of clause 12 the words "twelve years" be substituted.

AMENDMENT No. 26.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that for the word "necessary" in lines 1 and 2 of the proviso to clause 12 the word "withheld" be substituted.

He said :—

"My Lord, unfortunately in this clause the discretion is left with the employer. I want to have the discretion vested in the School Committee, for if you say 'shall not be necessary', the employer will readily employ a boy who ought to be in school and then, when he is called upon to explain, he will say that it was not necessary for him, and he will fish up some excuse. Let us have instead of 'shall not be necessary,' 'it shall not be withheld,' that is to say that such a man must apply to the School Committee and say—'My employment of this boy will not interfere with his attending the school' and if the School Committee thinks that the excuse is a reasonable one, they will not withhold the permission. If you say 'shall not be necessary,' the employer will not go to the School Committee but will abrogate himself the discretion of deciding it. For these reasons I have moved this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. If my Hon'ble friend, the mover, reads the clauses of the Bill, he will see that the Bill is more liberal. This amendment makes it obligatory on persons to apply for exemption, whereas the wording of the Bill does not lay down any such obligation. Under these circumstances I cannot accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I am surprised that the Hon'ble Member cannot accept this amendment. Because if you leave it to the discretion of the employer, he will always employ boys and then fish up some excuse that it does not interfere with their studies. But let him go first to the School Committee and show them before he employs the boy that such employment will not interfere with his studies. I think the power should be given to the School Committee and not left to the sweet pleasure of the employer. There is no question of being liberal, or illiberal, but if you mean to work the Act properly and if you want to make it succeed, you must give power to the School Committee and not leave the discretion to the employer in a matter of this kind."

Raja Hrishikesh Laha.

AMENDMENT No. 27.

The Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha moved that for the words "twenty rupees" at the end of sub-clause (2) of clause 13 the words "five rupees" be substituted.

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

He said :—

“ In order to protect the employer from deception, I move this amendment. It may happen that a boy really ten years of age, but fairly developed in physique so as to pass for a boy of twelve or thirteen years, is taken over to an employer for an employment. He is engaged under the bona-fide belief that he is twelve or thirteen—an age stated by the needy guardian of the boy. It may occur that on detection of the under-age of the boy engaged, the innocent employer is punished in spite of his bona-fide action based upon an apparently honest representation. Moreover, in my opinion, the limit of the fine is too high for the work-a-day man in Bengal. I would, therefore, reduce it to five rupees. This would be in consonance with what is inflicted upon the guardian under clause 11. There is no reason why the employer should be punished more heavily than the guardian himself.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. This is only a maximum fine, which is fixed at Rs. 20, so that it will be within the discretion of the Court either to impose the maximum or any other fine that was necessary. That was the amount fixed in the original Bill, and the Select Committee saw no reason to reduce the amount, and for this reason I oppose the amendment.”

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

“ My Lord, I beg to support the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha. We are going to have a new system, and I think we ought to accept the amendment. As it is, I think, the Bill will be unpopular, and if it is unpopular, it will be difficult to make it a success. On that ground I support the Hon'ble Raja Hrishikesh Laha.”

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

“ My Lord, I support the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill.”

The motion was then put and a division was taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENT Nos. 28 AND 29.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray moved (1) that for the word "satisfies" in line 5 of clause 18 the words "applies to" be substituted, and, (2) that for the words "the School Committee may determine" in line 9 of clause 18 the words "applied for by him" be substituted.

He said :—

"Amendments Nos. 28 and 29 stand in my name. They both refer to the same clause and are interdependent, and I therefore beg permission to move them together.

In my opinion compulsory education ought to be free for those whose guardians cannot afford to pay the cost of such education. An education cess is going to be imposed. On that account, it would be rather hard on the poor people if they have to pay the expenses of compulsory education of their boys in addition to the education cess. No self-respecting person would like to receive charity if he can afford to do without it. Whenever a man applies for a remission of the fee or any part thereof, it should be granted to him. I consider it rather humiliating to a person if he has to satisfy the School Committee by producing his account books that he is unable to pay the fees. A poor man's lot is bitter, why make it worse by adding humiliation to it. I would ask my colleagues to consider how distasteful the whole thing is likely to be, and I hope that my amendment will be accepted by the House."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. O'Malley ; The President ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"I do not know whether my Hon'ble friend has seriously considered the effect of his amendment. The amendment would make it obligatory on the School Committee to reduce the rate whenever his guardian wishes to make an application. Simply putting in an application would be quite sufficient and then the effect of clause 23 would be that effect would have to be given to whatever the guardian says, and this would mean a reduction in fees. My Hon'ble friend says the guardian would feel it humiliating to produce account books, etc., to show his circumstances. It is sufficient for him to submit an application and make out a case for exemption of fees. As President of a School Committee I have to deal with applications once or twice a month, and specially in the month of January, when boys take their admission into school, and I find that those who can afford to pay either the whole amount or at least half the fee, generally come up with a prayer for total exemption and we have in many cases to reject these applications, and we find that these people do eventually pay half the fee. So I have some experience of these applications, and under the circumstances I cannot accede to my Hon'ble friend's request."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I beg to support the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill both on the ground which he has stated and also on perhaps what may be called a formal ground, that the amendments are not very good English. The Hon'ble mover of the amendment wishes to have 'applies to the School Committee that he is unable to pay the fees' and again further down he would have 'at such reduced fees as applied for by him.' I think the amendments are open to serious objection. The power of determining in the case of free education and reduction of fees discretion must remain with the Committee. These amendments would take away that power and it would be sufficient merely for the parent or guardian to say 'I am a poor man'. He should be obliged to prove his poverty."

The motions were then put and lost.

AMENDMENTS Nos. 30 AND 31.

The following motions stood in the name of the Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur :—

To move that before clause 21B in Part IV of the Bill the following be inserted, namely :—

"21AA. The Local Government shall contribute every year from the provincial revenues for the purposes of primary education within a municipality, not less than one-half of the cost budgetted for such expenditure by the commissioners."

If motion No. 30 be carried, also to move that for the words "any grant" in line 2 of sub-clause (1) of clause 21B the words "the grant" be substituted.

The President said :—

"Amendments 30 and 31. These two amendments are covered by the decisions already reached."

The motions were then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 32.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after the words "cost of" in line 3 of sub-clause (1) of clause 21B the word "compulsory" be inserted.

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. Wordsworth ; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; Mr. O'Malley.

He said :—

“ What I propose, my Lord, is this : educational cess should be levied for the cost of compulsory primary education. I need not reiterate what I have said. It is not necessary for me to speak at length on this subject. I have already said what I wished to say about this on a previous amendment.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ Speaking for myself, I have no objection, my Lord, to accepting this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

“ I am unable on behalf of Government to recommend the acceptance of this amendment. We have already discussed the whole matter in relation to amendment No. 11 on the paper, and I have there indicated Government's inability to accept the proposal that an educational cess, if levied, shall be applied only to expenditure on compulsory education.”

The motion was then put and lost.

AMENDMENT No. 33.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the words “ education cess ” in line 6 of sub-clause (I) of clause 21B the following be inserted, namely :—

“ and to be assessed according to the means and circumstances of the people residing or carrying on any business within the Municipality.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, this amendment refers to the assessment of the education cess, and I wish to indicate that the assessment should be according to the means and circumstances of the people residing or carrying on business within the municipality. The word ‘ occupation ’ used in the Municipal Act has become the source of many questions and difficulties, but here we may steer clear of all these difficulties, and I say that the assessment should be according to the means and circumstances of the people not only residing in the municipality, but also persons not actually residing in the municipality, but carrying on business within it. There are many people, well-to-do people, who do not generally reside within the limits of the municipality or near their business but just outside them ; they do their business within the municipality and reside on their own property just outside, and I think it is only fair that these persons should be taxed and should be made responsible for this education cess. There are many people of this description, and they are very well-to-do people.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I wish I could accept this amendment, but I am sorry I cannot accept an assessment on the valuation of holdings and assessment according to the circumstances at one and the same place. This would be placing both the municipalities and the rate-payers in an anomalous position, and non-residents having business connection in the place would have to pay, so I cannot accept this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“ My Lord, on behalf of Government I beg to support the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill, owing to the practical difficulty which such a provision would make in the working of the Bill. There are two chief sources of taxation in mufassil municipalities, one being a tax on occupiers' holdings

Babu Ambica Charan Mazumdar.

according to circumstances and property within the municipality, and the other a tax on buildings assessed at the rate of the annual value of the holdings. This amendment on the other hand would provide for assessment according to means and circumstances only, and I take it that where there was the rate on holdings, a personal tax would be levied and you would have to draw up an entirely different assessment which would be extremely difficult to do. You would introduce in effect another basis of taxation. Another difficulty which has occurred to me is that the form of the amendment is liable to some misinterpretation. The cess is to be assessed according to the means and circumstances of the people residing or carrying on any business within the municipality. Now it is to be observed that this is an important innovation that the assessment must not be according to circumstances and property within the municipality, but only according to means and circumstances. If a wealthy zemindar had a house in a town or a business firm had a small sub-agency in it, the zemindar or the firm might be liable to be assessed according to their whole income. It seems to me that it might have very serious consequences, because there is no minimum fixed, and there is no safeguard of any kind provided."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambica Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I do not understand exactly what this Act is intended to be. There will be an education cess, and the legislature does not say a word as to how this will be levied, probably leaving it for the Government to make rules by which to impose a tax in a certain way. That, I consider, is an abdication of the functions of the legislature. To leave everything in the hands of the Government, simply requiring the Municipality to apply to Government and Government granting their application, and then the Government coming with its rules to levy the tax and to determine what form the taxation will take and upon whom it will be levied, this, I think, is a very large order upon the Government and I certainly on principle strongly oppose a measure of this kind which does not even undertake to say what would be the nature and effect of the taxation. Everything is, as I understand, left to be governed by rules. Practically therefore there are only two provisions, one for application, the other for taxation. And Government will do the rest : It can levy any taxation it pleases. If that is so ; there was no necessity for coming before the legislature for a measure of this kind. Why should not the Legislature indicate even the line upon which taxation will be made ? "

The motion was then put and a division was taken with the following result.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.THE BENGAL PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL, 1919.

[The consideration of the amendments was resumed.]

AMENDMENT No. 35.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that at the end of sub-clause (I) of clause 21B the following proviso be added, namely :—

“Provided that the assessment of the cess upon any person shall in no case exceed one-tenth of the aggregate amount of tax or rate levied on him by the Municipality under the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, or the Calcutta Municipal Act, 1899.”

He said :—

“I have already lost my motion about the nature of the taxation to be imposed, and the persons from whom it is to be levied.

I wish to make it clear that the object of this amendment or rather the additional provision, is to point out very clearly to this Council the incidence of taxation which will necessarily fall upon the municipal population. My Lord, in the case of municipalities the education cess will have to be borne mainly by those people who are paying municipal rates and taxes, but they are the very people who would be the least benefited by this enactment. For these people already pay for the education of their children, and I may say in every municipality there are about half a dozen schools of various grades and denominations, both for girls and boys to which these ratepayers of the municipalities already send their boys and girls, so that they do not want any new kind of school for the education of their children. They do educate their children, and they bear the burden of their education. Of course for the lower classes of people, namely, a few agriculturists, and their number is very small in a municipality, artisans and so forth, these people are prepared to make further sacrifices but we should not to run down a willing horse to death. Already the municipal ratepayers are heavily taxed, and if the bulk of the education cess is to fall upon them as it surely will, I think there ought to be a limit beyond which their resources ought not to be taxed. I have already indicated that by this Bill they are not benefited in the least, as they already educate their children. They are not willing to send their children to these schools, they are already in schools, invariably both the boys and girls, so I propose that where you assess the education cess in a municipality the assessment shall not exceed one-tenth of the aggregate amount of the tax or rate already paid by them, either under the Bengal Municipal Act in the mufassal, or under the Calcutta Municipal Act in Calcutta; otherwise the burden would be very heavy upon them, and it would be inequitable considering the fact that they do not want the application of this enactment in order to provide education for their children. If Your Excellency's Government were to take statistics, it would be found that almost the entire amount, I believe not even one per cent. of the tax already paid in the municipality, is borne by agriculturists or artisans. The entire bulk of the tax is to be paid by those for whom the tax is not intended, and who would not be benefited by the taxation. It is purely a tax on patriotism on their part to bear this burden for the benefit of the entire community, and I hope and trust that the Council will seriously consider whether it will be equitable for them to throw the bulk of this additional cess upon those very people who would be the least benefited."

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

" My Lord, I desire to support this amendment of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, but my reasons for supporting the amendment are somewhat different from the reasons of the Hon'ble Mover of the amendment. The main reason why I support this amendment is that 10 per cent. would be ample, more than ample, even when we have compulsory education. The total income of the mufassal municipalities in the year 1916-17 is Rs. 56,90,000 odd, that includes income other than income from rates and taxes. The total income from rates and taxes is 46 lakhs in all, so that 10 per cent. will amount to Rs. 4,60,000. The amount spent at present on primary education in municipal areas is Rs. 91,554. This is considerably in excess of the amount which was spent in the year 1915-16 which amounted to Rs. 72,902. Now, My Lord, the present Government contribution in the year 1916-17 was Rs. 44,000 and odd out of a total amount of Rs. 91,000 and odd. The Government contribution in the year 1916-17 was Rs. 31,000 and odd, and this again has been increased to Rs. 44,000 and odd, so that at the present moment the total amount spent by all the municipalities is Rs. 91,000 and odd. Out of that Government found Rs. 44,000 and odd, or very nearly half. Now, the total number of boys whom we wish to educate in the mufassal municipalities after compulsion is introduced will be 170,000. I do not know what the Government view with regard to this amendment will be, and for that reason I may be permitted to explain how I arrived at the figure 170,000. The total number of male children within the ages of 5 to 10 is 3,065,000 for the whole province. Rough speaking, the total number of our population living in municipal areas is about 3 millions including the town of Calcutta. The income I have indicated for the mufassal municipal towns only ; the income for the town of Calcutta is considerable. Now, out of our total of 3 millions, if we take on the same proportion, we find that the total number between 5 and 10 will be 214,000 and odd. We have already settled that the ages of 6 and 10 will be the ages for compulsory education, therefore by a process of calculation we have arrived at the figure of 170,000 whom we shall have to educate. Now the present average cost is little over Rs. 3 on each boy. We spend altogether 37 lakhs of rupees and the total number of boys we educate is little over 11 lakhs, therefore the present average cost is a little over Rs. 3, therefore the total cost will be somewhere near 5 lakhs of rupees, and I have already stated at the beginning of my remarks that 10 per cent. means Rs. 4,60,000, and if, over and above this we take into account Rs. 91,000 already spent in these municipalities without any education cess, the figure is considerably more than 5 lakhs. Therefore it is not necessary to have more than 10 per cent. even when compulsion is introduced. Now, it is of the highest importance that we should not scare away people, that we should not leave an impression to these municipalities that they will have to pay very largely if primary education, especially compulsory primary education, is to be introduced. As I said yesterday, we must remember that these municipalities are mostly poor municipalities, and as these municipalities are mostly poor, and if 10 per cent. is enough to meet our requirements, I submit, My Lord, that we ought to be content with that limit. If we put down that limit, we shall start with greater good-will which will have a better effect upon the objects which we all have in view, whether officials or non-officials, and for that reason also I strongly support the amendment of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"I am sorry, My Lord, I cannot accept the amendment. The result of the acceptance of this amendment would be that the incidence of taxation may be heavy on the poor and light on the rich. I think these are matters to be dealt with by the rules. As I have said, it is the poor who will be taxed heavily, and I think it is a state of things which my Hon'ble friend would be the first to cry against. The figures given by the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter ought not to be a guide in a case like this. It is not proper to work out on the aggregate of income of municipalities, and to come to a figure of 4 or 5 lakh. The rate of taxation should be according to local needs and circumstances."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, may I be permitted to make a suggestion for the consideration of the Hon'ble Member in charge.

I desire to make a suggestion for his consideration as well as for the consideration of Government and it is this. That instead of the amendment as moved by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, if the resolution be amended with the leave of the Council to the effect that the total amount from each municipality will be 10 per cent. of the total amount of the rates and taxes, of that municipality it would be better. My object in this : there is some force in what the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has said that taxation ought not to fall on the poor heavily, so that if my suggestion be accepted, it will thus be open to make such necessary arrangements so that the rich may be taxed more than 10 per cent. and the poor may be allowed to escape with their present taxation."

Mr. O'Malley.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“My Lord, I must admit that I am in some doubt as to the exact meaning of the proviso which it is proposed to add to the Bill. As I read it provides for a maximum of one-tenth of the tax on the persons or the rate of holdings in different municipalities. The Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has taken it to mean the aggregate amount of all the different taxes or rates, but I am not quite sure whether that interpretation is correct, or whether it would be possible to take into consideration such things as the tax on professions and trades, water rate, conservancy fees, hackney carriage fees and so on. If I am right in thinking that it is intended to allow one-tenth of the tax on persons or the rate on holdings, I should point out this maximum is low compared with that contained in the Bihar and Orissa Bill which allows for at least one-third of the maximum tax or rate which can be imposed on the owners and occupiers of properties under the Bengal Municipal Act. The inherent difficulty about a maximum of 10 per cent. for each and every municipality is that we do not at present know what will be the total cost of putting primary education on a proper footing, and what share of the cost will be met from other sources such as fees and the Government grant. The Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has given certain estimates which do not altogether agree with estimates that have been prepared departmentally. According to these estimates, the cost of providing proper education for boys will be a capital cost of 17 lakhs, recurring cost 9 lakhs a year. Under a cheaper scheme, the capital cost will be 10 lakhs and the recurring cost 5 lakhs. The difference is considerable. It is partly due to the style of buildings which will be necessary and partly to the scale on which teachers would be remunerated. Under the cheaper scheme, for instance, the accommodation in some of the schools will be of a cheaper type,—mud walls, thatched roof—and the teachers will be paid on an average only Rs. 8 a month. Well, that is the estimate which has been prepared, but I am not at present prepared to say that that estimate would eventually be accepted. In any case, we do not know what money would be available in each municipality. Knowledge on this point will not be available till the estimate which is provided for in Part II of the Bill is obtained. It was on this account that both in the original Bill and in the Bill as revised in the Select Committee, the method of levying the cess is left to rules. As was pointed out by the Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood yesterday, the Bill is an experiment and those charged with its administration must be allowed a certain amount of latitude. The Hon'ble Mover is inspired by an apprehension that the incidence of the cess may be excessive, and he therefore urges that a safeguard against a crushing impost is required. The procedure contemplated by the Bill, however, really guards against this. The Municipal Commissioners in making their estimate under Part II of the Bill will estimate the amount a cess will yield, and obviously they will consider at what rate the ratepayers can reasonably be expected to pay. A cess cannot be imposed except by the consent of the Municipal Commissioners themselves, and the Commissioners are not in the least likely to decide in favour of the cess unless they know the rate at which it will be levied and are satisfied that it is within the capacity of the ratepayers. The cess, in fact, will be a form of taxation by consent. Then again, if and when the Municipal Commissioners pass a resolution in favour of the cess, the public will have an opportunity of expressing their views, as section 21C specifically provides that the rules regulating the matter in which the cess is to be levied, shall only issue after previous publication. This means that a preliminary notification must issue, that any resident will have an opportunity of raising objections, and those objections must be considered by Government before the rules are finally issued. I can assure the Council that Government is not likely to agree to an excessive taxation both because it is the guardian of the people's interests, and also to put the case on a lower level because Government is a large ratepayer itself. This was pointed out in the municipal resolution, from which I may quote :— ‘In the Presidency as a whole, altogether 5½ per cent. of the amount realized from holdings, conservancy, lighting and water rates and taxes is paid for Government buildings. The payments represent in Darjeeling, Berhampore and Chittagong approximately one-twelfth, in Dacca one-eighth, and in Rampore-Boalia nearly one-fifth of the municipal receipts from these rates, which constitute the bulk of the income from taxation. These figures serve to illustrate the fact, which is not always realized by the municipalities themselves, that, apart from its position as a controlling authority, Government has a direct interest as a ratepayer in the purity and efficiency of municipal administration."

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

" My Lord, I feel some difficulty in supporting this amendment. I entirely endorse what was said by the Hon'ble Mr. Arden-Wood yesterday that in embarking upon a big experiment like this, we ought not at the outset handicap those charged with the carrying it out. In opposing this amendment I desire to take exception to some of the arguments advanced by its supporters. The Hon'ble the mover of the amendment has told us that we ought to be careful in letting alone those who are already paying for the education of their children, and that the taxation ought not to be very heavy in their case. My Lord, it is not exactly for services rendered—municipal services—as in the case of conservancy or lighting or street watering, that this cess is about to be levied, but it is for ensuring better civic life, to ensure better understanding of all-round rules of hygiene and sanitation that make municipal administration easier and for ensuring better citizenship, that this experiment is being undertaken, and it is exactly upon those who appreciate the blessings of education for these and other allied purposes and whose representatives have moved in the matter that the burden must necessarily fall heavier. It is improperly to subscribe to the proposition that because some are paying for the education of their own children already and are not likely to be benefited by the new scheme they should be left alone or at all events ought to be lightly taxed. If we are to have a successful experiment, it must, for some time at least, be the other way. Then with regard to the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter's figures, figures can be made to tell any tale ; I shall take the figures as he has put them and for the time being I shall not take Mr. O'Malley's explanation on them or their corrections. If his figures are correct, only 3½ rupees per head was spent on primary education and if things are to continue on that basis the state of things would be a libel on education. We may have to put up with this state of things for a long time. But that must not be the basis of future organisation if we are not with the situation. Under the proposed scheme we shall be paying Rs. 8 to our teachers ; Rs. 8 is what we dare not offer to our menial servants now-a-days. My Lord, if education is to be on the basis put forward by the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter, I would much rather that we waited till we could do better and while so waiting took steps to provide teachers capable of conducting this important branch of education without which no other branch of education can possibly flourish. As has been pointed out the Municipal Commissioners who will practically be the masters of the situation are not likely to give themselves and their constituents away. Of course there is the other side to be considered. We must not scare away Municipal Commissioners, but we must realise the situation clearly and try to face it wisely yet boldly and not toy with it for the sake of name only and provide an organisation that will be a failure from the outset. If an important matter like this is to be introduced, it ought to be undertaken in all seriousness, and the Government and the municipalities for the time being ought to be left free to judge for themselves what will be the best for each locality."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; The President ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

“ My Lord, I desire to speak a few words on this very important subject. The question that has been raised is whether there should be a limit to the incidence of taxation by statute. On the one side, it is clearly admitted that there are no materials for limiting the incidence of taxation, and on the other side, it may be contended that those who live within the municipality believe that the burden of taxation is very heavy. Indeed, My Lord, I am going to endorse the latter view, because already those who live within the limits of municipalities are groaning under heavy taxation. It appears in many mufassal municipalities that the percentage has gone up 19, 21, 23 per cent., secondly, it is a matter of serious consideration whether the education cess should be left unlimited in scope. Therefore, is it not necessary that the Municipal Commissioners should be told that the increase ought not to be above certain limits? The figures which have been submitted by the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter show clearly what this view of the case is, and if that is so, why should it be left in its unlimited scope so that the Municipal Commissioners will be in a position to raise it as much as they like? I say this because the Council ought to consider the ability of the taxpayers in the mufassal municipalities to bear this tax. Those who live within the jurisdiction of the mufassal municipalities will certainly raise their voice in the Council against it.

Now, it is very easy to say that the ratepayers of the municipalities ought to educate their boys; but then again the question depends on their ability to do so and if they are unable to do, what should be the procedure? My Lord, having some experience in this matter, I have ventured to submit a few words for the consideration of the Hon'ble Members of the Council.”

The President said :—

“ Does the Hon'ble mover wish to make any further remarks? ”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“ My Lord, the figures given by my Hon'ble friend, Mr. P. C. Mitter, seem to me to be quite convincing: the figures given by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley also support it that there will be ample funds even with 10 per cent. to provide education for the poor. I do not think I need say much about it. Everything tends to show that there will be sufficient money for primary education with 10 per cent. of the existing municipal taxes. It is not a luxury but it is a necessity, and in providing for a necessity we ought not to go upon mere ideas and sentiments, but to consider the matter from the real practical point of view. It is easy enough for those who are rolling in wealth to say that we must pay any tax. Well, quite so, but there ought to be a limit to everything;—even to gushing sentiment and as the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has pointed out, there will be no difficulty in carrying out this primary education even with 10 per cent. I do not see why the matter should be left indefinite and thereby create an apprehension in the minds of those who will be entrusted with the administration of the Act.”

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The motion was then put and a division was taken with the following result :—

AMENDMENT No. 36.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray moved that at the end of sub-clause (I) of clause 21B the following be added, namely :—

“Provided that an education cess shall be levied only upon persons occupying holdings within the Municipality and that the rate of such cess shall in no case exceed three per cent. of the annual value of such holdings, nor shall the amount assessed upon any person in any one year be more than twenty-four

Sir R. N. Mookerjee.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has already dwelt on the necessity of an explicit statutory provision for the manner in which the education cess is to be assessed. There is, however, some difference between his amendment and mine in respect of a suitable rate of assessment. What he wanted is already known to the House, and what I want is that only persons occupying holdings within the municipality are to be assessed and that the maximum rate of assessment is not to exceed 3 per cent. of the annual value of a man's holdings, and in no case he is to pay more than Rs. 24 per annum as education cess. I think that my amendment makes an adequate provision for the Education Fund. What my point is—and also that of my Hon'ble friend Babu A. C. Mazumdar—that there should be some definiteness as to the amount which we might be called upon to pay to meet the expenses of primary education. I do not like that we should be left altogether at the mercy of Government as to the amounts which we might be asked to contribute. The extreme vagueness about it is sure to make us uneasy and somewhat overcautious in advocating the cause of primary education. This is not only a matter which concerns the Indian middle classes but the zamindars, the mercantile community, the Government officials and even Your Excellency. The term ‘Government,’ would after the Reforms mean an Education Minister, who for sometime to come will have to obey the orders of that section of the public who are now very influential in the country though not the real representative of the people. Dictated by them he may lay down a rule that the senior partners of Messrs. Bird & Co. should pay a quarter of their income as education cess : he might make a rule that the zamindars should retain a certain sum for their expenses and pay the rest for education : and it might also be laid down that Your Excellency and the other Members of Your Excellency's Council should pay half of their salaries received by them. My Lord, the vagueness in the provisions would make all this possible. I hope therefore, that this vagueness and cause of uneasiness ought to be removed for the very success of the cause of education, and I hope that my amendment, because of its liberal provision, would be acceptable to the House.”

The Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookerjee said :—

“ My Lord, several resolutions have been moved to limit the rate of assessment and taxes and to restrict the power of taxation ; but I have not heard a single voice in opposition to any such resolution. It seems to me that we forget that the assessment will be made by the Municipal Commissioners elected from amongst our own people for the education of our children and also that those Commissioners will themselves have to pay the taxes. Government will only have the power to veto or sanction. I therefore cannot understand why we cannot have confidence in our own people. If we lack confidence in ourselves, i.e., our Municipal Commissioners elected from our own people, how can we in all propriety and consistency clamour for the Reform Scheme or Home Rule. Why should we take for granted that the Municipal Commissioners will not consider the circumstances of the people and their income before they fix the rate of taxation. The Bill for Primary Education has been brought forward by one of our colleagues and not by the Government and the administration of it is left to the people. I therefore fail to see the cause of this opposition thus discrediting our own people by showing want of confidence in their judgment. As regards the alleged apprehension of the Hon'ble mover in regard to the unfair assessment of European firms I can assure him that there is not a single European in this Chamber who shares his fear.”

*Babu S. N. Ray ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Mr. O'Malley ;
The President.*

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. The education cess is proposed to be levied upon occupiers of holdings, leaving the owner free. This is an amendment which cannot be accepted. Again, the minimum fixed is 3 per cent. on the annual value of holdings, subject to a total maximum of Rs. 24. The two may clash. Is the Hon'ble Member aware that in the town of Calcutta there are several people—owners of houses—who have to pay more than Rs. 10,000 as rates and taxes? Is it proper to exempt them from the education cess, or to levy only Rs. 24 from them? Is my Hon'ble friend aware that the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan pays nearly Rs. 35,000 in the shape of rates and taxes to the Calcutta Corporation, and will the Corporation, who will have to initiate primary education, be content to receive only Rs. 24 from the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraj Bahadur of Burdwan? I think this is a state of things which my Hon'ble friend will never think of. So, under these circumstances, I oppose this amendment."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, so far as this amendment is concerned, I am sorry that I cannot agree with the Hon'ble mover. But I beg to propose, with Your Excellency's permission, that, if this amendment is not acceptable to the House, the words 'nor shall.....be more than twenty-four rupees' be deleted from the end of this proviso."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I am unable to recommend the Council that they should accept this amendment on the general ground that it is opposed to the system of municipal taxation in force in many of the municipalities in Bengal. In smaller towns a personal tax is imposed on the occupiers of holdings; elsewhere a rate on holdings is imposed on the owners. In Calcutta itself the consolidated rate is payable half by the owners and half by the occupiers. This amendment provides that the education cess shall be levied only upon occupiers and the owners are to be exempt; and I imagine that one result of this would be that landlords, often a wealthy class, would escape. There seems to be no valid reason why the landlords should be a privileged class."

The President said :—

"The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem ought to have given due notice of the amendment which he now proposes. I have, however, no objection to taking the sense of the Council upon this particular proposal. Under these circumstances the amendment moved by the Hon'ble Kumar and the proposed amendment to it now moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem can be discussed together. I will then put the Hon'ble Maulvi's amendment to the amendment and afterwards I will put the main amendment."

The motion was then put in the following amended form and lost :—

That at the end of sub-clause (1) of clause 21B the following be added, namely :—

"Provided that an education cess shall be levied only upon persons occupying holdings within the municipality and that the rate of such cess shall in no case exceed three per cent. of the annual value of such holdings."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

AMENDMENT No. 37.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhereswar Ray moved that for the words "a majority" in line 4 of sub-clause (2) of clause 21B the words "three-fourths" be substituted.

He said :—

My Lord, as it is, the clause lays down that at least one Commissioner in excess of half the total number of Commissioners should decide the matter of imposition of an education cess ; whereas I suggest that this should be done by a three-fourths majority. While I moved an amendment in respect of clause 2D yesterday, I explained to the House why I wanted a substantial majority in deciding questions of grave importance in our mufassal municipalities. I repeat again that conditions in our mufassal towns are not such as to justify decisions of far-reaching consequences by a bare majority. The conditions might change with the progress of education amongst the rate-payers, but the present is not the time when we could do without insisting on a substantial majority in such matters, especially when we are going to impose an education cess in order to finance voluntary education and not compulsory education. I, therefore, commend my amendment for the acceptance of the House."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I cannot accept this amendment and the reasons which I have already given in opposing my Hon'ble friend's amendment No. 16 are applicable to this case also. For these reasons, I oppose the amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, as far as I understand my friend, his amendment is that the education cess shall not be imposed unless the Commissioners, by a resolution, passed at a special general meeting convened for the purpose, and in favour of which a three-fourths majority of the total number of Commissioners have voted, shall determine to impose such a cess. I do not know why my Hon'ble friend in charge of the Bill is not agreeable to accept this amendment, because, in the Bill which was originally drafted, the two-thirds majority was inserted, but somehow or other owing to the wonderful transformation this Bill has undergone, that has escaped our attention : otherwise we would have insisted on the two-thirds majority being retained. I should personally be quite content if two-thirds majority were re-inserted here ; and therefore I support the motion of my Hon'ble friend the Kumar."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I rise just to oppose the motion of my Hon'ble friend the Kumar Shib S. R. He proposes that no cess can be levied unless three-fourths of the total number of Municipal Commissioners vote for it or ask for it. Practically, the result will be that if only a small number, say one-fourth, of the Municipal Commissioners want to stand in the way, they will be able successfully to do it by voting against it. I would personally like to have a substantial majority of 'two-thirds' but 'three-fourths' is a very high majority, and it will be very difficult to advance primary education if such a large majority is insisted upon."

The motion was then put and lost.

Babu S. N. Ray ; The President ; Mr. O'Malley ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“My Lord, if Your Excellency will allow, I have no objection to accept the two-thirds majority.”

The President said :—

“The Hon'ble Member is too late : the question is already decided.”

AMENDMENT No. 38.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that after the word “publication” in line 2 of sub-clause (J) of clause 21C the words “and after considering the views of the Commissioners” be inserted.

He said :—

“My Lord, by this amendment I simply want to make it obligatory upon the Government to consult the views of the Commissioners in framing rules. As the clause stands, simply after previous publication the rules may be made ; but in a matter like this it is very desirable that the persons most concerned should be consulted on the proposed rules. That is the simple reason why I propose that after the word ‘publication’ the words ‘and after considering the views of the Commissioners’ should be added. This is a very simple matter and I hope on the part of Government there will be no objection.”

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“My Lord, I think the Hon'ble Member is under some misapprehension as to the necessity for the words which he proposes to insert. The words ‘after previous publication’ really make it necessary that any views which the Commissioners may express shall be considered. There is no specific provision to this effect, because it is a matter which is covered by section 24 of the General Clauses Act. That section lays down that the authority having power to make rules shall consider any objection or suggestion which may be received from any person with respect to the draft. Under the section, as it stands, therefore, there will be a preliminary notification, the views and criticisms of the public will be invited, and Government will consider any opinions received before the rules are confirmed. The words suggested by the Hon'ble mover would therefore be superfluous ; and I suggest that the motion might be withdrawn.”

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“My Lord, I could not follow the Hon'ble Member as to whether it is obligatory on Government.”

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“It means that Government shall consider the objections : it is obligatory upon Government. The words ‘after previous publication’ make it quite clear that objections will be carefully considered by Government.”

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Kumar Shib Shekhereswar Ray.

AMENDMENT No. 39.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved that after clause 21D the following be inserted, namely :—

“ 21DD. The Commissioners shall provide a separate primary school for the education of the children of the ‘ depressed classes ’, such as Mehters, Muchis, Muddaforases, Haris and Chandals.”

He said :—

“ My Lord, I do not wish to say anything more than this that there is a desire on the part of the boys of the depressed class to get themselves educated in the primary schools, and consequently it is necessary that some provision should be made for this when the Bill is going to be passed. On the one hand, we find that the bhadralok class object to have their boys educated with the boys of the depressed class. Now I have specified in my amendment that the Commissioners shall provide a separate primary school for the education of the children of Muchis, Chamars, etc. In order to give practical effect to the Bill it is necessary that separate classes should be established so that there will be no difficulty as was imagined by many, and at the same time to educate the boys of this class of people. Secondly, my prayer is that separate schools should be established for the purpose of educating the boys of this class. My Lord, I can say that there is a strong desire on the part of this class of the people to have their boys educated ; in fact, the other day there was an election in the Serampore Municipality and we found a Chamar coming forward to sit as a Municipal Commissioner. The election was a hard contested one, but he got many votes, and the voters themselves did not place any kind of repugnance in getting their man in as a Municipal Commissioner. My Lord, three years ago there was another election in a neighbouring municipality and a Muchi came forward as a candidate ; there was no objection at the time, and there was every chance of his being elected, but afterwards he had to retire under pressure of circumstances which I need not mention to the House. Five years ago there was another contest in a neighbouring municipality, and a Chamar was elected as a Municipal Commissioner. So far as the election went he was successful, but then he had to retire. These illustrations I submit to the Council for the purpose of showing that attempts ought to be made to educate the boys of this class, and I hope and trust that this amendment may be accepted by Government in its present form.”

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

“ My Lord, I am sorry that my Hon'ble friend Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur was ill-advised enough to move this amendment. I hope, My Lord, if a division be taken on this motion, my friend will be the solitary voter for his amendment. My Lord, if we really want to introduce primary education, if we really believe in the future of responsible government in this country an amendment like this, makes one almost despair of success of responsible government or primary education. Whatever happens to the amendment, My Lord, I would respectfully ask your Lordship to take a division on it, if not for any other purpose, only to show that the Indian members do not share the views of the Hon'ble Member.”

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhereswar Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I oppose the motion most strongly. I belong to a high class Brahmin family, and I may say that we have no objection to sending our boys to schools where children of the depressed classes are also admitted. As a matter of fact, My Lord, I was educated in the same school along with a Namasudra boy, and I may say that he is still one of my best friends.”

Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul Haq ; Babu S. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“ My Lord, we have talked and heard of retrograde measures, and I am sorry that a retrograde measure like this should have been brought before the Council by one of our best friends. We have been told of the depressed classes, and it certainly looks strange that anyone should object to the children being educated in the same school, sitting on the same bench as the children of the depressed classes, in these days. It is a matter of some gratification to me, and I am sure it must be so to a large section of my countrymen, both Hindus and Muhammadans, to learn that Kumar Shi Shekharaswar Ray, a representative of one of the most aristocratic families in Bengal, is willing to send his children to a school to be educated with Chandal boys and that one of his best friends is a Namasudra. The Hon'ble mover wants to make a distinction from the very earliest of our lives in the very primary schools, and I do not know where this distinction will cease when he admits that there is a great desire on the part of those people to receive education. That will in due time raise their aspirations and they will want to be Municipal Commissioners, and I hope that when the time comes and when they are fully educated they will come forward and claim to sit in this very Council, and I am sure everyone of us will be glad to provide seats for them in this Council if they are fit for it. I hope that the good sense of the Hon'ble mover will prevail, and that he will withdraw his amendment.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

“ I need hardly say that I oppose this motion ; only, I am at a loss to find language strong enough in which to express my feelings. On the one hand, My Lord, I am anxious in so far as it in me lies to voice what I understand to be the general opinion of this Council, but on the other hand, my respect for the age of the Hon'ble mover of this motion, restrains me from giving vent to my feelings at the present moment. I am saying all these things, because for the last few months we have been agitating not only here but also in England for the grant of responsible Government, and one of the most formidable oppositions which we have hitherto met, is the accusation which seems sometimes to be justified, that although we claim a larger and larger share in the administration of the country, we are not yet prepared to leave aside the prejudices which divide one community from another, and which renders the task of administration in India so very difficult for those to whom the task is entrusted. If a motion like this be carried in this Council, it would at once be telegraphed to the democracy in England, and I would ask my Hon'ble friend to consider what the effect of that telegraph is likely to be. Does he not think that by trying to separate the children by these methods, he will gain an advantage, if any, which I doubt will at all compare favourably with the great disservice he will be doing to the future of the country, by creating one more formidable gulf between the communities and deterring the introduction of self-government in this country. My Lord, I do not wish to waste the time of this Council, but I feel so very strongly that it is useless for me to say anything further on this subject. I only wish with my Hon'ble friend Mr. Mitter that a division be taken on this point at least to show that my Hon'ble friend in spite of the respect we have for him, will find himself in the minority of one, so far as this particular motion is concerned.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment, and the unanimity with which this amendment has been opposed shows the feeling on the subject. It is not clear to me as to what the Hon'ble Member exactly wishes to propose. Does he want that there should be separate schools for all the different classes for all the different castes that are generally known as the depressed classes, or only one school for what is known as the depressed classes. If it is the former, then I think it is not financially possible to start separate schools for Pods, Bagdis, Taors, Namasudras, Mehters, Doms, in every village or group of villages. If it be the latter, then I should request my friend to think if he has considered whether a Pod or even a Bagdi would drink water out of the same vessel with the son of a Mehter or a Dom. In fact, in Bengal there is no separate depressed class, except the Mehters and the Doms, and they are mostly imported from outside Bengal and their number is not sufficient to justify separate schools being formed. I may tell my Hon'ble friend that most of the so-called depressed classes have never found that the existing conditions have interfered with their education. I know there are Namasudra Deputy Magistrates and Namasudra Deputy Collectors, and even vakils of the High Court who must have read in colleges along with other boys of the higher castes. I may inform my Hon'ble friend that more than 25 years ago, in my native village of Behala where the majority of the people are Kulin Brahmins, no difficulty was found in admitting a Namasudra boy in the local English school, and that boy read along with my brothers. Every such difficult problem will have to be solved as they arise by the School Committee, by tact, by good sense and in a spirit of toleration. If this amendment be accepted, all I can say is that we are not fit for self-government."

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said —

"I had no desire, My Lord, to take part in killing of the slain. The Hon'ble Member in charge has paid the Hon'ble mover the compliment of taking his amendment seriously and has put forward arguments to show that if the amendment is accepted it would be impracticable in working. I am quite aware of the practical difficulties in our way and they have to be solved as they arise in quite a different fashion, so that all the diverging interests may be reconciled. That is not the reason of my opposing the objectionable amendment. Nor do I wish to oppose it because of the apprehension expressed by some that its success is likely to be telegraphed forthwith to the British democracy to the prejudice of the cause of Reforms that has been started of late. The Reforms are broader based than that and they would not be worth having if the British democracy, which has its own defects and weaknesses and foibles is to be allowed to dictate social reform such as it conceives to be desirable, as a sine qua non. My reasons are altogether different. I have often said elsewhere and I say it again with all the emphasis that I can command that it is a downright shortsighted policy to call really strong living useful and respectable sections of the community 'the depressed class.' If the amendment really stopped at the words about—opening schools for the depressed classes—I should have thought that my Hon'ble friend wanted separate schools for Brahmins and Kayasthas and those other classes who from a certain point of view really form the depressed classes of the day. The Hon'ble mover was also probably apprehensive of this likely and natural interpretation and that is why perhaps he has brought in qualifying words such as Chamars, Muchis, etc. My Lord, if this demand went further and if the University had to make arrangements for what is proposed in this amendment in connection with primary schools, what our difficulty would be has been already indicated. We have not attached any such consideration to stand in the way of the general advancement of the people and the enlargement of culture. But we have been foresighted enough to have teachers and professors in the University—belonging to the depressed classes—and we have made arrangements for Vedic teaching to the Muham-madans. This, My Lord, is the better mind of the country not because of the apprehension of what the democracy in England might think but because of the traditions of the land. I know my Hon'ble friend is a devout Vaishnava and as such he should not have forgotten the shastric dictum about চতাসোপি ব্রহ্মশ্রোত্রে হরিভক্তি পরায়ণ। He forgets the beautiful story of Satyakama who did not know who his father was. His mother told him and he repeated the story to his teacher that she did not know who his father was. The students revolted but the guru protested against such revolt and said that he must be a true Brahmin because he was truthful and he accepted Satyakama as a Brahmin. That much more that I could recount about Ramchandra and Sreekrishna represents the ancient tradition of the land that finds an echo to-day whatever may have been the intermediate lapses. This amendment will serve a useful purpose for the debate helps in bringing out the real mind of the country. The unanimous way in which the non-official members have pronounced their conviction that there is no caste rule so far as our educational institutions are concerned. I do not blame my Hon'ble friend. I fully approach the practical difficulties that he has probably in his mind and which must be surmounted. There was a time not long ago when even under the British rule neither my Hon'ble friend nor myself would have been admitted in the Sanskrit College. It did not however take long for a Kayastha to be Principal of that College. The older order thus giveth place to the new and onward progress cannot and must not be artificially retarded in the holy domains of culture and education. We have present in the Visitors' gallery to-day a distinguished educationist from the southern side of India Sir Siva Swamy Iyer. I hope he will not carry away from this Council the impression that Madras where the Panchama question is so much to the fore, is in advance of Bengal in this respect."

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I wish to say a few words regarding this amendment. I find that there is a growing feeling here among the members of this Council against this amendment. My object in putting this amendment was that education should be spread to this class of the people. I limited the amendment to these words : 'such as Muchis, Mehters, etc.' It was far from my intention to exclude in this resolution other people of the depressed class. We found it difficult, My Lord, in the mufassal towns to allow Brahmin boys to be educated with Mehters and Muchis, consequently there was an idea in my mind to have separate schools for the purpose of educating boys of this class. In fact, I remember one instance when I got a Mehter boy admitted into a primary school, the result was that the Brahmins, Kayasthas and boys of other classes ran away from the place. So we find a great difficulty in the mufassal. I may say it was never my object to limit the progress of education among boys of these castes. Far from that.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq was very kind to me when he stated that he could have used strong language against me but for my age. He says he has respect for me and my age. I thank him for it. He must, however, admit the difficulty which we in the mufassal feel in this matter, and I therefore thought it necessary that provision should be made for the spread of education among boys of this class, and at the same time no objection should be raised to having separate schools for boys of these depressed classes. In that view of the matter I came forward with a resolution like this.

It was said by the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq that if an amendment like this is allowed in the Council it will be telegraphed to the British democratic party, but I am quite sure the British democratic party would have appreciated the spirit in which we are placed here. I appreciate the spirit of spreading education amongst this class, so I wanted to have separate schools so that there could not be any difficulty in the way.

One Hon'ble member has said that he would have no objection to sending his boys to be educated amongst boys of this class. I congratulate him for this. But if he understood my object in bringing forward this amendment, he would not have accused me.

My Lord, when there is so much opposition amongst the non-official members of the Council, I think it necessary that I should withdraw this amendment, though my non-official friends can sympathise with me for putting it. I have explained the reasons which led me to come forward in the Council and move this amendment. It was with the sole reason that education may be spread amongst the depressed classes. With Your Excellency's permission, I shall withdraw the amendment."

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

AMENDMENT No. 40.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved, that after the word "may" in line 4 of clause 21F the words "after reference to the Commissioners" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord I believe this is the last amendment and I fervently hope that this will not be a contentious one and will be accepted. I think that Government ordinarily consults Municipal Commissioners in matters like this but in order to avoid any dispute—so that there may be no misapprehension with regard to this—it is better to have a reference like that proposed in my amendment in the Statute book, that after consulting the Commissioners the notification may be withdrawn. I do not think that this will put the Government in any difficulty financial or otherwise. I see the Hon'ble Member in charge is smiling and so I have great hopes that he will accept this amendment."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I can accept my Hon'ble friend's amendment with this verbal modification—'After considering any explanation of the Commissioners.'"

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I accept the modified form of my amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"Government will also accept it."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

My Lord, I am very glad that my amendment has been accepted though in a modified form. This was the last amendment and it has ended as we say মহুয়েন সহাপয়েৎ।

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; The President ; Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The amendment was then put in the following amended form and agreed to—

That after the word “may” in line 4 of clause 21F the words “after considering any explanation of the Commissioners.”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar having got up to speak the President said :—

“Does the Hon'ble Member wish to rise to a point of order?”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“My Lord, it is with feelings of greatest regret that I rise to move that under rule 47 (2) of the Legislative Business rules I rise to object to the passing of this bill in the form in which it has been settled here.”

The President said :—

“Order, order! The Hon'ble Member must wait till the motion for passing the Bill has been made. He cannot move that motion now. There is nothing to object to till the motion for passing the Bill is before the Council.”

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 12.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray to move that the Secretary be directed to renumber the clauses and sub-clauses of the Bill in consecutive order and to make corresponding alterations in all cross-references thereto.

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that the Bill, as settled in Council, be passed.

He said :—

“My Lord, in moving that the Bill may be passed I should like to say a few words.

The Bill received hearty welcome from your Lordship's Government when it was first introduced in the Council by me in September 1917. I had occasion at a previous stage of the Bill to refer to the speech of His Excellency the Viceroy at the Imperial Legislative Council in February 1918. He has again referred to the subject of primary education in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 6th of this month.

He said : ‘I have already mentioned in this Council the Bill introduced by the Hon'ble Mr. Patel to enable district municipalities in Bombay to adopt, with the sanction of the Local Government, compulsory elementary education for children. That Bill has now become law and I am glad to see that the Government of Bombay propose to behave in a liberal manner to any municipality which desires and is able to adopt its provisions. I have already given my assent to a Bill of a similar nature but of wider application in Bihar and Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

Orissa, and other Bills are either awaiting introduction or have arrived at various stages in the process of legislation.' It will therefore appear that His Excellency the Viceroy views with approval the attitude of the Bombay Government towards the measure. The question of extension of primary education has been before Government for a long time. So far back as the year 1906, the Government of India (then under Lord Curzon) was considering the desirability of introducing free primary education throughout India as will be evident from the following letter of Sir Herbert Risley to the Local Governments.

He wrote : ' If the Government of India have never declared that universal primary education is the aim in view, yet the whole spirit of their declarations has been in favour of the fullest possible provision of primary schools. To insist upon the permanent retention of fees is manifestly incompatible not only with universal school attendance but with anything that approaches to it. They would therefore desire to abolish fees as soon as the finances of the country permit Government to increase the funds available for primary education to such an extent as to counteract the loss of income which would thereby fall upon these schools. The Governor-General in Council hopes that this time has now arrived, but he desires to examine the question in the light of the replies to the inquiries made in this letter regarding the cost of the scheme.'

I believe some of the local Governments opposed free primary education and the desire of Lord Curzon to have free primary education throughout the length and breadth of the country was frustrated. Now that the Bill is about to be passed and is to be an Act, I have to state again for your Lordship's consideration that this measure of primary education will be a dead letter unless it has the full support of Government and unless the Government will aid this measure by substantial financial assistance. The other day when the Bombay municipalities wanted the Bombay Government to contribute one-third of the expenses towards the cost of primary education, His Excellency the Governor of Bombay assured them that the Government would be prepared to bear half the expenditure. The mere fact of the passing of this Bill will mean nothing. The non-official members of this Council hope that Your Excellency's Government may be pleased to make a statement as to how far Government are prepared to help local bodies financially in spreading education. It will be an index of the earnestness of the Government on the subject and will be received with satisfaction by the people of this country.

My Lord, the Bill has undergone changes in the Select Committee, and I have every reason to believe that if the provisions of the Bill be properly and strictly enforced, it will be the sure means of spreading education among the masses and of infusing a new life into them. Knowledge is power. The illiterate masses will, with the spread of education, be one day a power in the land, and the hitherto dumb-driven cattle will be heroes in the strife of social and economical development of this country."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, it is with a feeling of the deepest regret that I rise to object, under rule 47, clause 2, to the passing of the Bill in the present form. My regret is due, firstly, to the fact that I think that it is more than 20 years ago when I had been not only thinking but talking of primary education being made compulsory throughout the country. It was one of the earliest dreams of my life to see that my ignorant countrymen who are now lying low in the scale of society might be elevated and that their fortune might be brightened by education. Now to find myself somewhat disappointed in that hope is my first regret. The second reason for my regret is that I have to oppose a Bill which is a private measure and perhaps the very first of its kind; but a sense of duty compels me to raise my voice against the measure which, to my mind, does not satisfy the requirements of the people and which, I apprehend, will prove a failure in attaining the object for which it is intended. As regards my opposing the Bill which has been brought forward by my esteemed friend to the left, it is some consolation, though a very poor consolation, to me, to find that the Bill of which he was the father was exactly the sort of Bill which I had always wished to see in this Council, but this Bill has been 'transformed' in the words of my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur 'almost beyond recognition'. With these few observations, I base my objection upon the following considerations. That having regard to the fact that primary education is not made compulsory and that at the same time the Bill proposes to levy an education cess without making such education free: that having regard to the fact that the nature of education to be imparted under this Act is left entirely in the hands of the Education Department which has so far exhibited no very remarkable tendency to extend primary education in the name of supervision and efficiency: that having regard to the fact that Government is unwilling to commit itself even to a modest contribution towards the expenses of such education: that having regard to the fact that the levying of the cess, its nature and incidence, is entirely left to Government without even indicating the line on which it is to proceed—and thereby this Council has practically in my opinion abdicated its proper function; I feel constrained to object to the passing of this Bill in its present form. I know of no law passed up to this time bearing on any cess, e.g. the Municipal Act, the Local Self-Government Act, the Income-tax Act—being so framed by the Legislature as not to indicate even the nature of a tax; and I think no Act has up to this time left it to the rules of Government to indicate the nature as well as the incidence of any tax.

My hon'ble friend Sir R. N. Mookerjee, for whom I always hold the highest estimation, tells us that we are not to distrust our own men and that we might be perfectly content with this tax being levied by our own men, namely, the Municipal Commissioners. He will pardon me if I tell him that it is not exactly so. The Municipal Commissioners will be the conduit pipe of certain rules to be framed by Government and they will have to be guided exactly by these rules. Whatever they may be, I have tried my best to indicate the line on which the tax ought to proceed, but in my attempt I have signally failed.

There is another consideration, My Lord, namely, that the Bill as settled in Council is not likely very much to expand and improve primary education, but only to burden the people with an additional tax, the weight of which may not be so much felt by those of us who are in the metropolis, but which will surely be the last straw on the camel's back on many a municipality in the mufassal. We will be quite willing to bear this burden if we could only have understood what would be the nature of this tax, what would be the incidence and how this tax would be utilised in really expanding and improving the primary education, and we would have been still more glad to know that Government was going to stretch out its helping hand in a substantial measure, but in all this we have failed. I submit that the Bill be not passed now and we may wait for better times and press for a Bill like this for which we have tried so hard and so incessantly for the last few years. The Bill was welcomed by us and we thought that it was going to be a blessing; but at the last moment it has been sprung upon us in a form and shape in which I may almost say—like prophet Balaam who was asked to bless the people—'it has come only to curse them.' With these remarks and without prolonging my argument on this point, I ask Your Excellency's ruling under clause (2) of rule 47, so that this Bill may not be passed now."

The President ; Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar ; Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The President said :—

“ I understand that the Hon'ble Member objects to the Bill being further proceeded with to-day. The arguments which he has adduced in this speech so far have been directed against the merits of the Bill and not against proceeding with it to-day. The rule to which the Hon'ble Member refers gives any Hon'ble Member of this Council the right of objecting to a Bill being further proceeded with if amendments have been made to the Bill. It also gives the President the right of rejecting the objection if he thinks fit. In considering whether an objection of this kind should be accepted or not, I should naturally be influenced by two things—firstly, whether the amendments made in the Bill were of such a character as to make any substantial change in the matter of the Bill. If the amendments made in the Bill were limited to verbal alterations, I should not regard that as sufficient reason for accepting the objection to proceeding with the Bill forthwith. The other thing by which I should be influenced would be the extent of the opposition in the Council to the measure being proceeded with. In order to ascertain that I have the right of asking any Hon'ble Member who wishes to object to the Bill being further proceeded with to-day to show me by holding up his hand. But before I ask the Hon'ble Members to do that, I should like to hear from the hon'ble mover of the Bill what he has to say in reply to the objection.

If, however, the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar wishes to put forward a further argument in favour of his objection to proceeding with the Bill I would be very glad to hear him before the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray replies.”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“ Your Excellency, my object in bringing forward this motion is that some time may be allowed and then some of these considerations which I have enumerated in my objection might influence the Council to consider the matter further ; and at a future meeting probably they might give these points a fair consideration. I have enumerated one after another the salient points upon which I base my objection. I think that if some time were given and this matter were brought up at a future meeting, Hon'ble Members would have, under the rules, to debate on some of these points, and then probably there may be some change in this matter, and that is the reason why I have put forward this motion.”

The President said :—

“ I think it is right that I should point out to the Council that if the Bill is not proceeded with to-day and it comes up for further consideration at a future meeting, it will not be in order for any Hon'ble Member to move any of the amendments which have already been decided by the Council during yesterday and to-day. It would only be open to Hon'ble Members to bring forward different amendments. I think the Hon'ble Members understand that.”

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“ Yes, My Lord.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose this motion of my hon'ble and esteemed friend, Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. My friend, Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq, said yesterday that Indians want delay in all matters.

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

It is one of the traits in their character. But we all know that this question, the question of educating the masses has been before the public at least since the year 1906, if not earlier. The Congress, public men from the platform, and the Press have been incessantly crying for nearly a quarter of a century for mass education and now that the time has arrived for the passing of the Bill, my friend comes forward with a motion for the postponement of the measure. All these speeches from the platform—all these writings from the Press would be considered as cant. I can very well understand the enemies of Indian progress coming forward to make such a motion as this; but what has taken me by surprise is that an enlightened gentleman like my hon'ble and esteemed friend should come forward with such a motion. We are trying to have self-government at no distant day, but we cannot say that we are properly fit for self-government unless the masses of our people are educated. And my friend wants to put on the day when education will make a headway in the country. The country had this Bill before it for nearly 18 months and opinions have been received from public bodies, from officials and non-officials and there has been almost unanimity of feeling on the subject of primary education, viz., that steps should be taken to expand it. No doubt, there have been some changes and radical changes in the Bill in the Select Committee; but the underlying principle of the Bill is that we should take early steps to spread education among the masses. That principle has not been touched at all by the Select Committee; if that be the case, I really cannot understand the motive of my friend in making this objection. If the Bill had been passed as it was originally framed by me much of the work in connection with the Bill would have been left to the Education Department. The same powers and nothing more are now to be left by the Bill as it has now emerged from the Select Committee to the Education Department.

The Reforms Scheme may come into operation in another 18 months and primary education will be in the hands of the Ministers. The experience of the working of the Bill for these 18 months will stand us in good stead, so that if the provisions of the Bill be found to be unworkable there will be time enough to bring forward amendments."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, I am really sorry that my hon'ble friend, Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, has made this motion: and giving all considerations to the arguments advanced by him I fail to see any substance in those arguments. I say this with the greatest possible respect to my hon'ble friend. His main objection seems to be that primary education has not been made free and yet an education cess has been imposed. Another objection which really centres round the question of the imposition of an education cess is that there is no indication as to the limitation of taxation and that is only left to the rules of Government. It seems to me, My Lord, that his objections are really based upon some misapprehension of section 21B of this Bill. Undoubtedly clause (3) of section 21B says that the education cess shall be levied in such a manner as may be prescribed by rules made by the Local Government: but clause (1) of that section makes it abundantly clear that it is the Commissioners who, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, will be able to impose a tax called education cess, because clause (1) of 21B says that if the existing resources of any municipality, including any grant from Government, are not sufficient to cover the cost of primary education within the municipality, the Commissioners may, with the previous sanction of the Local Government, impose a tax to be called an education cess, and all amounts derived therefrom shall be devoted solely to the purpose of primary education. That makes it quite clear that the initiative must come from the Commissioners. It makes it equally clear that the whole of the amount levied as education cess must be devoted for the purpose of primary education. That being so, I fail to see the point in the Hon'ble Member's argument that primary education has not been made free and yet an education cess has been imposed. If primary education is not made free, every pice which is raised by the education cess will be spent for the benefit of primary education, and furthermore, as my Hon'ble friend Sir R. N. Mookerjee has pointed out, it will be our own countrymen—the Municipal Commissioners whose Municipalities will be affected and with whom the initiative will lie. My friend the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar's reply to that seems to me to be not convincing at any rate, because that reply implies a confusion of the provisions of clause (3) of section 21B and clause (1) of section 21B. Clause (1) of section 21B, as I have already said, makes it abundantly clear that the initiative lies with the Municipal Commissioners. If the Commissioners of a particular municipality find that that municipality is too poor to take advantage of the provisions of the Bill then there is no compulsion, and if there is no compulsion how does any question of the rules of Government to be framed under clause (3) come in?—I fail to see. My Lord, we have been discussing the question of primary education for years past: other provinces have introduced Bills and should Bengal lag behind? My Lord, without the advantage of a Bill for primary education we in Bengal are more forward in the matter of education than any other province—our total number of literates is much higher than the number of literates in any other province and it is axiomatic, as the late Mr. Gokhale laid down time after time, that the proper time for introducing compulsory primary education comes when there is at least one-third literacy in the land. I am able to tell the Council that we have more than attained this standard so far as the adult male population is concerned, although if you take the female population we have not come up to that standard. Therefore, My Lord, I say the time is ripe. Here is a Bill, to which many of us—both officials and non-officials—have given our time, and our thought, and what purpose will be secured by putting it off? As the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Bill has submitted to the Council, the Reforms Scheme will certainly make primary education a department of the Minister, and it will be a gain that we shall have the advantage of the administration of the Bill by the present Government department before the Indian Minister comes in. For all these reasons, I am against the motion of my hon'ble friend, Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar."

Babu Akhil Chandra Datta.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the objection raised by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar and my reasons are these. The prolonged debate and the hurried discussion of these two days has proved beyond doubt that there are some questions involved in the Bill which are highly controversial. One may agree or disagree with the decisions we have arrived at on the various vital questions involved in the amendments on the agenda. But in all fairness, it must be conceded by all that the matter is highly controversial—that is one fact. However, the mere fact that the matter is highly controversial is in itself not certainly a ground for asking Your Excellency not to proceed with the Bill at this meeting. There is another ground, and a very important ground, which is this; that there is a feeling that the original Bill has now been transformed almost beyond recognition. The third fact is this that these alterations are not on mere details but on substantial and material aspects of the Bill. In view of these facts, My Lord, the question arises whether it is not fair to give the public an opportunity to express their opinion upon the provisions of the Bill as they now stand."

The President ; Babu Akhil Chandra Datta ; Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri

The President said :—

“Order ! Order ! The Hon'ble Member is going entirely beyond rule (The Hon'ble Member must resume his seat when I rise.) The arguments which the Hon'ble Member has now adduced relate to the matter of referring the Bill for public opinion. The Hon'ble Member could have moved a motion of this kind before the Bill was taken into consideration ; but as he has done so, he can not adduce arguments in favour of such a motion now. It is now too late for him to do so.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, with Your Excellency's permission I am submitting arguments in support of the objection that has been raised by my hon'ble friend Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar under clause (2) of rule 47.”

The President said :—

“The Hon'ble Member refers to the amendments passed in Select Committee. If the Hon'ble Member wished to refer the Bill back either to the Select Committee or to the public, because alterations had been made in the Select Committee, he ought to have moved his motion before the Bill was taken into consideration, in precisely the same way as the Hon'ble Member Faz-ul-Huq did in the case of the Village Self-Government Bill. He can adduce arguments now in favour of a procedure of that kind. It is now too late. The only effect of my accepting the objection will be that instead of the Bill being passed to-day it will be passed at the next meeting of the Council. That will be the only effect.”

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“My Lord, that is beside my point. I am not opposing the passing of the whole Bill ; I am not also moving for adjournment. What I simply want is that it may be adjourned to another meeting under clause 47(2). This is the whole objection ; nothing more than that.”

The President said :—

“But the Hon'ble Member has not yet brought forward any argument in favour of that course which appeals to me. Has the Hon'ble Member any valid argument in favour of that course ? I think perhaps it will save time if I ascertain whether there is any strong feeling against proceeding with the Bill. Will those Hon'ble Members who object to the Bill being proceeded with to-day hold up their hands ?

* * * * *

Well, six Hon'ble Members object. Under these circumstances I am prepared to accept the objection.”

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

RESOLUTION.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

“This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the recommendations of the Public Services Commission and the Government proposals thereon be discussed in this Council before they are given effect to.”

Sir Henry Wheeler.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I do not wish to say much on this subject regarding the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. They are in the nature of proposals for reform in the various services of public administration of the country, and affect also provincial finances. It is therefore desirable that before any effect is given to the Government proposals public opinion should be invited from interested persons and public bodies would also, I hope, like to submit their opinions on these proposals. It is very desirable that these things should be discussed at a meeting which will afford the members an opportunity to see in what way these Government proposals are received by the public. Government will also have an opportunity of explaining in what way they have received public criticism. With that object in view I have brought forward this resolution for the acceptance of Your Excellency's Government, and I hope that, as in the case of other reform proposals, these proposals should also be discussed in Council before they are given effect to. Therefore I hope an opportunity will be given, and I humbly submit the resolution for the consideration of the House and for their acceptance.”

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said:—

“ My Lord, before proceeding to examine exactly what the resolution asks for, I would like to remind the Council of what has transpired, previous to this date, by way of assurances given by Government regarding the consultation of public opinion on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. After the report was published, this point—that the public should have an opportunity of making themselves heard—not unnaturally attracted attention, and it was in fact mooted in the Imperial Legislative Council on the 7th March 1917, when the Government of India were asked to make a statement and replied that they had no doubt that Local Governments would be careful to ascertain non-official opinion (including that of representative Indians) where such consultation would be of assistance, though they thought that the occasion and method of that consultation might safely be left to each Local Government's discretion. The point was again raised by a question in this Council on the 3rd July 1917, and an answer was given to the effect that the Governor in Council had every intention of giving public opinion an opportunity of expressing itself, but had decided to defer formal reference until after a communication promised by the Government of India. That communication, as the Council will remember, was in pursuance of the original idea that, after a preliminary examination of the general principles underlying the Report, the Government of India would try and lay down broad lines upon which subsequent discussion should proceed. That is what we promised to do on behalf of the Local Government and it is on these lines that we are working. There were two courses open to us, one of which was far more helpful to the public than the other. On receipt of the report of the Public Services Commission, we could have thrown it before the public and said : ‘ Here are the recommendations ; if you have got anything to say about them, you had better say it now.’ That would have made it extremely difficult for the public to follow the various points involved, and might merely have resulted in a repetition of the evidence given before the Public Services Commission. We therefore discarded that plan, and according as views crystalized in respect of individual services, we have endeavoured to put out well-balanced and non-committal resolutions, explaining what the recommendations of the Public Services Commission in connection with each particular service were, what the arguments are on either side, what considerations were accepted as valid in the past, and what consideration might weigh on either side in the future. That method concentrates the attention of the public on the particular service under discussion, puts them in possession of a certain amount of information about it of which, possibly, they were not previously aware, and it gets the whole thing on to a manageable basis. We have already done this in connection with the Police Service and the Subordinate Judicial Service, and in to-day's Gazette there appeared a short Resolution regarding some not very important questions relating to the Excise Department. Very shortly there will be a similar resolution about the Forest Service and the Indian Civil Service. The other services will no doubt come up hereafter for similar treatment on these lines, while the matter of the Educational Service was considered by a special committee. That is what we have done, and are doing, and it will be seen that we have afforded ample opportunity to public opinion to make itself heard, and have endeavoured to provide facilities for its formulation.

In the actual resolution which has just been moved there are really three points, and I will take them up separately. The first proposal is that the recommendations of the Public Services Commission should be discussed in this Council before they are given effect to, but such a course does not require the authority of this resolution because, even as things stand, it is open to any Hon'ble Member, providing he observes the rules, to move a resolution relative to those recommendations for discussion in Council. The matter must then come up for discussion and different views can be expressed. Therefore, to that extent, there is nothing that requires the acceptance of this particular resolution, which is superfluous. But there are two other points which the resolution raises and which, on the merits, I am not prepared to accept. The first asks that the proposals of the Local Government should be discussed in this Council. Now what is the constitutional position? We have these recommendations referred to us by the Government of India for opinion, and we, in our turn, put them before the public for opinion. We thus collect material useful to Government, and on that material we submit our views to the Government of India. They, in their turn, scrutinise them along with other opinions from other provinces, if the matter is one which concerns all India, and if a decision is beyond their competence they refer their proposals to the Secretary of State with whom, eventually, the final authority lies. That is the ordinary constitutional position, and it would be quite inappropriate that this Local Government should come before the Council and say 'Before we send this letter to the Government of India, we wish to have the opinion of the Council upon it.' The proper time for an expression of public opinion is when the matter is put before the public.

The third point is even more open to objection, and I think that even the Hon'ble Member must admit that we could not agree that the recommendations of the Public Services Commission should come up for discussion before this Council before effect is given to them. As I have just explained, all major proposals in connection with each of the public services must receive the approval of the Secretary of State or the Government of India, as the case may be, but it would be quite impossible for us, after we had got the orders of the Secretary of State, not to give effect to them till the opinion of the Council was received.

For these reasons I cannot accept this resolution, though I cannot help feeling that what is really in the Hon'ble Member's mind is that there should, at some time, be a discussion in this Council on these recommendations. But if he thinks for a moment, he will find that it is already within his compass to give notice of any resolution which he desires to move in this connection and which complies with the rules."

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri : Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, the only difficulty which I feel in discussing the question is that the suggestion is that any Hon'ble Member may submit his views when public opinion is invited, but there the difficulty is that we will only get individual opinion, but if it is discussed at a meeting of this Council then our views may also be submitted to the Government of India along with the views of the Local Government and also to the Secretary of State. My idea is that the result of the discussion may be communicated as was done in the case of the Reform proposals. If the question is discussed here, the advantage is that with the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, the Government proposals, as well as the opinion of public bodies and the persons most interested all will sent together and matured consideration may be given to the subject under discussion. My contention is that it is not possible for us to express an opinion simply on the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, without an explanation of the views of Government and also public bodies, and so they can only be discussed in a public meeting of this Council. I have brought forward this resolution so that we may have facilities for submitting our matured views upon those recommendations, and if Government is in sympathy with this proposal there is no difficulty about it. That will also give the Government and other members to know what the public opinion is on this matter. All I desire is that Government when submitting their opinion will also send the opinions of various public bodies as well as the discussions of this Council, and I hope that this may be accepted, and there will be no objection."

The resolution was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM NO. 15.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved the following resolution :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that a Committee, consisting of official and non-official members of this Council, be appointed to consider the question of the reorganization of the judicial branch of the Provincial Civil Service, in the light of—

- (a) the recommendations made in this behalf by the Public Services Commission ;
- (b) the Government Resolution No. 6279A., dated the 19th November, 1918 ;
- (c) the opinion of the Hon'ble High Court referred to in the Government Resolution ; and
- (d) such expressions of opinions and resolutions as may have been received by Government on the said Government Resolution."

He said :—

"On the 20th November last Your Lordship's Government was pleased to publish a Resolution on the Report of the Public Services Commission regarding the organisation, recruitment, probation, training and the pay and prospects generally of the members of the Provincial Judicial Service and to invite opinion on those points. Your Lordship's Government was pleased to appoint a committee some time ago to consider the prospects of the members of the Education Department. I base my claim to move this resolution upon that precedent. We have not as yet Standing Committees to consider these important questions. Government have no doubt done the right thing in inviting public opinion on this question, but it would add to the weight of the decision of Your Lordship's Government, and I have every reason to expect that it would command greater confidence of the public, if a small committee were appointed by Your Lordship's Government to consider the matter. There is fundamental difference between the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, the views of Government as set out in the Government Resolution, and public opinion on the subject. It is, therefore, only meet and proper that Government should appoint a committee to consider the whole question. I do not want to anticipate the findings of the proposed committee on the various points dealt with in the Resolution, but it is necessary that I should place certain facts before Your Lordship's Government with reference to them. Various have been the suggestions as regards recruitment, probation and training of these officers. I find in one of the representations submitted to Your Excellency's Government by some of the members of the Judicial Service that they consider that the age-limit of 30 years fixed by the Public Services Commission is high, whereas they not only approve of the proposal of Your Excellency's Government that the age-limit should be 27, but generally appreciate it. They consider that the present system of enrolling a candidate before he completes the age of 27 and providing him for the first time with an officiating appointment before he completes the age of 29 has given rise to serious discontent by making the candidates wait for an unnecessarily long time. It is justly urged that a candidate who is appointed to officiate for the first time can never be appointed even substantive pro tempore before the expiry of about four years, and another year or two years has to pass before he expects to be appointed in the service. Whereas there is difference of opinion as regards age-limit and period of probation, all are of opinion that the members of the service ought to be recruited from the bar. Speaking for myself, I think some experience at the bar, some practical knowledge, should be an undoubted condition for appointments in the Judicial Service. It makes one better fitted for judicial work as it gives him an insight into the ways of the litigant public even without attaining much practice. This is the rule everywhere and we do not know why here there should be a deviation from the rule. The creation of a grade of probationers is of doubtful utility. It is unfortunate that the Resolution of the 20th November last starts with the assumption that the Provincial Judicial Service was formed to fill charges of minor responsibility in the civil judicial administration of the province. If the work of a service is to be measured by the pay attached to it, then we admit that the work of the Provincial Service is of minor importance. If, however, the work of a service is to be measured by the real work done by that service then I need hardly say that the Provincial Judicial Service is one of the most important services under the British Crown. These honest, hardworking and conscientious servants of Government are not at all very costly to Government. I have said more than once in this Council that these officers of Government have actually been minting money for Government in the remotest parts of the country and bringing home to the rich and the poor alike the idea of British justice. The usefulness of their work has been testified to not only by Government but by the highest tribunals, both here and by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council in England. Mr. Justice Prinsep who, as a Judge of the High Court, was in charge of the Provincial Judicial Service in Bengal for a larger number of years than any other member of the Indian Civil Service, said that 'in education, in intelligence, in devotion to the public service I venture to state that the officers of the Bengal Judicial Service are not surpassed by those of any other department under the Government'.

Let me quote here the words of Sir Leslie Miller (a former Judge of Madras High Court) who at the Law Dinner in 1913 said of the Provincial Judicial Service in this country generally: 'Those who sit on the Bench in the mufassal, whom I specially ask your remembrance and good wishes, those who toil long hours recording interminable depositions in an atmosphere of perjury, fraud, amidst chicanery, striving against uncongenial surroundings. They work against time to get through the work and are striving hard to preserve the purity, integrity and righteousness of the judicial administration in this country, being in places where they can find no decent accommodation, often in places where there is no congenial companionship for their so-called leisure hours. Those are the men to whom our sympathy should go. Most of them are drawn from your great profession, and I ask you to pity the poor Munsifs and Sub-Judges. People talk of the independence and fearlessness of the Judges of the High Court. When you come to think of it, what have they got to be afraid of? Their position is too secure to be assailed. They have a strong body of colleagues to support them. Far different is the case of the District Munsifs who, far away from their houses and friends, have to administer justice at places often split up by factious cliques. If, under these circumstances some have succeeded in their endeavour to maintain their independence, all honour is due to them.'

The Public Services Commission was appointed to consider among others how far Indians, if properly qualified, should be admitted in substantial numbers and on terms of equality with Europeans to the higher as well as to the lower branches of the administration. It would, however, appear that the Commission have overlooked the very just claims of the Subordinate Judges, as they have not made any recommendations for the increase of their maximum salary or the initial pay of the District Judges recruited from them. It will be found that in case of acceptance of the recommendations of the Commission in full, the prospects of officers who are already in the service, specially Sub-Judges, are likely to become even worse than at present. Under the present arrangements a Sub-Judge of the third grade can well expect to reach the second grade, i.e., the grade of Rs. 800, within three years and the first grade of Rs. 1,000 within the next two years, but if the suggested modifications be adopted they can never expect to do so within the above periods.

I shall now say a few words about the pay of the Munsifs. It is urged by them as well as on their behalf that the initial pay, I mean their pay during the probationary period, should be Rs. 200 as recommended by the Commission, and not Rs. 175, and that when they are confirmed in their appointment they should get Rs. 300. We know that education has made rapid progress in the country and that qualified men are being turned out by the University every year by hundreds, and that we can get good men for a low salary. But we forget one thing. When you place one in a position of trust and responsibility, you ought to give him sufficient remuneration, so that he may be above temptation. This ought to be borne in mind by Government in making appointments. This is also the principle which has in a manner been recommended by the Public Services Commission. We find in the report : 'The only safe criterion is that Government should pay so much and so much only to their employés as is necessary to obtain recruits of the right stamp and to maintain them in such a degree of comfort and dignity as will shield them from temptation and keep them efficient for the term of their service.' The triennial increment of Rs. 40 to the pay of Munsifs is generally approved. The recommendation, however, of having a selection grade from Rs. 460 is one which has not been favourably received. The members of the Judicial Service have hitherto got promotion from a Munsifship to a Sub-Judgeship as a matter of course, except in rare instances, i.e., there was very little supersession. For this reason there has been very little discontent or heart-burning among them, and the civil administration of the province, which is practically in their hands, has suffered very little. But the proposal to have a selection grade or to put any bar to the Munsifs getting promoted as Sub-Judges will produce great discontent in the service. This is a matter to be taken seriously into consideration.

Babu Surendra Nath Ray.

It is also urged that the increment of Rs. 40 in the case of Sub-Judges is too small and in the ordinary course a Sub-Judge will not be able to rise to the grade of Rs. 1,000, but will have to rest content on Rs. 800, and their pension will be seriously affected. It is pointed out in this connection that the number of Subordinate Judges in Bihar and Orissa being greater than that in Bengal, many of them have risen to the grade of Sub-Judges drawing pay of Rs. 600 to Rs. 800, whereas their seniors in service in Bengal are still in the grade of Munsifs drawing Rs. 300 or Rs. 400 a month. The members of the Judicial Service also pray that there should be a grade of Rs. 1,200 and that they should be allowed to serve till the age of 57.

With reference to the listed appointments, i.e., the post of District Judges, I should like to say a few words. It is proposed that four District Judgeships should be recruited from the Provincial Judicial Service instead of six District Judgeships as at present, and that four District Judgeships should be recruited from the bar. This would be if the recommendation of the Reform scheme be given effect to, i.e., 33 per cent. of these appointments should be divided between the bar and the service, and gradually, within the next ten years, 50 per cent. of the District Judgeships should be divided between them.

It is however suggested that no harm would be done if 50 per cent. of the District Judgeships be thrown open to the members of the Provincial Service and the bar, at least it would be rather disheartening if the members of the Provincial Judicial Service who had been anxiously expecting betterment of their prospects were to be told that two of the prize appointments to which they could hitherto aspire and which they had hitherto held would be taken away from them.

The Public Services Commission or the Government Resolution might say that the work of the members of the Provincial Judicial Service is of minor importance, but as a matter of fact the entire civil litigation of the province, except that of Calcutta proper, is practically disposed of by this branch of the service, as well as some work of minor importance which used to be done hitherto by District Judges. The Subordinate Judges, like the District Judges, exercise unlimited jurisdiction in the original civil cases and co-ordinate appellate jurisdiction in respect of cases tried by Munsifs. They practically do the same work as Judges sitting on the Original Side of the High Court, except Admiralty and Ecclesiastical cases. They have to try a very large portion of the most intricate civil cases. Their work is known to the public and appreciated by the public, and compares favourably with that of the District Judges who are recruited from the Indian Civil Service and who generally draw three times the salary of these Subordinate Judges. A tabular statement was submitted by Mr. A. H. Cumming, one of the most experienced of the District Judges, to the Public Services Commission in the course of his evidence with a view to show how the work of the District Judges compared with that of the Subordinate Judges. We find therein that between the years 1907—1911, 74 per cent. of the appeals preferred against the decisions of the District Judges were affirmed by the High Court whereas during the said period 83 per cent. of the appeals against the decisions of the Sub-Judges were confirmed. Again, during the said period, 68 per cent. of the miscellaneous appeals against the decisions of District Judges were affirmed by the High Court, whereas 73 per cent. of those of Sub-Judges were affirmed. This will be found in page 576 of Part III of the Report of the Public Services Commission. It will thus be seen that the quality of the judicial work of a Sub-Judge does not compare unfavourably with that of a District Judge. I need hardly say that the greater and most important portion of the civil work of the province is in the hands of the Sub-Judges.

Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

Much is made of the administrative work of a District Judge. But may I ask, what does it consist of? It consists of inspection by him of the Subordinate Civil Courts, viz., the court of a Munsif for a day or two in the course of one or two years, to appoint clerks or to give them promotion or to send confidential notes about the work of the subordinate judiciary. We think all this work to be of minor importance compared with the judicial work of a Sub-Judge. There is another fact which ought to be taken into consideration in this connection. When we consider that the Judges of the Calcutta Small Cause Court, most of whom are considerably inferior to most of the Sub-Judges, and we also take consideration that these Judges of the Small Cause Court begin with Rs. 1,000 as initial pay rising to Rs. 2,500, whereas the Sub-Judges end their service on a pay of Rs. 1,000, one really is surprised at the immense difference. And the surprise is enhanced when there has been recommendation in the increase of pay and prospects of members of all other departments of Government but there has been nothing as regards those of the members of the Provincial Judicial Service. There is recommendation for some increase in the pay of even District Judges in spite of their getting exchange compensation allowance and the creation of a separate grade of District Judges drawing a salary of Rs. 3,000.

We are not in possession of the letter of the Hon'ble High Court dated the 23rd March 1918.

As regards the pension and leave of these officers, I think the proposed Committee might take the same into consideration along with other questions.

My Lord, I hold no brief for the members of the Provincial Judicial Service. It is also not quite correct to suppose that the members of the Provincial Judicial Service and the non-official members of this Council have been clamouring along with them for an increase in the initial pay of the members of the Provincial Judicial Service because Government have increased the initial pay of the members of the Provincial Executive Service. This is unfortunately a wrong assumption on the part of Government. The public consider that the members of the Provincial Executive, being more in touch with Government, their claims find a ready hearing from Government. Whatever may be the case, members of both the services are hard-worked people and they have raised the tone of the administration. Members of the Provincial Judicial Service legitimately pray that their claims may be taken into sympathetic consideration now that the question has come to a head and the whole question regarding the Provincial Judicial Service is before Your Lordship's Government. In taking their claims into consideration the Government will be doing what is but right to a body of men whose meritorious services in the administration of the Government is a matter of just satisfaction to the public and also benefit to the country."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to give merely a silent vote on this important resolution. The question of the reorganization of the Provincial Judicial Service has been pressed on the attention of Government for several years past, and the Report of the Public Services Commission, published in January 1917, has brought the question to a head, and emphasises the necessity of solving the question without further delay. I most heartily thank the Government for having taken up this important question first of all, and that separately and independently. But, My Lord, it is a common saying that while the grass grows the sheep starves. It is to be regretted that while many of the kindred services, such as those of the Assistant

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

Surgeons, Civil Medical Officers, Provincial Engineers, Deputy Superintendents of Police and the Provincial Executive Service have been in the meantime occasionally provided with pastures new and improved, this old and attenuated service has been left in cold neglect, firmly tethered to the offside of a bleak rock, which neither grows any grass nor affords any shelter from sun and rain. The Resolution of the Government published in November last is a very important document. Although in some respects it falls short of the recommendations of the Public Services Commission, it must be admitted that in other respects it is an improvement upon them.

My Lord, first of all there is the question of recruitment. I, for one agree with the Public Services Commission in thinking that merit alone ought to be the test of appointment in the service and that in considering the claims of candidates the results of the Law Examination should be taken into consideration. Then, my Lord, there is the next question raised by the Resolution of the Government about the probationary Munsifs. My hon'ble friend, the mover of this resolution, has preferred to adhere to the old system, or rather the existing system, of officiating appointments. But here, with due deference, I would differ from him. I consider the proposal of Government to create a probationary service to be a decided improvement upon the existing system. The rule about three years' practice at a bar is a mere delusion. I know from my experience that, as soon as a candidate enrolled in the High Court for an appointment in the Judicial Service succeeds in securing his very first officiating appointment, he begins to sell off his law books. Knowing as he does that he has hooked the fish he knows that he has simply to wait in patience. The interval between two such officiating appointments is utilised not in studying either the law or the procedure, but in following the steps of permanent officers in a station, learning how they move, how they snub the members of the bar, and so forth, and last but not the least, how to adjust their neck-ties.

My Lord, I do think that the probationary period would be a great improvement; but how are they to be trained, that is the question? I think, Sir, that when a candidate gets a probationary appointment he ought to be attached to a District Court, but the proper ground for his training should not be simply the District Court, but the courts of Sub-Judges and also of Munsifs at the headquarters station. There they ought to learn how to frame issues, how to record evidence and also to study the circulars of the High Court. There is another important matter which ought to receive their attention and it is this: I have found that many Munsifs are perfectly helpless in the hands of the Civil Court Commissioners: an elementary knowledge of surveying—at all events a knowledge sufficient to detect the mistakes—and the ordinary rules of survey ought to be acquired by the Munsifs during this probationary period, while they are attached to the Courts of District Judges and the District Judges might depute them to watch the proceedings of one or two Civil Court Commissioners' proceedings, so that they might easily have an insight into the matter; not that they should be very efficient in drawing maps or calculating distances, but there are certain primary rules in surveying by which a Judge can detect whether the work done by a Civil Court Commissioner is accurate or liable to be questioned. This training should be given to them in the probationary period. But, my Lord, I have certain modifications to suggest to the Resolution published by Government under this head.

Two years have been provided for this probationary period. I should think that this period should be divided into two stages—the first year of probation should be just as I have already indicated by attaching the probationer to a court of District Judge and by him deputed to a court of

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

Sub-Judge or Munsif just to learn his elementary business. In the second year of probation, he should be entrusted with light and simple judicial work, viz., say, trial of rent-suits, of bond suits and of simple possessory suits under section 9 of the Specific Relief Act : and then when he is confirmed in the third year he should be a full-fledged Munsif dealing with all questions and cases.

Two years' time for a probationer would be, I think, a serious loss of public time and which I do not think would be quite necessary for the purpose of training an intelligent young man who has passed the B.L. degree examination to acquire the simple knowledge of how to frame issues, of how to take evidence, or how to test the map of an amin and so forth.

Now, my Lord, the Resolution proposes to give Rs. 175 per month to these probationary Munsifs. This has caused great excitement among the officers of the service. I understand your Excellency's Government has received a representation from some of the judicial officers in which they urge that now that their officiating appointment carries a pay of Rs. 200 they ought not to get Rs. 175 to begin with as a probationer : that is their argument, and it is contended by them that it is a financial loss to them. My Lord, I have pointed out to some of them that as far as financial loss or gain is concerned, they are perfectly mistaken. An officiating Munsif gets a permanent appointment in about two or two-and-half years, and I take it that the most fortunate man gets it in two years, but what is the time during which he is so employed? The most fortunate man amongst them gets it for twelve months and some get it only for six months in two years. The rest of the time they idle away, as I have already described, in watching the movements of permanent officers and in associating with them. If they earn Rs. 200 in twelve months out of two years they get only Rs. 2,400, but my Lord, if, as probationers, they get every month Rs. 175 then in two years they would get a sum which is very much in excess of their officiating earnings. In fact, your Excellency will see the figures will be reversed almost—in place of Rs. 2,400 they will get Rs. 4,200. So the question of loss or gain is not the question here—in fact there the memorialists are mistaken. But there is another question, which has been put forward by my hon'ble friend who has moved this resolution, that these officers should be kept out of temptation and that they should be allowed to lead a decent life. That is very important. I would, therefore, suggest that, while I am not prepared to say that Rs. 175 would be a very bad pay to begin with as a probationer, the first year of probation may carry only Rs. 175, but in the second year of probation when I propose the Munsifs should be placed in charge of some judicial work—though of a minor character, namely, the trial of rent suits, bond suits, possessory suits and so forth—they ought to be given Rs. 200. I believe this will remove much of the discontent which now prevails among the members of the service.

Then, of course, there is the next question—when they become permanent it is proposed to give them Rs. 300. That is quite good. But, my Lord, the proposal to give them an increment of Rs. 40 in three years is open to some objection. No doubt the present system of giving increments in a haphazard fashion cannot be justified, and the incremental system on a time limit proposed by Government is certainly an improvement ; but I would suggest that instead of giving them Rs. 40 in three years, the system should be modified in this way, that is to say, that after the first year as a probationer carrying Rs. 175, second year Rs. 200, and in the third year, when he is made permanent and placed in the fifth grade, his pay becomes Rs. 300 and after that give them an annual increment of Rs. 20. It will have a very important advantage—it will keep them contented and at the same time it will save much time. Your Excellency will permit me here to give an outline of the present position of the service.

Mr. Aminur Rahman.

An officiating Munsif on Rs. 200 has to serve two years at least to become permanent—I say 'at least' because they generally take two and half years or even three years—however I take it as two years. Then having entered the service at the age of 27, they attain the age of 29 when they become permanent. Now let us see what time they take in getting to the top Munsifship. Government is aware that there are five grades, the 5th or the lowest grade being Rs. 200, then the 4th grade Rs. 250, the 3rd grade Rs. 300, the 2nd grade Rs. 400 and the 1st grade Rs. 500. Now in reaching the 4th grade from the 5th grade one has to pass two and half years."

[At this stage, the Hon'ble Member, having reached the time-limit, had to conclude his remarks.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Aminur Rahman said :—

"My Lord, in simple justice to the members of this branch of the Provincial Service, the public have at last taken up the question of their position and the conditions of the service. This branch of the public services is quite as important as any other branch so far as the maintenance of peace and prosperity of the country is concerned. I do not wish to enumerate, in supporting this resolution, the grievances that have been brought forward by the Munsifs and the Sub-Judges in their representations to the Government. But I wish to take up a few salient points in these representations and they seem to me to be three: the first is that they complain of low salary; the second is slow promotion; and the third is hard work. Considering the responsibilities attached to the office, the value of the services rendered by them and the volume of work done by them, I must confess that the emoluments are far too small as compared with those drawn by members in other branches of the public services who do much less important work and get much more salary because they are constantly before the public eye. Members of this branch of the service do not get the consideration that they deserve; but they are a toiling lot; and yet the public and the Government think it fit to neglect them. The question of appointment is also a very important one. The question of recruitment from the lower branch to the higher branch is another point to be considered. In all these things there are always two points of view. One is that appointments and promotions should be made on the basis of seniority; and the other is that it should be made on a consideration of the merits of the officials. There, again, we find that there is a difference of opinion amongst the members of the services themselves. The men who are young and therefore new in the service naturally stand up for merit; the men who are old and have been long in the service naturally advocate the other view; but it is difficult sometimes to judge what should be the standard of valuation, and how should merit be judged. It has often been said by members of the service that merit is simply judged on a consideration of the volume of work done. Now, that probably seems very sound, but on an examination of the question it is seen that the volume of work, although it may be large, sometimes may not be quite good; and I have often heard Munsifs say that amongst them the man who can clear up the arrears of work very often gets promotion. In the case of a man who clears up arrears of work the kind of work that is done by him has to be kept in view. A man who clears up arrears of work generally goes through it hurriedly, and the cases do not receive the consideration that they deserve. Not only the volume of work but the value of work ought to be considered. There we find that there is a clear difference of opinion; but I think that if we keep the efficiency of the service in view, it ought not to be difficult for a Committee to find out what should be the basis of promotion and appointment; for that reason I very strongly support the resolution.

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

As regards hard work there is much to be said on behalf of the members of the service. They ungrudgingly do their work; they have a feeling that the public and the Government do not care so much for them and they are quite reconciled to their lot. I have seen Munsifs sitting up till 8 o'clock at night, doing their work; and I have known of districts where a single Munsif is discharging the duties of his office ungrudgingly and laboriously. He has to deal with the files left by his predecessor or predecessors; sometimes he has got to do the work of three men—probably two of them have gone on leave—but he finds that when he makes representations to the District Judge, his case is not very favourably considered. As a rule, these Munsifs have far more work to do than men in other departments of the public services. The amount of work that they have to do in a single case is simply enormous.

I repeat again that, considering the value of their services and the volume of work done by them, in all justice we ought to take up the question of improving the conditions of the service seriously, and I welcome the resolution put forward by the hon'ble mover."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry to have to strike a note of discord. I am afraid I do not clearly understand what is before the Council at the present moment judging by the speeches in support of the motion. With regard to the reality of the grievances of the Munsifs there can be no question, and when I strike this note of discord I do so in the confident belief that I shall not be misjudged by the Council or by those in whose interest this motion has been moved. Ever since I have been a member of this Council—and that is now many years. I have been almost year after year bringing up the question of improving the service till the younger hands have taken it up. We have had a narration of their grievances which is not new to the Council or to the Government. The question is now one entirely of ways and means. Though I am not fully convinced of the beneficent intentions of the hon'ble mover of the motion towards the members of the service I should think that this was a move for putting off the evil day as long as possible. What good a committee like this has now to do. Well, my Lord, I have some experience of committees elsewhere. Although many resolutions have been moved in this Council we have not had any committee. In connection, however, with the Public Services Commission's Report itself we had one committee referred to by Sir Henry Wheeler—that is with regard to the Educational Service. Some of my colleagues here in this Council were members of this committee—I think the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth and two other hon'ble members along with myself were on this committee. We had a lot of sittings, very elaborate resolutions were moved in due form, giving satisfaction to none. That would be the fate of another committee that you might appoint with regard to this very important branch of the public service. The thing now is to go ahead and the best possible way is now open to us. It is not the Council will have the last word on the subject. Full materials will have to be placed before the proper authorities and there is no lack of materials. The necessity is at present for some definite and decisive action. A scheme that may be evolved may not be perfect, but the thing is to get ahead and do something and I am afraid that the committee will not achieve that object.

If, on the contrary, my Lord, all the materials and many of the suggestions that are advocated by different public bodies who were consulted with regard to this important question be acted upon and a definite scheme placed before the proper authorities with the request that action be taken as soon as possible, it would be doing much better service to the Subordinate Judges and Munsifs than by having a committee which would merely delay matters. I do not complain—on the other hand I am glad that the Executive Service has received a treatment that they have well earned as they are a very important branch of the public service, even if less fortunate Munsifs and Subordinate Judges have not had the treatment that was merely promised them not long ago. Then came the recommendations of the Public Services Commission. Public opinion has been collected on them, and Government is, I am sure, ready to go into the matter and do the best that can be done with the materials placed before it. Now to ask for a committee would mean further delaying matters, and would not help the interests of the services which we have so much at heart. Much detail has been gone into; probably they have not yet appointed a proper body to go into it. I do not propose to refer to them. If, however, it is necessary for this Council to go into some of the details, the best and the quickest way of getting the thing done would be by following the course that the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler suggested when speaking in connection with the earlier resolution. The Resolution of the Government is now before the public in some shape, and it is open to any of us to bring forward substantive resolutions before this Council and make recommendation in that form for the consideration of the Council, and then bringing up the report of that committee for consideration. There is nothing to prevent our embodying in the form of resolutions many valuable suggestions that have been made in the course of this debate, and the sense of the Council can be taken and it will assist the Government better than the appointment of a committee and then finding that the committee has pleased neither the Government nor the public. It strikes me that no useful purpose will be served by appointing such a committee, but I would appeal to your Excellency's Government to expedite the matter which is now before them".

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

" My Lord, I do not know how far the Committee suggested by my hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Ray will be helpful in this matter. I quite appreciate the observations of the last speaker, the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari. Committees have their uses and committees have their abuses also. They make delays and that is one reason why if I support the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray's resolution, I do so with considerable hesitation. I wish to speak a few words as regards Subordinate Judges and their pay, because from certain remarks in a Resolution of the Government of November last, and certain answers given by the Hon'ble Mr. Duval, the Judicial Secretary to the Government, to certain questions put by one of the hon'ble members in this Council, some weeks ago, it appears that the considered opinion of the Government as regards the discharge of their duties by the Subordinate Judges is based upon certain words in the report of the Public Services Commission, and they tend to put a lower value on the work of the Subordinate Judges than they are justly entitled to. When I venture to criticise the view of the Government and of the Hon'ble Mr. Duval and of the remarks of the Public Services Commission, it may be said that I am venturing too much, that I probably am not in a position to say that these remarks are unjust and that it is a great presumption on my part to do so. Well, my Lord, it may be presumption on my part, but I cannot avoid saying what I know, and what I have a right to feel. I have some little experience of the working of these courts; I have been unconnected with them for the last ten years, and I am in a detached position, but I can say what I know of the work of the Subordinate Judges extending over a period of 38 years, from 1871 to 1909. All this time I have not been a silent spectator of the performance in their courts. I can also speak of the work of the District Judges, so that I do not speak with a prejudiced mind, and am in a fair position to express my mind on the nature and responsibilities of the work of District and Subordinate Judges. I have nothing to say as regards the responsibilities of the District Judges—they are very great and very heavy, but I was certainly not prepared to hear a few weeks ago in this Council from the Hon'ble Mr. Duval who has been on the Bench for the past eight years, as a Judge, a District Judge and sometimes as Additional Judge, and who must be presumed to have as good knowledge and experience in these matters, to express an opinion as I have, and from whom a better appreciation of the work of the Subordinate Judges was expected. The Hon'ble Mr. Duval qualified his statement by saying that that was the view taken by the Public Services Commission, and that he put forward that view, and that was the view also taken by the Government in their Resolution. The Government Resolution of November last speaks of Subordinate Judges as officers holding charges of minor responsibility in the sphere of judicial administration. It is felt by this class of officers that this is a remark which is adding insult to injury—I am quoting the words used before me by two of them, and I quite sympathise with their feelings. You may or may not increase their salaries or increase their prospects, but why depreciate the value of their work in this way. That is their complaint, and I think if your Lordship were to know the exact nature of the work that they have to do, your Lordship would no doubt feel that the observations made in the Resolution ought to be modified. I will not go into details in this matter, because there have been communications made to the Government and also, I believe, in the speeches of the previous speakers it has been pointed out that the work of the Subordinate Judges is certainly as heavy as in any other court, and the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray has said that their work is the same as in the original side of the Calcutta High Court, barring the Ecclesiastical jurisdiction. In the mofussil there are less commercial cases than in the Calcutta High Court, and that makes a pretty good difference, but as regards suits involving the rights to properties, there is no difference; there can be no distinction between the work in the original side of the Calcutta High Court and the work in the Court of the Subordinate Judge. The suits relating to rights of property are by their very nature more complicated and require more skilful handling, and consideration than in the trial of suits of a different nature, and I may say that suits of this kind are always tried, with rare exception, by the Subordinate Judge and not by the District Judge. The District Judge has his hands too full; he has to attend to the criminal business of the district; he has to attend to administrative matters, and he has to attend to appeals from Munsifs as well as appeals from the judgment of the Subordinate Judge, to a very limited extent, that is, up to the value of Rs. 5,000, and it would dislocate all his arrangements if he were to take up an original suit, the trial of which would last a month or so, or say even two weeks or 10 days, because in that case he would not be able to attend to other important business like this. Whatever be the reason, the fact is that all suits relating to rights to property are decided by the Subordinate Judge; and it is not unusual, it is a very common thing, for suits involving half a crore of rupees or 10 or 20 lakhs being tried in the court of the Subordinate Judge, lasting a month or sometimes a month and-a-half or two months, while the work of the District Judge in the cases tried before him, whether original or appeal, would not take time anything like that. I do not mean to suggest that the bigger Judge should take the heavier case, and should be weighted with the heavy responsibility of trying all these important suits. I think the arrangement which exists now is the best; that is, the District Judge takes cases which do not last a long time, or cases disposed of in a day or two, or the trial of which does not last more than 2 or 3 days, or 2 or 3 hours; it is good for the judicial administration of the country. What I have always regretted is that Government do not always give the requisite training to the Judge of the Civil Service before he takes his seat on the district bench. If he were made to preside in the Subordinate Judge's Court for a year or two, it would give the requisite training which he needs before taking his seat first on the district bench. However, that is a matter which is not relevant to the present case, and if I am right in my observations, then there was no occasion for saying in the resolution of the Government that the Subordinate Judges hold charges of minor responsibility in the sphere of administration. As regards the report of the Public Services Commission upon which these observations are based, I have to point out that there was a Judge, an eminent Judge of the Madras High Court, on that Commission; he was a Bengal barrister and probably it is said that the observation coming from a Commission composed amongst others of a person in such a situation....."

[The Hon'ble Member having exceeded his time-limit had to resume his seat.]

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

" My Lord, I desire to speak a few words on this subject. The resolution, as far as I understand, is for the appointment of a commission of inquiry, and the question is whether such an appointment would advance the discussions which have been embodied in the speech of the hon'ble mover of the resolution. If a committee be appointed all the points raised may be successful. The starting pay of the munsifs is only Rs. 175. The increase in their pay as well as in the pay of the subordinate judges may be usefully discussed in that committee. And so I thought that I would support the resolution. But, my Lord, on listening to the speech of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari I think that it will be no use now to have a committee because the matter rests entirely with the Government. It is a matter of gratification to us, my Lord, that your Excellency's Government have taken up the subject. It is necessary for your Excellency's Government to listen to the discussion which has been going on for a very long time. On this question representations have been made to your Excellency's Government by the subordinate judges and their representations should be favourably considered by Government. These subordinate judges with whom I have come in close contact for the last forty years are very useful officers, but I can say that they are very hard-working and conscientious. My Lord, the claims of these subordinate judges and munsifs ought to be recognised more fully. I respectfully differ from the views of my hon'ble friend Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar that the munsifs should get probationary work at the first instance. My view is that these munsifs should be trained at the bar; mere attendance at the District Judge's court will not give them sufficient experience and training. If they have to work with lawyers and pleaders they will get better training than they would get by merely attending the District Judge's court. I need not dilate upon this point any more. I feel that the subordinate judges should be treated in the way they deserve. The question, however, is one for the Government, and it is for Government to decide whether they consider suggestions put forward in the resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

" My Lord, several hon'ble members have already spoken on this resolution and I have listened to a fairly lengthy debate, but I feel that most of the observations that have already been made are somewhat irrelevant to the real point under issue. I thought several times of rising to a point of order when hon'ble members were discussing the merits of a particular scheme for the purpose of reform, but I did not wish to stop that flow of eloquence with which this Council has been flooded for the last one hour and-a-half. The simple problem before the House is the recommendation that has been made in the resolution that a committee be appointed for certain purposes to advise Government about a matter regarding which we all desire that some steps ought to be taken and as to which the only difference is one of ways and means. If there are hon'ble members who are in favour of the appointment of a committee it is for them to rise and point out the reasons which in their opinion speak in favour of the advisability of the appointment of a committee. I am one of those who think that under the present circumstances the appointment of a committee is desirable, and I will briefly indicate my reasons for so thinking. I agree with the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari that committees are of very little practical value in solving problems of this character, but in this particular case I feel that a committee might be useful because we have already got a large mass of opinion that has been collected and the sole work for the committee would be to take into the consideration the opinion that has been elicited and to presenting all such opinion before Government with a view to work out a practicable scheme. That need not take very long and there is one particular reason which I think can weigh with Government in the matter of the appointment of the committee. I wish very humbly and respectfully to give a piece of advice to the official member who is going to speak on this resolution on behalf of Government which he may take for all it is worth. There is a well-known proverb—if you want to catch a thief set a thief after him. Whenever there is any agitation over a public question I think the best way in which the Government can act is to call upon some of the agitators to work out the very problem which gave rise to the agitation. If they succeed in working out a practicable scheme, Government can always accept it and get credit for it. If they fail, Government has only to hold the fact before the public for their satisfaction. My Lord, in this particular case a committee may be appointed consisting of some of the non-official members of this Council to consider the question and they may be asked to work out a scheme for the solution of the problems which we have been discussing in this very Council for several years. It would be a simple matter so far as the committee is concerned, to go into the discussion of this problem—and there are various points of view from which this question has been discussed—and I believe that if no workable or satisfactory scheme can be suggested the fault will hardly lie with the Government. My Lord, before I conclude, there is one passage in the Government resolution to which reference has already been made and to which also I wish to refer very briefly—I mean the passage referring to the nature of the work done by subordinate judges as being of a somewhat minor nature and I wish to join my voice with that of my hon'ble friend Rai Debender Chunder Ghosh Bahadur in entering a respectful, though emphatic, protest against any suggestion of this character. Subordinate judges have, we all know, not only to work very hard but the nature of their duties is hardly of a less responsible character than even, if I may be permitted to say so, those performed by High Court Judges. On the Original Side of the High Court the work that the Hon'ble Judges do is practically of the same character which subordinate judges have to do in the mufassal, with only this difference that the subordinate judges have not got the advantage of being assisted by trained lawyers of calibre and mentality which we find in the High Court, not to speak of other disadvantages under which the mufassal judges labour in the discharge of their duties.

My Lord, instances are not uncommon in which cases have gone up on appeal to the Privy Council and in which the judgments of the High Court have been reversed and the judgments of subordinate judges have been restored. In view of these facts, it is hardly fair to this branch of the public service to say that they perform duties of minor importance. I say this because I have heard a complaint from subordinate judges that the proposal made by the Government in the resolution in the matter of their increment and pay is not only unsatisfactory but absolutely disadvantageous. Even compared with the present conditions I do hope that if your Excellency consents to accept this resolution and appoints a committee, these matters will be taken into consideration by that committee. The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari in discussing the futility generally of the labours of committees referred to the Education Committee that was appointed by Government. Sometime ago I had the privilege of being a member of that committee and I know the extreme difficulties under which the members of that committee had to work in co-ordinating opinions, sometimes widely divergent, in order to find out some solution which would be satisfactory from all points of view. But in this particular case, as I have submitted, the difficulties are not of the character which faced us in connection with our work in the Education Committee. There, one of the most important difficulties and one of the most thorny problems that we had to solve was as regards the feeling which we find very persistent regarding the differentiation between the Provincial and Indian Educational Services. No such consideration arises with reference to the consideration of the problems relating to the improvement of the pay and prospects of the members of the Judicial Service. I think that a committee appointed for the purpose of carrying out the objects mentioned in this resolution will not have much difficult work to do. In this view of the matter, my Lord, I think that a committee will be useful and I therefore beg to support this resolution."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, the position of the Local Government in this matter is, in the main, that which has been very clearly argued by the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, and to that extent his speech has anticipated my remarks. In the speeches that we have heard to-day, we have been told a great deal about what may be called the service grievances of sub-judges and munsifs, but we have probably heard little that was not represented before the Public Services Commission, and little that is not already contained in the answers which we received to our resolution of the 19th November last. To that extent the debate, which has lasted some time to-day, has not added much to the facts which are represented on the side of the subordinate judicial service, and I do not propose now to argue these grievances on their merits except—if I may be permitted to make a digression—to notice one point which seems to me it might be useful to lay at rest. With so many other causes for difference of opinion, it does seem to me a pity that the time of this Council should be wasted in arguments which are really based on a misapprehension. In our resolution of the 19th November, we said that the Provincial Judicial Service was formed to fill charges of minor responsibilities in the civil judicial administration of the province. We subsequently explained what we meant by that in answer to a question; but still we are told to-day that the remark has added insult to injury. By way of an illustration which may explain matters, may I put the simple proposition—if I may be permitted to do so without offence—that the position of a Governor of a province is one of minor responsibility to that of the Viceroy. I hope Your Excellency will not think that by that remark I have added insult to injury. It is obvious that the position of a Governor of a province is one that calls for ability, character and energy in the highest degree: yet, as a statement of fact, the one I have made, I submit, is correct. On precisely the same lines, as compared with District Judges and High Court Judges, we said that munsifs and sub-judges occupy a position of minor responsibility, but no one infers that the performance of their duties does not require capacity, integrity and judgment. Surely the remarks of the resolution cannot reasonably be construed as insulting. I apologise, my Lord, for this digression, but it may possibly save time hereafter. I will now turn to the resolution itself.

"As I have already said, most of the speeches we have heard deal with service grievances. The resolution itself asks us that we should remit certain papers for the consideration of a committee. My objection to that, put briefly, is that it is impossible to conduct administration by unending committees. In connection with the previous resolution, I have tried to explain what the position in these matters is, namely, that the question being beyond the powers of the provincial Government, we must refer it to the Government of India, which, in their turn, will probably have to refer it to the Secretary of State, and whether we have another committee or not, this Government will, on such materials as are before them, and aided by such intelligence as Providence has given them, have at some time to make recommendations to the Government of India. Under these circumstances, I submit that all this Government can be expected to do is to base their recommendations on a fair and open enquiry in the course of which all those interested may be heard. In this particular instance, we have already had various debates in this Council; but, apart from those, we have had a fair and open enquiry by the Public Services Commission—a Commission which was representative not only of Bengal but the whole of India, and composed of men—I hesitate to say—of higher calibre—but possibly of more widely recognised standing than anybody likely to be taken from Bengal alone. They toured throughout India and they made their recommendations. However, we did not even act upon them: in our desire to do something for these sub-judges and munsifs we departed from our usual procedure, which is ordinarily that of awaiting reference from the Government of India, and in anticipation of such a letter we addressed the High Court. This was done on the 23rd March 1918, and we received the High Court's reply on the 5th September last. We then put out our resolution of the 19th November, and we got in replies which are now before us. I hold here a list of those who have replied, numbering about 116, and with particular reference to the service grievances, I may point out that we have had about 90 answers from sub-judges and munsifs, and I can assure honourable members that they have fully represented their grievances before the Local Government. We have also had replies from a number of pleaders, Bar Library Associations, and public bodies of importance, such as the Indian Association, the Central Muhammadan Association, the National Liberal League, the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce, and the British Indian Association. Therefore, we have received a very large and representative body of opinions in response to our invitation, and it cannot be said that in this matter we have not consulted public opinion. But in all administrative matters there must come a stage at which action succeeds consultation, and although certain of the deliberations of this Council during the last two days would lead us to imagine that, with some of its Members, that is not a very popular doctrine, still I submit that it is reasonable. What we are asked to do now is to refer all these papers again to a committee. What is that Committee to do? Is it to take evidence again and go round recording opinions and prepare a report? Obviously that would take time, and after it was done, we should only have another report of, perhaps, six or eight gentlemen of eminence. We did not even act immediately on the report of the Public Services Commission, and are we to act on this second report without publishing it? Are we to get another 116 opinions and what are we then to do with them? Obviously, the procedure may be unending, and if we adopt it we shall never come to any conclusion at all. Sooner or later we have got to come to a decision. We have arrived now at the decision stage. The file is at present lying on my table, though I have not hitherto been able to tackle it, as my time has been fully occupied in preparing for this debate. Otherwise, we would have got our letter out by this time containing our proposals. If, Sir, I wanted to delay any redress to the complaints and grievances of these munsifs and sub-judges, I would accept this resolution. There can be no more effective way of delaying it than to accept the advice which has been given us to-day. I think it was in connection with last year's Budget that my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr, said that the munsifs had had very hard luck, and that if he had not been speaking with his customary restraint, he would have used somewhat stronger language. What language would be used by these munsifs if, when proposals are on the eve of being submitted to the Government of India, we again refer them to a committee, I hesitate to imagine. As we deprecate further delay, we cannot accept the resolution. On the other hand, by going on with our proposals, we are doing what is the object of all of us, namely, to set right whatever legitimate grievances there may be."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. Irwin.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, after hearing the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler I think it proper to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 16.

The Hon'ble Mr. H. R. A. Irwin moved the following resolution :—

"This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that provision be made in the next year's budget for the teaching of hygiene and sanitation by duly qualified teachers in all Government and State-aided schools and colleges throughout the province, thereby giving effect to the resolution on the same subject which was carried at the meeting of this Council held on the 19th February, 1918."

He said :—

"Just a year ago I had the honour of pressing the importance of education in hygiene and sanitation on the notice of Government."

It was opposed on behalf of Government by the Hon'ble Sir S. P., now Lord, Sinha, but nevertheless was carried by a substantial majority of independent members in a fairly full House.

I think, therefore, I am justified in again drawing the attention of Government to such an important subject, which, in the opinion of many influential and expert authorities, better qualified to judge than I, vitally affects the condition and welfare of the teeming millions in this country.

Lord Sinha, in opposing my resolution last year, quoted from a Government of India resolution on hygiene, which, according to the official report, he said, was dated 'the 31st February 1913.'

Time does not allow of my reading this resolution in extenso, but it starts by admitting that—'The claims of hygiene are paramount, not only in the interests of the children themselves, though these are all-important, but also as an object-lesson to the rising generation.'

Mr. Irwin.

I would specially emphasise the last sentence : in my humble opinion it will be in the coming generation, when the scholars of to-day become the fathers and mothers of the future, that the effect of simple education in hygienic methods will be made evident.

The Government of India resolution goes on to say that 'want of funds and the apathy of the people have been responsible for the comparatively small attention paid to hygiene.'

My Lord, do not the very words 'want of funds' exhibit 'apathy' on the part of Government? For surely, if, as stated the claims of hygiene are paramount, funds should be provided for such a purpose, by curtailing expenditure under some other less important head.

And if Government itself is apathetic, is it likely that 'the people' will be less so?

It is now six years since the date of that resolution : in the meantime what has been done to give effect to its recommendations?

It is true a most influential committee was appointed in this province to inquire into the whole subject and that committee recommended 'that there should be a course of hygiene and sanitation for the four upper classes of high schools,' but there the matter rested, the difficulty being 'the want of duly qualified teachers who are to carry out the teaching of hygiene in the schools ;' but were any steps taken to provide those 'duly qualified teachers'?

Lord Sinha went on to say : 'Therefore with the greatest possible desire to give effect to the general demand for providing a certain amount of teaching of hygiene and sanitary science in the schools, we have not got, first of all, the teachers to do it, and secondly, we have not got the money to train the teachers.'

As regards both these difficulties, my contention is, that it is the duty of Government to provide both teachers and money, and if the second is provided there is no doubt that the first will shortly be forthcoming.

Before quitting the question of the debate on this subject last year, I should like to refer to the remarks which fell from the Hon'ble Mr. Arden-Wood in criticizing my resolution.

He quoted Mr. Jack as saying : 'The Bengali is certainly the cleanest race on earth.'

With due deference, my Lord, I think this quotation is misleading. I believe my Bengali friends will agree with me when I say whilst I cordially agree that Bengalis, of all classes in their own persons, are as clean, if not cleaner than, any race on earth, that the environments of the dwellings of the lower classes in Bengali villages are lamentably filthy in the extreme, and this I am convinced is due to ignorance of the dangers it entails to health and not to actual want of cleanliness.

The hon'ble Member went on to recommend the medical inspection of school children in preference to the teaching of hygiene. I quite agree with the first part of the suggestion, but not as a substitute, for the teaching.

Surely it is quite a different question altogether, and were it not so, in my opinion it is of less value, as it affects the individual, for his or her life only, but does not impart valuable knowledge which can be passed on to a future generation.

He further went on to say speaking of schools, that 'They already have more subjects to teach than they can do justice to.'

Mr. Irwin.

All I can say in reply to this is, of what use are all the subjects in the school category unless life and good health be granted to benefit by them? Let some other less important subject be abandoned and give place to the teaching of health before all else.

The hon'ble Member wound up by suggesting that I should withdraw my resolution on the understanding 'that Government should take up this important question' and my reply is the Government of India 'took up the question' at any rate as far back as February 1913, but what progress has been made since?

During the past year I understand that some steps are being taken in the desired direction, in this province, by the training of sanitary inspectors, and I believe courses of lectures on hygiene are being arranged for at the central colleges; also, in certain municipalities where Health Officers are employed, similar lectures are to be given, but will those lectures be attended by an appreciable number of people or even by any of the classes which it is most desirable to get at?

Further, I believe that Government is being applied to for a grant for the purpose of treating school children already suffering from malaria, but as I said before, this, excellent as it may be, is a totally different question and is by way of a cure of disease, in individual cases, which can only be temporary, with no guarantee against re-infection, as long as the child remains in a fever-stricken locality, and cannot be of anything like the same value as education in the methods whereby disease may be prevented.

In support of the resolution I am this day proposing, I would refer, in the first place, to the speech reported to have been made by your Excellency at the annual conference of the All-India Sub-Assistant Surgeons' Association held at the Campbell College on January 23rd last, from which I regret time will only admit of a few brief quotations.

Your lordship is reported to have said :—

'We have to try to revolutionise the immemorial habits of a whole people before we can hope to vanquish that small but malevolent parasite, the hook-worm.'

Further

'Knowledge widely diffused and an ample supply of highly trained medical men and sanitarians.'

Again

'In place of knowledge we have ignorance.'

and finally

'the tremendous importance of spreading abroad knowledge of sanitation and hygiene.'

How, my Lord, can 'the immemorial habits of a whole people' be better revolutionised than by the education of the rising generation in the schools? How better 'diffuse knowledge', and how better spread abroad a knowledge of sanitation and hygiene?

Surgeon-General Edwards in writing on the subject says :—

'I am very glad to hear that you are continuing to press for the teaching of public health in all schools and colleges. If only the people were taught how diseases like cholera, tuberculosis, dysentery, malaria and hookworm are spread, the simple means to prevent the spread and the reason why, above all the reason why, the task of the public Health Officer would be a comparatively light one. Without this knowledge measures to improve public health are met with apathy or even hostility.'

Mr. Irwin.

In further support of the course I am advocating, I would quote from the opinions of two eminent authorities on the question of combatting disease.

First that of Lieutenant.-Colonel W. Glen Liston, I.M.S., President of the Medical Research Section of the Indian Science Congress held recently in Bombay. I strongly recommend his address entitled 'The Next War—Man versus Insects' to those interested in the subject.

As the title indicates, he writes on the connection of insects with the propagation of disease and says :—

'In India at least two-thirds of the preventable diseases can be attributed to their (insects') agency'. He emphasises "the need of educating people in the dangers which the multiplication of insects connote". He further said that 'more than ten million lives have been sacrificed to plague, an easily preventable disease', requiring amongst other conditions 'the enlightenment of the people as a means of prevention'.

In referring to the teaching of hygiene in schools he says :—

'I fully approve of the recommendations'.

He further writes :—

'How are the masses to be taught that prosperity is intimately connected with sanitation? There are two ways in which this can be accomplished—first by instructing the children in schools "etc., etc."

The second authority I referred to above is Dr. Lankester, Director of the Medical and Sanitation Department, to H. E. H. the Nizam's Government. In a memorandum on the subject of 'Measures for the prevention of Tuberculosis in India' he strongly urges the identical course recommended in my resolution. He says :—

'Closely akin to the establishment of educational organisations is the question of making a vastly extended use of the educational system of the country in the direction of spreading the knowledge of health matters amongst school children and school students.'

Further—

'What is needed is that educational authorities should decide to make the subject of physical health one of the compulsory ones in the educational course at the expense of one of the present compulsory subjects'

Again he writes :—

'When we have actually in existence the machinery devised for the object of dispelling ignorance on the widest possible scale it is surely reasonable to demand that this machinery of education be applied to the most practical and fruitful of ends—that of helping the children and the students of India to grow up with some knowledge of how to keep themselves in health and how to avoid those things which cause sickness and suffering'. 'The mere fact of hygiene becoming regarded as an essential part of the training of thousands of school teachers throughout the country would in itself be a gain of the greatest importance'.

I do not wish for one moment to attempt to minimise the value of what Government has effected in the matter of public health, in fact what has already been done demonstrates the fact of what can be accomplished in that way.

Mr. Wordsworth.

You, my lord, personally are justly earning the admiration of all by the noble efforts you are making in the cause of suffering humanity, and your name will certainly go down to posterity associated with such work.

But when we are told that want of funds stands in the way of sanitary teaching, and when the Education Department says that it cannot accept sanitation as a subject because it already has more subjects than it can do justice to, I suggest that the Educational Department and even Government itself as a body fails to appreciate the vast effect which hygiene and sanitation have on the prosperity and well-being of a country.

We planters on our tea gardens are just beginning to appreciate the benefit to be derived from a successful campaign against what your Excellency terms 'that small but malevolent little parasite, the hookworm'.

We reckon that it adds the equivalent of 25 per cent. to our active labour force, the value of which it is hard to overestimate in these days of scarce labour.

It is one instance of the desirability of endeavouring to educate the people and 'revolutionise their immemorial habits'.

What subject I would ask of the educational authorities is more important than health? The three R's must of course be taught, but without health, not to say life itself, no community can prosper or be happy.

My Lord, it is just forty-four years since I first came to this country, as a boy of sixteen. I have spent many happy years here and have been intimately connected with the classes which this resolution is intended to benefit.

I have often watched with the greatest pain and pity poor coolies suffering and dying purely from want of a little knowledge and have felt how helpless a mere individual is.

I have seen the gradual evolution of the people as our Western ideas have been slowly assimilated.

In many ways the change has not been for the better, but in this question of sanitation there is no doubt that the West is far in advance of the East and I feel that to further and assist its progress is a duty my countrymen and I owe to the land which has given us shelter."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

"My lord, this resolution is in effect a continuation or a repetition of a resolution moved in Council at the corresponding meeting of last year; and I take it that the hon'ble mover's present purpose is to obtain from Government a statement of what has been done in consequence of the acceptance of that resolution by the Council. At least, I do not imagine that his sense of courtesy would allow him to suggest the possibility that we have forgotten the obligations which that resolution imposed upon us and that it is necessary to remind us of them. I take it, therefore, that the words in the resolution 'thereby giving effect to the resolution on the same subject which was carried at the meeting of this Council held on the 19th February 1918' do not exactly say what they contemplate. I am prepared to give the Council a brief statement of what has been done, but I would first point out that the teaching of such a subject as sanitation or health is not on a par with other subjects in the school curriculum. It may be taught in schools; it is taught in schools; but if it is intended to have good results, it must be taught in a different way from other subjects. Sanitation, so far as the education department is concerned, resolves itself into not only formal lessons in schools, lessons in theoretical knowledge, but also certain practical matters which have relation to school buildings, etc. It is useless, for instance, to teach hygiene as a subject in schools unless we can in some way ensure that the lessons shall have some practical visible effect out of school. That is one of the difficulties with which we are necessarily concerned in contemplating a subject of this kind and it is one of the reasons why this resolution was opposed on behalf of Government last year. Since, however, the Council accepted the resolution, we have done the best we could, both in the way of formal instructions in schools, and in the way of attention to buildings, light, cleanliness, external sanitation and all the other external marks of a good school, which we endeavour to effect through our inspecting agency. In this respect we have, I believe, been far from unsuccessful. The work is difficult; it is not always appreciated; and we have often in this Council heard the Education Department attacked as a department which imagines that primary education can be carried on only in marble halls. Although not meant as a compliment I take it as a tribute to the work which our inspecting officers do in their visits to schools, a tribute to the efforts which they make to improve the sanitary and hygienic conditions of the schools under their control. With regard to formal instruction, we have during the last year made a beginning in some directions, and more than a beginning in others. I shall not weary the Council with all the details: suffice it to say that we have had an examination made of available books by a committee of experts, and that those books which find favour have been adopted, prescribed and recommended for various classes in various kinds of schools. We have hygiene taught as a formal subject in practically every kind of school, in primary schools, in middle schools, and also in the lower or vernacular classes of high schools, where we have the power, i.e., where schools are Government schools or aided schools we prescribe it as a compulsory subject. In other schools, we do what we can to have the teaching of hygiene and the fundamental principle of sanitation taught. In the higher classes of school we cannot do much in this connection, for their curricula are determined by the University and it is for the University to decide what subjects shall be included and the Council will remember that it was pointed out a year ago that the Government of India has expressed itself as opposed to the introduction of formal hygienic teaching in the upper classes of high schools, for the reason that with the lack of competent teachers it is likely to become purely theoretical and to be regarded as useful only for examinations.

In addition to this we have made arrangements for lectures on hygiene to be given in all training schools and colleges. In this connection, I have to acknowledge a debt of obligation on behalf of the Education Department to the Sanitary Commissioner. He has helped us admirably. Where municipalities employ health officers or sanitary inspectors, we have been able to give competent teaching to elementary teachers under training in guru-training schools, for there are guru-training schools in a large number of these municipalities. A few municipalities have refused our terms, which were briefly, that we provided all the cost of and materials for teaching, the lanterns, the slides, and the acceptance of the municipalities meant responsibility only for breakages. Hon'ble Members will readily understand that it has been difficult in a time like this to procure the necessary materials, lanterns, etc. It was difficult also to obtain teachers, but we have made a beginning in 18 municipalities, and as more lanterns are available, we shall extend this work to a larger number of municipalities. The Sanitary

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Commissioner has made somewhat similar arrangements in district boards, and there is a considerable hygienic propaganda now carried on in various district boards by lectures given by health officers or sanitary inspectors illustrated by lanterns. Further, the Sanitary Commissioner has agreed to instruct the hygiene teacher of the Sanitary Inspectors Training class to deliver courses of lectures in the two training colleges in the province, and in the normal training schools, also in the training classes at the Dow Hill School at Kurseong, where a certain number of European women are trained for the teaching profession and in the Bethune College for Indian girls in the city of Calcutta. Further, we have already provided in memory of our obligation sufficient money in the next budget to enable us to carry on the scheme and develop what we have begun. The money that the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin asks us to provide has already been provided. We have also provided money in the budget for the appointment of two officers to assist in work of this kind, a deputy sanitary commissioner and a physical adviser to the Education Department. We have already made proposals for the appointment of these officers, and when times are propitious, we expect to have them added to the cadre of the Education Department in this province. Hitherto, for advice in these matters, we have been indebted to the Sanitary Commissioner, and to a gentleman to whom I may now pay a tribute since he has recently left this country for America for good, Dr. Segard, who came out to Bengal as physical director of the Young Men's Christian Association and whose services by an arrangement between the Young Men's Christian Association and the Government were available for the use of the Education Department. For five years he has given us loyal and invaluable service in improving physical education in schools, developing drill, training drill masters and in advising and assisting schools in every way in the improvement of their internal conditions, light, ventilation and sanitation. Now that he has returned to his own land, and will not be coming back to Bengal, I take this opportunity of saying a word of appreciation on behalf of the Education Department. I trust, my Lord, that I have made it clear to the Council that what the hon'ble mover asks for has already been done. He therefore may see his way to withdraw the resolution inasmuch as, if accepted, it will pledge us to a provision which we have already made, and therefore to a double provision which we could not spend."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the motion of the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin, and I do so, to thank him for again bringing up this question. When he moved this subject last year, he got the unanimous support of the non-official members, who were particularly grateful to him, coming as he does from the European community, for the great interest and persistency with which he has been advocating this question. I have been reading the proceedings of the Council of February last year, and I find that when Mr. Irwin moved in this Council for the provision for the study of hygiene and sanitation in schools, the Hon'ble, now Lord, Sinha said that the Government sympathised with the object of the resolution, and that they had taken certain steps, and in his reply to Mr. Irwin said that almost from 1911 to 1913-1914 Government had been considering this matter. I find from the proceedings that in 1913 committees were appointed by Government and after long and protracted sittings submitted their proposals recommending that the teaching of sanitation and hygiene should be made compulsory in all schools in Bengal. I find that since 1913 there has been correspondence with the Government of India. I also find that the upshot of the recommendation was that the Government of India and the Government of Bengal practically agreed that such an important subject should receive the attention of Government. The Government of India, however, did not think that it should be made compulsory, but should be optional. Since then, we find that nothing particular has been done, although Lord Sinha expressed his sympathy and the genuine sympathy of the Government last year, but said that the want of funds and trained teachers stood in the way. My Lord, this is a matter in which in this Council, no matter how much we may talk and debate, we cannot do anything. We cannot get trained teachers and funds ; that is the outcome of executive energy on the part of the executive Government. I have tried to follow the speech of the hon'ble Director of Public Instruction, but I have not been able to gather how many teachers in hygiene have been trained, and in how many schools in Bengal is the study of hygiene being carried on. So far as Calcutta is concerned, my Lord, if I heard the speech of the hon'ble Director of Public Instruction right, he referred to the Bethune College. I am connected with some of the educational institutions in this city, and I do not think that Calcutta is a place where there should be any difficulty in the teaching of hygiene and sanitation. I believe it is a place where a certain number of fairly trained men are obtainable—I do not say highly trained. I say fairly trained. Therefore I say that this is a subject which ought to engage the more earnest attention of Government. You may spend money on the prevention of malaria taking steps in the direction of anti-malarial measures ; you may spend money on other matters relating to sanitation, but I am strongly of opinion, my Lord, that unless a study of hygiene and sanitation is made compulsory, in all schools, and unless the boys are taught the evil effects of bad water, etc., which can best be illustrated not only by lectures but also by practical demonstration, I do not think any great advance in sanitation would be made. I think this is a matter which ought to be taken up more vigorously than has been done. Although the resolution was opposed on the last occasion by Government still I must do Government the credit that it entirely sympathised with the object of the resolution which was ultimately carried in spite of the 'noes' on the other side. I therefore earnestly hope that when that resolution is renewed as it has been with vigour by my hon'ble colleague Mr. Irwin, now the Government will kindly make due provision in the budget of the next year, and also that the Director of Public Instruction in his executive capacity will make arrangements to introduce the study of hygiene and sanitation and see that a number of trained teachers are regularly turned out every year from the guru-training schools."

Mr. Irwin : The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble Mr. Irwin said :—

" My Lord, I must confess that I am unable to altogether understand the attitude taken by the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth on behalf of Government in regard to this resolution. On the one hand, he says that Government has done exactly what I asked, namely, provide funds for carrying out the course I recommend, and, on the other hand, he asks me to withdraw my resolution. He says that the wording of my resolution ' thereby giving effect to the resolution carried at the meeting of this Council on 19th February, 1918 ' are practically unnecessary. If the hon'ble Member gives me his assurance that Government is doing or is about to do what I ask, and has every intention of continuing to do so in the future, I am quite content, and am quite willing to withdraw my resolution. "

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

" My Lord, it has been made perfectly clear by the Director of Public Instruction on behalf of Government, that Government having accepted the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin last year, it has provided the funds that it thinks necessary for the present. He has given the assurance that he is going ahead with this most important question of hygiene, and I can assure the Hon'ble Mr. Irwin that Government is not likely to lose sight of the matter, and I hope that, given this assurance, he will not now press for his resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 17.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that arrangements be made by Government at an early date for accommodating a larger number of regular students for admission into the Medical College, Calcutta, from the commencement of the next session ; and
- (b) that the Belgachia Medical College be permitted by Government to take a larger number of students for the Preliminary Scientific M. B. Examination of the Calcutta University.

He said :—

"My Lord, from the printed Annual Reports of the Medical College, Calcutta, for the years 1916-17 and 1917-18, published by the Hon'ble Surgeon-General with the Government of Bengal, I understand that 707 applications for admission to this College were received at the commencement of the session in 1916. Out of these 167 were admitted to the College. Again, 830 applications for admission to this College were received at the commencement of the session in 1917. Out of these 140 were admitted to the College, the total number of new students admitted being 161, of which 18 were sent by Bihar and Orissa Government and 6 by the Assam Government. From the reply to unstarred question No. 24, asked by me at the meeting of the Council held on the 21st January last, I understand that a very large number of students has been refused admission into the Medical College from the year 1910 to 1918. The existing arrangement regarding the admission of a limited number of students into the Calcutta Medical College and Belgachia Medical College is quite insufficient to meet the growing demand for the whole of the Presidency of Bengal, and it is high time that necessary arrangement should be made by your Excellency's Government for accommodating a larger number of regular students for admission into the Medical College, Calcutta, from the commencement of the next session.

With these few remarks, I beg to move this resolution for acceptance by your Excellency's Council.

My Lord, with reference to the second part of the resolution marked (b) regarding admission of a larger number of students into the Belgachia Medical College, I understand that provisional affiliation of this College to the University of Calcutta up to the Preliminary Scientific M. B. Examination, was granted in April 1916. The College was formally opened by your Excellency's predecessor Lord Carmichael in July 1916. At first the College was permitted to take only 48 students for the Preliminary Scientific M. B. Examination and that number was filled up from about 400 applications. Later on, the College was permitted to take 60 and at present this College is permitted to take 100 students for the Preliminary Scientific M. B. Examination.

Having regard to the resources of this College, I think that the number 100 is sufficient for the present.

Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ; The President : Sir Nilratan Sarkar ; Major-General Robinson.

Under the circumstances, I beg leave to withdraw this portion of my resolution marked (b).

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“ My Lord, should these two resolutions be moved together ?

The President said :—

“ Yes, the hon'ble Member has his resolution in two halves. It is in order for him to move both together.”

The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar said :—

“ My Lord, this resolution has got two most important aspects, one being financial and the other relating to the educational policy. As regards the second one, which is the more important one, I think the question is still open and it has not been definitely decided whether the number of medical graduates should be indefinitely increased or not. I confess that I am in perfect sympathy with any proposal that would seek to increase the number of medical graduates of the University.

But supposing that a large expansion of collegiate medical education is necessary, the question remains to be decided whether there should be another centre started elsewhere, or whether the present centres of higher medical education should be increased in dimensions. I would, under such circumstances, be strongly in favour of having a centre in Dacca either independent of the existing centre in Calcutta or working in association with them. That question apart, there is the financial aspect also. I believe there is a misapprehension in some quarters as to the financial necessities involved in medical education. We want to add another 50 students every year to the rolls of the Medical College. That would mean an increase of 300 students in six years and if the Government were to pay Rs. 100 per year, for every student, it would be a huge sum every year. Medical education is not like ordinary education. In order to train one medical student there must be proper equipment for him in at least six different laboratories,—viz., the Chemical, Physical, Biological, Physiological, Pathological and Bacteriological laboratories, and even then the question would still remain whether there was sufficient opening in the dissecting rooms, class rooms and the hospitals. If we go on indefinitely increasing the number of students in the Medical Colleges, the result will be that our students will get an indifferent sort of training and our qualifications will not be accepted as high enough in foreign countries, and particularly in Great Britain where it is necessary, in the interests of the medical profession, that our qualifications should be eligible for registration.

Having regard to these circumstances, I think I should oppose this resolution strongly. If it be settled that the University should admit a larger number of medical students I would request my Hon'ble friend the mover to collect money and start a fresh college. I have often found that our people are quite willing to come forward with subscriptions and contributions for the extension of collegiate education in arts and sciences. Several second grade colleges are being started in the mufassal. I only wish that a portion of this money devoted to the extension of medical education.”

The Hon'ble Major-General Robinson said :—

“ My lord, in opposing this resolution, on behalf of Government, I would like to quote some remarks made by my predecessor, Surgeon-General Edwards, in the Annual Report of the Medical College for 1916-17. He remarked that during the year (1917-18), '56 extra students were admitted, making a total of 1,040, which is more than double the number (502), in 1907-08. The maximum is now reached. The patients will suffer if there is any further increase in the number of students.'

Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari.

The position has in no way changed, there are now 1,041 civil students on the rolls and 52 military pupils.

The hon'ble mover of the resolution, in spite of his having collected much information as regards medical matters, ignores the fact that medical instruction necessitates the provision of 'sufficient cases' or 'clinical material' for instructional purposes.

The Medical College consists of two institutions, the hospital where practical instruction is given in actual medicine and surgery and the allied subjects, and the Medical College where instruction is given in the preliminary subjects, as anatomy, physiology, etc.

These two branches of medical training cannot be separated. It is therefore impossible to admit more students for the 'earlier' courses than can subsequently be taught the higher subjects in the wards.

As anyone can see who wishes, the wards of the Medical College Hospital are hopelessly overcrowded with students, and to an extent that is unknown in any Western hospital. Yet we are pressed to admit more and more students.

Even as matters now stand, patients are subjected to an amount of 'handling' by the students that would be strongly resented in any other country.

It should never be forgotten that a hospital is primarily for the treatment of the sick poor and only secondarily for the instruction of students nothing can be allowed therefore to interfere with the essential functions of a hospital. It follows, therefore, that no more students can be admitted than there are at present. Naturally, therefore, no more can be admitted into the College.

Even apart from the hospital side of the question every available seat in the laboratories is always fully occupied and already 'repeat' classes of batches of students are held to cope with the huge classes for practical work. The College buildings can only be extended at enormous expense owing to their surroundings, and sites for hospital extension would be a matter of very considerable expense and considerable delay. The present Medical College and Hospital group is about as unwieldy as any such institution can well be and at present is by far the largest in the world. The present annual expenditure is somewhere about Rs. 8,00,000.

As regards the second portion of the resolution, I do not think that it is necessary for me to say anything, as the hon'ble mover has asked leave to withdraw it."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, in a matter like this Government and the public must be entirely at the hands of experts and when two experts of the eminence of the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar and Major-General Robinson have spoken, so far as the resolution is concerned, we cannot do anything. But the opposition that has been offered to the resolution raises some important issues to which the lay public cannot shut its eyes. I do not, for instance, understand the position of the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar when he doubts the expediency of indefinitely adding to highly qualified medical practitioners. My Lord, a little while ago I and my friend went into the question in some detail and we found that between qualified, semi-qualified and quarter-qualified medical men Beugal has one medical man to 40 square miles and for about 15,000 to 20,000 people. My learned friend shakes his head and approves of the correctness of the figure. Can it be said that we have arrived at a stage when the non-official head of the medical profession in Calcutta can say that it is doubtful whether an indefinite expansion of the medical education should be allowed to go on or not. That is on the education side of the question. The more important financial side of the aspect should not be lost sight of, and it is more than doubtful whether the Medical College on its present site can go on indefinitely expanding. But whether some effort should be made to give some relief to the Medical College is a consideration that has suggested itself to some of us. What Major-General Robinson has said would be an excellent ground for not only reducing the number of students but for abolishing the training of students altogether, because no patient likes handling by medical students of the boisterous type, but even with the type of students that we have got now there is much of rough handling that patients are not willing to submit to. Well, that is a good consideration for abolishing the Medical College altogether, or we should find other means—a pauper hospital should not serve the purpose of instruction. I know that is a difficulty that has to be overcome because the country has by no means an adequate number of qualified men. The hon'ble mover of the resolution is in error with regard to the number of students now allowed in the Belgachia College. The number is not 48 but 72, and if the class arrangements and the hospital arrangements could be amplified further, I am sure that on the recommendation of the Medical Inspector there will not be much difficulty in raising it to 100, but that, I may remind the hon'ble Member, is not a matter in which Government can help directly or indirectly by assisting the management in the matter of providing more hostel accommodation and more teachers. These are matters, My Lord, that require a little careful looking into, but even if the number can be raised to 100 it can certainly be in Belgachia. My hon'ble friend Sir Nilratan Sarkar and myself who are members of the Governing Body there, would, I am sure, be very glad to take up the question if either from the public or from the Government more assistance was to come. We cannot complain that either the public or the Government have been niggardly in their assistance in building up a non-official Medical College which I hope will be a lasting monument of the education enterprise of Bengal for a long time to come. Sir Nilratan Sarkar has suggested that we should appeal to the public for help. I do not think even he can complain as Belgachia has had a certain amount of public help, and I think that it is not likely to have less response if my friend Sir Nilratan Sarkar were to take up the matter of assisting the Belgachia management in getting more hospital accommodation and better teaching.

Sir Nilratan Sarkar.

My Lord, the question of the Dacca Medical School—although it does not arise out of the resolution—is certainly one which calls for serious consideration. Dacca has been wanting something big in the way of educational institutions, and if we can in not a very distant future give Dacca a properly equipped medical college, the strain on the Calcutta colleges will be less and the relief will be appreciable. But whatever that may be, we cannot allow efficiency to suffer at all, and irresponsible increase in the number of students in the way suggested by the resolution cannot be thought of. As I have said, the question is one which ought to engage our serious attention and cannot be brushed aside by considerations like those that have been put forward by the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar."

The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar said :—

"My Lord, may I say a few words by way of explanation. As regards the further extension of the collegiate medical education I am not at all against

*Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari ; Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur ;
The President.*

it—I am strongly for it. When I said that the question had not yet been decided, I referred to circumstances which I think are known to the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari and to myself also that the question was being discussed and decided elsewhere and Government could not do anything at this stage. I said even if it is decided that Bengal should have further extension of collegiate medical education, the other question will arise whether all the centres of such medical education should be located in Calcutta even by increasing the size of some of them indefinitely or whether at least one centre should not be started elsewhere and preferably to Dacca."

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"I am very glad to stand corrected and should like to work shoulder to shoulder with Dr. Sarkar whatever may be decided."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, after the speech that has been delivered by General Robinson I do not think that the resolution which my hon'ble friend Babu Mahendra Chandra Mitra has moved need be pressed, but as has been observed by Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari—and that was what was exactly in my mind—I would like to say that from my personal experience the want of facilities for medical education in this country is now keenly felt, and in fact the want has been growing for some time. The figures, as compiled by my hon'ble friend, if they are correct, show that out of 830 applications in 1917, 140 were admitted, and in 1916 out of 707 applications 177 were admitted in the Medical College. I want to acquaint your Excellency with the experience of some citizens who take an interest in the affairs of our country and in the well being of our community."

The President said :—

"Is the hon'ble member putting forward an argument in favour of or against the resolution? I do not quite see its bearing on the resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, what I want to say is that the want of accommodation in the Medical College has opened up the question of providing for medical education at other centres. That is a point which has been urged upon your Excellency by the two previous speakers."

The President said :—

"I did not call the other two speakers to order, but the speech of the hon'ble Member upon the question does not concern this particular resolution. If the hon'ble Member wants to give an illustration in order to support an argument either for or against the resolution which is before the Council, he may do so. But it seems to me that the hon'ble Member was not doing that: he seemed to be making a speech on the necessity of increasing colleges in Bengal, which could hardly be allowed on this resolution."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I do not wish to take up the time of this Council by making further observations on this subject. As I have said, the reply of the Hon'ble Major-General Robinson disposes of the question of the Medical College, but it incidentally raises the question which I wanted to submit to the Council. As I shall not be in order in doing so, I shall reserve my observations for a future occasion."

Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur ; The President.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, my resolution is in effect to allow a larger number of regular students for admission into the Medical College. I have submitted my figures to the Council and they show that a larger number of students are not admitted to the college. The demand is very heavy and there ought to be a supply. In this view I am pressing this resolution for the consideration of the Council. We should not bind ourselves by side-issues but the main question is before the Council. The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar considers that there cannot now be any further accommodation for students, but my submission is that, as the demand is very heavy, your Excellency's Government will have to consider the question whether a larger number of students should be allowed to the Medical College and whether some means should be found by which that can be done. That is the object of my resolution and I do press it for the consideration of the Council.

With regard to Belgachia I have already asked your Excellency's permission to withdraw it."

The President said :—

"As the Hon'ble Member wishes to withdraw the second portion of his resolution, I will put the first portion to the Council."

Clause (a) of the resolution was then put and lost, and clause (b) of the resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that Government do take steps in connection with the high price of cloth and food-stuffs on the lines of action and policy adopted by the Government of Bihar and Orissa.

He said :—

"My Lord, it is already well-known to your Excellency's Government that owing to the high price of cloth and food-stuffs the suffering of the poor raiyats and persons on small fixed incomes is evidently on the increase. The retail price of cloth in the interior of districts has again risen very high. Owing to various causes the retail price of common rice and other food-grains has risen rapidly since the middle of last year. On the other hand, a few raiyats who had surplus stocks of food-grains for disposal have benefited by the rise to some extent, but in the majority of cases their stocks have been so much depleted as not to be sufficient for themselves.

I give the substance of the speech delivered by Sir Edward Gait, the Lieutenant-Governor of Bihar and Orissa, at the meeting of the Bihar Legislative Council held on 22nd January last.

His Honour fully explained to the Council the action and policy of his Government and informed the Council of the steps which are being taken in connection with the price of cloth and food-stuffs.

Mr. Crum.

His Honour has remarked as follows :—‘Owing to various causes connected with the war, there has been a general and marked rise of price throughout the world, and this rise has been specially serious in India. * * For many years past, it has been the accepted policy of Government to avoid all interference with the ordinary course of trade, and it was held that any attempt to keep down prices by artificial means would be certain to lead to a greater trouble than that which it was desired to avoid. This principle, however, has frequently been departed from in England under the stress of the war and it is now realized that Government can often intervene with success, at any rate in the large class of cases where the conditions are not wholly or mainly due to economic causes. * * *

His Honour informed the Council of the fact that, as the dealers in the mufassal showed no disposition to bring down their rates to those prevailing in the Presidency towns, the Local Government decided to purchase cloth in the Calcutta market for sale in the various districts within His Honour's jurisdiction. Since the middle of November Mr. Reid, who as Magistrate of Patna had already done good work, purchased several million yards of cloth which were sold locally at 30 to 40 per cent. below the prevailing prices. The people in this way saved several lakhs of rupees which would otherwise have gone to the trade. The method of distribution varied according to the local conditions ; in some cases cloth was sold on commission and in others voluntary agencies were appointed, but the most popular system had been the sale directed by Government at the public offices. The popularity of these sales may be gauged by the fact that cloth to the value of nearly Rs. 2,000 was sold at the Patna cutchery in a single day. A certain quantity of imported cloth purchased in Calcutta together with some standard cloth, which Mr. Reid has obtained as a voluntary basis, will certainly meet the most urgent demand pending the arrival of the standard cloth in sufficient quantity. Mr. Reid has also succeeded in obtaining some cloth of superior quality for the use of the better classes, and that also is now being placed in the market.

The war is also responsible for unprecedentedly high prices of food-stuffs and I understand that Your Excellency's Government has taken some effective steps in connection with the transit of food-stuffs from one place to another. I may add that this system of controlling food-stuffs is still in the experimental stage ; the difficulties of interfering with established trade routes are very great, and it remains to be seen whether the advantages to be gained from it outweigh the obvious difficulties. The workers in mills can afford to pay for higher prices than the ill-paid labourers in the interior of the districts, and if exports are unrestricted, the latter tracts might be denuded of their reserves of food which it would be impossible later on to replace.

With these remarks, I beg to commend this resolution for acceptance by your Excellency's Council.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Crum said :—

“My Lord, as a member of the committee which was appointed by Government in the middle of last year to examine the question of the prices of cotton cloth, I should like to say a few words about the present position. The Committee at that time recommended to the Government of India through the Government of Bengal that standard cloth of such pattern as will be as cheap as possible should be produced ; in fact, the Committee recommended a direct interference with the trade—an interference which as the Hon'ble Member has told us in his quotation from the speech of Sir Edward Gait is only justified by abnormal and exceptional circumstances. What I should like to try to show to you is that the abnormal and exceptional circumstances did exist in July, August and September 1918, and to the same extent they do not exist now. When we examined the position in the middle of last year, we found that the stocks of cloth in Calcutta were very considerable and that they were not going to the bazar for consumption and the reason for that was that they were being bought up by people who had no connection whatever with the cloth market. People in Calcutta and elsewhere were buying considerable number of bales and putting them into their godowns, houses and kitchen even with no intention of selling, because they were told that there was every likelihood of the prices going up and of a good prospect of profit. At the same time the prices of the Manchester cloths were rising as well as the prices of the Bombay cloth. In fact the price of cloth for India was being forced up owing to the abnormal conditions of the war. Well, at that time there were no signs of peace and we recommended that in order to stop the speculation the dealers in Calcutta should be registered and nobody else should be allowed to deal in cloth, and also recommended that standard cloth should be purchased from the Bombay Mills by Government with a view to selling it to the very poor people. Prices of ordinary dhuti had risen from about Rs. 5-3 in April to as high as Rs. 7-11 in the middle of August and it was quite evident that the people could not afford to pay for this cloth. The figures for Railway despatches and boat despatches, which were exceedingly small, showed that the cloth did not really go into consumption. The position, I maintain, has entirely changed since then. On the armistice being declared or a little before that prices began to fall, and they fell in Calcutta very rapidly indeed, till about the beginning of December they reached somewhat the level of 40 per cent. below the highest price.

Then demand began and the prices rose again gradually till the beginning of January, when they again fell with the fall in the price of cotton and the price of cloth all over the world, and the particular cloth which I quote to you as being about Rs. 7-11 in the middle of September is now down to Rs. 5-3, which is the same price as in April last year. But what is really a much more significant point with regard to the present situation is the fact that cloth is really now going into consumption, and people are buying, and I have got some figures for the deliveries from Calcutta for the last five months during 1917-18.

From September to November, which, as you all know, is the busy season of the year, I mean the Poojaseason, when we expect the heaviest deliveries of goods from Calcutta, there were in 1917, 71,000 packages delivered from Calcutta, and in 1918 in the same months there were only 27,000 packages. That shows pretty clearly that the prices during that time rose to a high level, so high that the people could not afford to pay for their cloth. In December 1917 we find 12,000 packages sent away, and in 1918 13,265 packages. Prices had fallen considerably by December, and during December they were at their lowest. In January which is not ordinarily a month for very big demands, the figures of 1918 were nearly 7,500, but for 1919, this year, they were 22,000. In fact the deliveries from Calcutta during the month of January were bigger than in any month back to October 1917. They were actually bigger than any deliveries in January for the last four years and the demand is still exceedingly brisk, and the figures for February will probably exceed the figures for January.

I think that proves pretty clearly that we have got to settled prices now at which, generally speaking, the people can afford to buy the goods, and under the circumstances I very much deprecate any interference with the regular trade. You have got to remember what the dangers of this interference are. First of all India produces in normal years only about a third of her consumption of cloth, two-thirds coming from outside. During the last two years the production has been about half and half, while the stocks of piece-goods in Calcutta are not as big as they were four or five months ago; deliveries, on the whole, as far as we can make out, have exceeded the supplies. There is practically nothing to arrive in Calcutta after the end of April. If you wanted to buy any first class cloth from Manchester, you would not be able to buy for shipment before the end of April, and that means that the goods cannot arrive here much before July—towards the middle or end of July. I do not think that this is the case with every kind of cloth: some of it you might not be able to buy for even such near delivery; if you introduce at this stage anything like a standard cloth, you are not going to do a very great deal of good to a very large number of people. The price of standard cloth is not, as a matter of fact, much below that for ordinary cloth here in the bazar, and you are going to frighten trade, and the result will be that the equilibrium which is now showing signs of being established between Manchester and Calcutta will again be upset, and dealers will be frightened, and they won't buy, and in another six months' time, if no more business is done, the position here may really become rather serious, not only from actual shortage of cloth, but from other important items too. It has already happened in one or two small instances; they are unimportant, but I give you the instance of one cloth which is being still very largely sold in the bazar; it is cloth imported by Ralli Brothers with a half-inch coloured border, which is selling at 6 annas cheaper than that with a tape border, which ought to be 1 anna 6 pies cheaper than the cloth with a half-inch border. There just happens to be a shortage, and so if you go too far to force this market not to do as it wants by allowing Government to interfere too much, you may have a state of affairs which will be considerably worse than it ever has been in the past. For this reason, because the position is so entirely different now to what it was in the middle of last year, I strongly recommend that nothing is done to interfere so far as cloth is concerned."

The Hon'ble Babu Brajendra Kishore Ray Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I desire to associate myself with this resolution which has my hearty support. The economic condition of Bengal is growing more and more serious. From the statements made in this Council from time to time it appears that the cloth problem is becoming acute and I have seen with my own eyes the distress of the poor people in the mufassal. Some energetic action on the part of Government seems to be desirable at least for the purpose of controlling the market and granting relief to the poor people. I understand that in the Presidency of Bombay Government have induced the local bodies to make arrangements for the sale of food-grains at cost price. The plucky action of the Government of Bihar and Orissa in this connection has gained popular admiration and I hope that the Government of Bengal will adopt measures on similar lines."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry to take up the time of the Council, but the subject of this resolution has attracted much attention, and I should like to take the opportunity of explaining what the local Government has done and is doing in respect of it, especially since, from the wording of the resolution and the comments which we see in the press and elsewhere, it seems to be thought in some quarters that there is here in Bengal a supine local Government which has very little regard to the sufferings of the poor, whereas on our west, in Bihar and Orissa, we have an energetic local Government which is working marvels in this respect."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The resolution raises the two questions of food-stuffs and cloth, and I will deal with that of food-stuffs first ; but in connection both with that and with cloth, it is well that the Council should bear in mind precisely what the agricultural conditions of the province are at this moment. These were explained in a communiqué which has only just issued and which doubtless, Hon'ble Members have read ; so I can avoid repetition, but it is to be remembered that although there has been a monsoon failure and agricultural conditions are admittedly unfavourable, yet it is only in the district of Bankura and the Brahmanberia subdivision of Tippera that, at the moment, there is cause for apprehension of actual scarcity. We are in this respect a great deal better off than the United Provinces or Bombay, or even Bihar and Orissa and the Central Provinces. We know that prices both of food-stuffs and cotton cloth are everywhere abnormally high, pressing hardly both on the rich and the poor, but obviously more hardly on the poor. Such circumstances are, of course, unfortunate and regrettable, but it must be remembered that for about four years the whole world has been so suffering. We cannot bring about a revolutionary remedy, do what we will.

Turning to what has been done in the matter of food-stuffs, I would like to make it clear at the outset, that this is not solely a provincial matter ; it is certainly an all-India question, and it is indeed a matter concerning the whole world, as various orders that have been passed affect exports to countries outside India. Therefore we cannot deal with it with entire disregard to other provinces, and in fact the orders applicable are binding on Bihar and Orissa equally with ourselves. In the past few months Bihar and Orissa have taken action in two directions, different from what we have done. They attempted, as far as we understand, to control the movement of grain as between districts within the province, although our information is that they got into some difficulty in so doing and withdrew their orders. Secondly, they did at one time stop the export of grain altogether from Bihar and Orissa, but that led to intervention on the part of the Government of India, to which I shall refer again in noticing briefly the orders which have been passed from time to time, and which, I would repeat, are binding on both provinces alike. When, therefore, the resolution asks us to emulate the example of Bihar and Orissa, it presumably refers to the action of that province in these two respects, but for the understanding of the possibility or desirability of our doing so, we should recall what the various orders of the Government of India have been.

When it became evident that the monsoon of 1918 was going to be a failure, and the crop prospects dangerous, the first action taken by the Secretary of State, as announced in a communiqué, dated the 7th October, was to stop all wheat purchases for export overseas except for Mesopotamia, the justification of this step being to conserve for use in the deficit provinces of India such supplies of wheat and other food-stuffs as were not immediately required for local consumption in those provinces which had a surplus. This is an instance of what I referred to as the all-world character of the question. This measure was supplemented by the Government of India by the appointment of a Food-stuffs Commissioner for all India with the object of securing the most effective distribution of the supply of wheat, rice and other food-stuffs which were not required for local consumption in the surplus provinces. To begin with, this Commissioner only dealt with wheat and rice, though apart from his direct transactions, he watched carefully the courses of events. The essential part of the system was that, on the information available to him from all India, he decided what quantities of wheat and rice might be imported to a deficit province from a surplus province, control being exercised by the requirement of a certificate to import by rail, signed by the Director of Civil Supplies, and countersigned by the corresponding Director in the province of export.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Government of India made it clear at the outset that in respect of rice Bengal would not be allowed to close down export so as to keep all available stocks within its borders, and while shortly afterwards, first in the case of the United Provinces and the Punjab and a little later in the case of all provinces, they allowed local Governments to prohibit the export of food-grains, other than wheat and rice, from their jurisdictions except under certificate; they definitely said that they would not allow the powers thus conferred to be so exercised as to apply an absolute and uncontrolled embargo upon all exports of food-stuffs. The final say as regards inter-provincial distribution was therefore vested in the Food-stuffs Commissioner, who was intended to look at the question from the standpoint of all India. Those are the original orders which concerned the whole country. In November 1918 we attempted to take a census of rice stocks and returns were compiled, but for various incidental reasons, into which I need not go, the collection of accurate figures was very difficult, and I am afraid that the returns could not be regarded as complete. However, we took them for what they were worth, and they showed that we had surplus stocks of rice in this province. Subsequent to that date, the Food-stuffs Commissioner took over control of gram in addition to wheat and rice, so that now he deals with wheat, rice and gram. On the 25th of January the Government of India modified their policy in one material respect, and, while leaving wheat, rice and gram to be regulated by the Special Commissioner, withdrew the powers of local Governments to impose restrictions on the movement of food-grains outside their provinces. In order to prevent speculation, they still required the countersignature of the local Director of Civil Supplies before food-grains could be imported, so as to endeavour to confine the trade to bona fide dealers. Some of the reasons which they gave for their action are relevant to the whole theory of control, and bear out what I have urged on another occasion in this Council, namely, that control is a very tricky panacea which may land us in unexpected difficulties. This is exemplified by the following extracts from their orders : —

'The present system of food control has been assailed on various grounds. In the first place, it is represented that its interference with the normal channels of trade has conduced to a deficiency of supplies in areas where they are most needed, and that the difficulties and delay attendant on the opening of new channels must inevitably conduce to a rise in prices. Secondly, the delay involved in the issue and countersignature of priority certificates has intensified the difficulty of obtaining supplies, while it is a frequent experience that a merchant after obtaining a priority certificate does not utilise it, and supplies which were expected have accordingly not come forward. Thirdly, and this is the ground on which the system of food control has been most seriously attacked, it is represented that an artificial shortage of supplies and an artificial high level of prices have been created by the restrictions in traffic, and particularly by those imposed by provincial Governments in respect of food-grains other than those the movements of which are directed under the control of the Government of India.'

The Government of India then go on to say :—

'They are aware that in certain areas the system of control is believed to have had good results in moderating or stabilizing prices, and they are fully alive to the probability that the removal of restrictions on the movement of food-stuffs will be followed by a rise of prices in some of the supplying areas, without perhaps a corresponding fall in the areas to which the supplies will be moved. On the other hand, they are faced with the very grave risk that, particularly in respect of those food-grains, the export of which is subject to provincial restrictions, certain areas, especially in Western India, may find themselves in a condition of serious deficit * * * * *'

Sir Henry Wheeler.

They have, however, decided to retain for the present their control in respect of wheat, rice and gram, and this decision is in accordance with the views of those heads of provinces whom it was possible to consult. But in respect of other food-grains they have come to the conclusion that the dangers inherent in the restrictions imposed by provincial Governments are greater than those to be apprehended from the removal of these restrictions, and they have therefore decided to remove them.'

These quotations, I think, will show the Council that control is a difficult matter, and that while it is quite easy to say 'Let us control and all will be well,' it is equally easy by ill-advised control to make things worse rather than better. That is the position. We have the Government of India with their Food-stuffs Commissioner controlling wheat, rice and gram, and we are not allowed, as a province, to impose restrictions on the movements of other grains outside our boundaries. Taking the main staple rice, we are of course interested, mainly as an exporting province, and I do not know whether the idea underlying this resolution is that we should go to the Government of India and say that in respect of rice we do not wish to export any more to other provinces. That seems to be the suggestion which the resolution embodies. But I put it to the Council that it would not be practicable for us to make out a case to the Government of India for action at the present moment on these lines, apart from the fact that it might lead to retaliation from other provinces in respect of grains which we want from them, especially in the cases of wheat and pulses in which the rise in price has been far greater than the rise in the price of rice. The Revenue Department answered a question touching the rise in the price of rice not very long ago, and I read this extract from it.

'If anything, wholesale prices (of rice) in the first fortnight of November are less than those which prevailed during the same period in the five years preceding 1917. Retail prices differ little from those prevailing at the same time in the years 1914, 1915 and 1916. They fell in 1917 and the first half of this year considerably on account of an abundant harvest last season. In July or August they began to rise again to the present level which, though it may be called high, cannot in these circumstances be termed unusual.'

This is very clearly borne out by the graph which I hold here, and from which you will see that from 1911 prices rose steadily till 1913, and kept on a fairly high level through 1914 and 1915, rising even higher between September and December of the latter year. At the end of 1915 prices came down considerably, and kept fairly steady till the end of 1916. They then fell again and steadied on approximately the same level until about October 1917. Then we have a big drop nearly down to the level of 1911, and, while recently prices have risen again, they are not yet up to the level of 1913 or 1915. In the face of that record of prices, I submit that it will be impossible to go to the Government of India and say we want to close down the export of rice from Bengal. All that we can do, we are doing. We are watching the traffic in rice, seeing how much goes out of the province, and keeping the Food-stuffs Commissioner informed of the facts. He is also watching circumstances in Bengal and other provinces, but beyond that, for the moment, we cannot very well go. That is as regards our export trade. Of course as regards our import trade, we are particularly interested in wheat, grain and pulses, the prices of which are unfortunately very high. We want to get as much as we can from other provinces, but nothing that we can do will remedy the factors making for high prices, namely, the failure of the crops due to a deficient monsoon and the decrease in the purchasing power of money. Therefore, as regards the external traffic in food-stuffs, I doubt if we can do more than we are at present doing, and I again repeat that the Bihar and Orissa Government are bound by the same orders as we are. As regards traffic within the province itself, it is extraordinarily difficult to regulate, bearing in mind the very large river traffic in Eastern Bengal, which is almost beyond control, and road traffic in Western Bengal, and at the moment no actual case of necessity has as yet arisen. Should it arise in any area, such as Bankura, where scarcity is threatened, we will take the necessary steps, but for the moment our attitude is one of watching developments.

Well, so much as regards food-stuffs. I now pass to the case of cloth. Fortunately Mr. Crum has stated various relevant facts in this connection, which I need not recapitulate, but before taking the Council through the story of cloth, I would invite attention to a communiqué from the Government of India which appeared in to-day's paper, and which bears upon the present resolution. It runs:—

In view of certain misapprehensions which appear to be entertained as to the exact effect of the recent action taken in regard to the manufacture of standard cloth, the Government of India consider it desirable again to draw attention to the fact that standard cloth is meant for sale to the poorer classes for the relief of distress, and they have no intention of interfering with legitimate trade or of attempting to supply cloth for general consumption.

That is relevant as indicating the limitations which affect any system of control in the matter of cloth, while no system of control can remedy the fundamental fact that we are dependent upon Manchester for a large portion of our supplies, and that Manchester rates are still materially above those prevailing in Calcutta. These are the cardinal facts. But I would like, as in the case of food-stuffs, to indicate what we have done in order to combat the idea that we have done nothing.

In February 1918, this Government first put forward the possibility of concentrating manufacture on certain standard varieties of cloth, and in July 1918 we took a census of stocks in Calcutta. I merely mention this matter as indicating that we have kept a watch on the Calcutta market during the whole of this year. It will be remembered that in July last a motion for an enquiry by a Committee was accepted in this Council, and that Committee sat. Meanwhile, the Government of India had been discussing the question in consultation with a special Bombay committee; and in their communiqué of the 24th August they announced the intention of attempting the manufacture of standardized cloth for the assistance of the very poor. We thereupon put in train detailed arrangements for local distribution and got out estimates of the quantities likely to be required. But while we were doing so, the price of cloth fell suddenly to an extent that made it impossible to put standardized cloth on the market, and action in that direction was suspended. About the same period, in order to check the speculation which was going on in the Calcutta market—to which the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has made a reference,—we decided to license wholesale transactions in Calcutta, and appointed a Cotton Advisory Committee on the 1st October, with which we have been in close touch ever since. The Committee issued some 1,700 licenses, and it was largely owing to the action so taken—though there were other contributory causes—that the market fell in a somewhat dramatic way, to an extent which, for the moment, rendered the manufacture of standardized cloth unnecessary. Since then our attitude has been one of watching the course of trade, and of getting the best information we can as regards the probabilities of the situation so as to be able to decide from time to time whether or not to take further action. Hitherto we have not done anything further, while that Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab and the United Provinces, have undertaken the supply of standard cloth. Bihar and Orissa was the first province to do so, and at the beginning what they did was to buy cheap cloth in Calcutta at the time when prices had fallen; they then attempted an experiment with standardized cloth which they have since somewhat enlarged. The United Provinces took a few bales of standardized cloth for experimental purposes, and have since taken more, as also did the Punjab, where sales are effected through the agency of municipalities and co-operative credit societies. We are not unfortunately completely posted as to the reasons why these provinces took action; but I would draw the attention of the Council to certain considerations which, as far as we know, weighed with them, as would appear from Sir Edward Gait's speech. Owing to the unfavourable agricultural conditions the price of cloth was, at least in Bihar, beyond the reach of certain of the poorer sections of the people; and owing to the absence of an efficient and independent system of supply district prices did not respond to the fall in Calcutta rates. Prices in the mufassal were higher than they ought to have been, having regard to the situation in Calcutta. That seems to have been the main reason why Bihar and Orissa thought it necessary to take the action which they did, but it is not a reason which is equally applicable to Bengal, and it is a somewhat noticeable fact that at present neither Bombay, Madras nor the Central Provinces have embarked upon the importation of standardized cloth. However, as certain other provinces have done so, Hon'ble Members naturally ask why should not Bengal do the same? To understand the reason of our inaction, we must look at the recent course of prices, regarding which the Hon'ble Mr. Crum has given particulars. Taking the imported dhuti in Calcutta, this touched its highest level about the third week of September. It then started to fall and came down to the lowest level in the beginning of December; but that was not a normal trade price, as it was largely due to outside factors, such as the forced sale by auction of consignments which had been ordered out of which delivery was not taken: in fact, at that time, there was some apprehension of the complete demoralisation of the market, though it tended, largely owing to the action of the Bihar and Orissa Government in buying cloths which tended to put prices up. Things then recovered, and prices rose to high-water mark about the middle of January, though the level was still substantially lower than in September. Since then the market has been fairly steady. Unlike Bihar and Orissa, our mufassal prices have, as a general statement, fluctuated fairly consistently with fluctuations in Calcutta, which constitutes a marked difference between the districts of Bihar and Orissa and those of Bengal. To the best of our information, goods are not being improperly withheld from the market and there is not at present the improper speculation which there was when we took action in suing licenses to wholesale dealers.

These being the conditions, what we have to make up our minds about whether it is wise to trust to the ordinary developments of trade and the restoration of normal conditions, or to intervene on the lines that have been followed in three other provinces. For the present, we have thought it best to follow the example of Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab and the United Provinces. Two other facts have largely influenced us in this conclusion. In the first place, we could not put standardized cloth from Bombay on the Calcutta market at as cheap a price as the cheapest variety which is now on sale there—the Banga Lakshmi cloth—even though the supply of that is admittedly limited and the quality, I believe, coarse. The second fact is, that we could not put standard cloth on the market at a price that would be more than 3 to 4 annas cheaper than the cheapest kinds of imported cloth.

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

These are the important conditions which we have to remember, and having regard to the course of the market which I have endeavoured to outline, and to these facts, we have thought it best for the moment to hold our hands. The Hon'ble Mr. Crum has already drawn the attention of the Council to the possible dangers of upsetting the market, and action taken by Government does upset the market out of proportion to the actual quantities with which Government may deal. We have therefore thought it wise hitherto, as in the case of food-stuffs, rather to watch developments and keep ourselves in touch with them before following the lead of Bihar and Orissa. We propose to continue doing so and to be guided by circumstances. Should they alter materially and should it appear that owing, say, to distress in any area the poor cannot be supplied with cloth, then we may have to intervene and take action. But, for the present, we do not propose, as the resolution recommends us to do, to follow the example of Bihar and Orissa in this matter of cotton cloth. As I have said in the matter of food-stuffs, it is not a case of following their lead, because we are both governed by the same orders. It is the case that as regards cotton cloth, Bihar and Orissa has done something which we have not done, but I have tried to explain to the Council the reasons which have actuated us in our present policy."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I wish to say only a few words on this resolution. I wholeheartedly associate myself with the resolution moved by my hon'ble friend. The abnormally high prices of food-stuffs and particularly of cloth have reached a very acute stage and it is high time that Government should come to the rescue of the situation. The Hon'ble Mr. Crum has laboured to show that the prices have not risen abnormally and that there have been bigger deliveries and the market is steady. Well, I am not going to enter into discussions of that sort—export, import and so forth. If there were bigger deliveries recently, then the position taken up by my friend becomes stronger, because whatever may be the market here in Calcutta, in mufassal the market is still worse. The prices have risen, particularly of cloth as well as of rice, chillies, oil and almost every article of consumption. It rises in this way, for it is not a question of export or import. A cloth merchant will not sell his cloth for less than Rs. 6-8. The rice merchant says that if I cannot get cloth for less than Rs. 6-8, I must raise the price of my rice. The man with the chillies and oil also goes in that way; so that the question is not exactly one of export or import or tabulating these figures and those figures, but it is a question of downright speculation among the cloth merchants who are primarily responsible for the rise in the price of food-stuffs. They take cloth from Calcutta at certain rates and then they fix a rate below which they would not sell it, and this cloth affects the rice market, the oil market and every other market. I would ask your Excellency's Government to ask the Collectors of districts just to enquire into the matter whether there is not this sort of unscrupulous speculation. If that can be stopped, possibly the present situation would not be intolerable. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has told us—although it brings very little comfort to us—that these difficulties are not confined to Bengal, not to India, but to the whole world. We do not dispute that, but that is no reason why we should go for the regulation of the market to the Peace Conference to decide one way or the other. The simple point is whether Government can or cannot put a stop to these unscrupulous men carrying on a downright speculation for the purpose of making large profits at the expense of the poor people, and the bare question would be to ask the Collectors to enquire whether there is such a speculation or not; and if there is, I think Government could ask the Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur : Mr Phelps.

Collectors to look into these things and thus afford considerable relief. It may not relieve the situation altogether, but considerable relief would be rendered if the Government would simply move in that direction."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My lord, I must say that I have listened with very great interest to the lucid speech of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. At the same time, the situation is becoming so acute that there is almost in every house in Bengal a cry that we should approach the Government to do something in this matter; but I must frankly confess that although we are making speeches, we have not been able to put any practical proposition before the Government. At the same time, I think it is our duty to bring the matter to the notice of Government, because I believe Government is in a better position to ascertain the real facts and as far as I can gather—I think the non-official Members will agree with me—Government is sincerely anxious to relieve the distress of the people. Therefore, what I want to know is this; that with regard to the price of cloth whether the speculation has been entirely stopped or whether there has been any relaxation of the licenses that have been granted, the speculation has been resumed or whether a stricter eye is still being kept on the cloth-dealers. I am a layman and I am not making any actual proposition; but I ask whether something cannot be done to fix a certain rate of profit over the initial cost of the cloth, that is to say, the price at which it is purchased in Calcutta and the price at which it is sold in other parts of the mufassal and whether Government can control the price. As regards the Banga Lakshmi Mill cloth, this is the first time that we hear about it. The outside public did not quite know whether there was a sufficient stock of the Banga Lakshmi standard or whether there was at any time as far as my information goes. Perhaps, there was not sufficient stock; but if there be a sufficient stock, I submit that a saving of four or five annas would be something to the poor people having regard to the high prices of food-stuffs. There had been some fall in the price of cloth, but unfortunately it has again begun to rise. I do not know what its price is at the present moment, but everyone coming from the mufassal and even everyone in Calcutta and specially those coming from the mufassal belonging to our community, all say,—'What are you doing, are you not acquainting the Government that we are feeling the pinch very much?' It is not merely that the price of rice but the price of wheat and other food-stuffs, such as chillies, grains, pulses, etc., have gone up to such an extent that it is very difficult for the poor middle-class to get even one meal a day. Such is the situation; and I am sure, my Lord, that the situation has attracted the attention of Government and the Government is giving a sympathetic attention to the matter. At the same time, I submit whether it is not possible to take some practical steps, although I must admit that we have not been able to make any practical suggestions."

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps said :—

"My Lord, I do not think it necessary after what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Crum to say anything from the retail point of view, but to put the matter more clearly from a wholesale point of view, it strikes me perhaps that my testimony as a retail dealer may inspire some confidence in his association. The actual prices of cotton and wool have gone up by 300 per cent., and I fail to see what the Government could do towards relieving the prices to the public in view of this fact. About three months ago, the price was three times of what it was four years ago, and it is still going up and we have the utmost difficulty in getting our own supplies. The same is the case with cotton—I am referring to cotton fine goods such as fine shirtings—and we have a three times of what we had to give four years ago. There was a time when profiteering was no doubt indulged in and then only was the time for Government to do something. My friends to my left are far behindhand in asking the Government to interfere now. I do not see any possible way of regulating the prices of goods now, because profiteering has come to an end. One cannot but be struck with the touching confidence that our friends have in the power of the Government. I would only wish that Government had more power to relieve such a thing as prices ; but in the case of food-stuffs and cloth, I believe it is quite impossible."

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

" My Lord, I have listened to the speeches which have been delivered just now. I am thankful to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler for the lucid speech in which he gave us detailed information bearing on the subject. But there cannot be any doubt that the distress in the mufassal—I am a representative of the mufassal—is very acute. If your Excellency goes to any hamlet or to a village town, your Excellency will find that it is no exaggeration to say that the distress is very acute. The poor raiyats of Bengal live under the protective wings of Government and they are all appealing to your Excellency for redress. I am extremely sorry that under the circumstances, which have been mentioned by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler your Excellency's Government is not inclined to interfere ; that disheartens me and disheartens everybody. We looked up to your Excellency for help in this matter—a matter in which our lives are concerned. Therefore, my Lord, I do press my resolution for the consideration of the Council, because I cannot persuade myself to believe that Government will not be in a position at present to interfere. This, my Lord, is my submission to the Council."

The resolution was then put and lost.

ADJOURNMENT.

The Council was then adjourned to Wednesday, the 5th March 1919, at 11 A.M., at Government House, Calcutta.

STARRED QUESTION.

The following starred question was asked and answer given :—

By the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur:—

1.

Is it a fact that the sufferings of the raiyats of Bengal are on the increase owing to agricultural depression this year?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

“ The Hon'ble Member is referred to the Press Communiqué of the 12th February, 1919, in which the economic situation of this Presidency was reviewed.”

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS.

The answers to the following unstarred questions were laid on the table :—

(a) With reference to the reply to unstarred question No. XI, asked at the Council meeting held on the 26th November, 1918, regarding the selection of text-books for secondary and primary schools, will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any necessity to maintain two lists (A and B) of approved text-books and to mark certain books therein with asterisks? Selection of text-books secondary primary sc

(b) What is the present average number of text-books approved for each class of secondary and primary schools in Eastern and Western Bengal, from which the local bodies and the school authorities are expected to make their selection?

(c) Is it a fact that some uncertainty is felt by publishers as to the probable sale of individual text-books, and that as a result, there is no proper supply thereof in the market this year?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of reducing the lists to a reasonable size after retaining only such books as are considered to be of superior merit?

(e) When do the Government expect to introduce a uniform syllabus of studies for secondary and primary schools in the province?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) and (d) Government are considering the formation of a committee of officials and non-officials to deal with the question.

(b) The information is not available.

(c) It is inevitable that so long as teachers are at liberty to select text-books, publishers should be unable to forecast their sales with certainty. Government have no information as to whether there is a proper supply this year or not.

(e) A co-ordinated syllabus for all classes has been prepared. The syllabus for secondary schools was submitted to the University Commission and it is proposed to await their report. The Director of Public Instruction expects to submit the primary school syllabus to Government shortly and it is intended to publish it for criticism.”

2.

(a) Is it a fact that the duties of the sanitary staff attached to municipalities relate, primarily, to conservancy work, and that there are no responsible agencies at work directly under the municipalities or otherwise, for the prevention of diseases? Duties of sanitary st municipali

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how matters stand at present so far as the question of prevention of diseases is concerned?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) and (b) Health officers and sanitary inspectors are appointed under section 349 D of the Bengal Municipal Act, 1884, by municipalities of which the income is Rs. 10,000 a year or more. From the model rules prescribing the duties of health officers and sanitary inspectors, of which copies are laid on the library table, it will be seen that measures for the prevention of disease are provided for. Vaccinators are appointed by all municipalities for the prevention of small-pox. There is no other organization for the prevention of disease in municipalities with an income of under Rs. 10,000."

3.

Number of civil suits disposed of by Munsifs' courts in the Mymensingh district.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing the number of civil suits disposed of by the Munsifs' courts in the district of Mymensingh during each of the last five years?

Statement referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR to question No. 3 (unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU BROJENDRA KISHOR RAY CHAUDHURI at the Council meeting of the 5th March, 1919, showing the number of Civil Suits disposed of by the Munsifs in the district of Mymensingh during the last five years.

Progress in the re-excavation of certain khals.

With reference to the answer given to unstarred question No. XIV, clause (b), of the 5th March, 1917, will the Government be pleased to state what progress, if any, has been made in the matter of the re-excavation of the Taltala-Sreenagar, Taltala-Lohajang and Shekharnagar-Lohajang khals?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. COWLEY :—

" The correspondence concerning these three khals has already been placed in the hands of the Hon'ble Member. In June, 1916, the Commissioner of Dacca forwarded certain proposals about the excavation of khals in the Munshiganj subdivision which the Dacca District Board had considered and requested that an Expert might be deputed to advise the District Board on the feasibility of the suggestions made. In July of the same year the Commissioner of Dacca was informed that owing to the demands of the war no Expert Engineer was available for this special duty; but that the Superintending Engineer of the Public Works Department would give his opinion on any proposals which the District Engineer of the Dacca District Board might prepare after a preliminary investigation. Nothing further has been heard from the District Board in the matter.

The officer who has been placed on special duty to consider improvements in drainage and navigation in Dacca district has, however, made surveys in connection with the second of the three khals mentioned by the Hon'ble Member; as regards the other two the initiative lies with the District Board."

5.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing—

(a) the amount of local taxation that has been imposed by the union committees in the Presidency; and

(b) such portions thereof as have been spent by them on—

(i) excavation and re-excavation of tanks,

(ii) primary education, and

(iii) local sanitation, during the year 1917-18?

Particulars imposed by union committees

during 1917

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

" The Hon'ble Member is referred to Appendix E of the Resolution on the working of District Boards, 1917-18, a copy of which is laid on the library table. It will be observed that the total amount of local taxation imposed by union committees during that year amounted to Rs. 52,093, while the expenditure on water-supply, education and sanitation and conservancy amounted to Rs. 23,304, Rs. 3,944 and Rs. 43,054, respectively."

6.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to explain their policy in regard to sanitation in rural areas?

(b) What particular problems of village sanitation engage, at present the attention of Government, and what funds have been spent in the last ten years for the sanitary improvement of villages?

Government policy re sanitation in rural areas

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

" (a) The general policy is the organisation of measures for the prevention and mitigation of disease and the general improvement of public health.

(b) The chief problems are—

(1) the introduction of a proper public health organisation in rural areas;

(2) researches into the causation, prevalence and distribution of disease;

(3) the improvement of the sources of water-supply;

(4) anti-malarial measures, such as drainage schemes and the distribution of quinine; and

(5) the education of the public in the laws of hygiene.

Complete figures for the last 10 years are not available. The annual expenditure by District Boards under the head of 'Sanitation charges' is shown in column 42 of Form III appended to the annual resolution reviewing the reports on the working of District Boards."

7.

Public meeting at Dacca re difficulties of communication in the district.

Has the attention of Government been drawn to the proceedings of a public meeting recently held at Dacca, at which the District Magistrate presided, for the purpose of discussing the very acute situation arising out of the difficulties of communication in the district?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“ Yes. The attention of Government has been drawn to the meeting in question.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

8.

Appointment of a District
Engineer by the District Board of Burdwan.

(a) With reference to the recent appointment of a District Engineer by the District Board of Burdwan, will the Government be pleased to state whether it offends in any way against certain executive instructions of Government about the preferential treatment of candidates educated at the Sibpur College, contained in a letter to the Commissioners of Divisions, No. 929T.—L. S.-G., dated Darjeeling, the 30th September, 1911?

(b) How many duly qualified candidates were there for the appointment; and how many of them were Sibpur graduates?

(c) How do the qualifications of the selected candidates compare with those of each of the Sibpur candidates rejected by the District Board?

(d) Were there no Sibpur graduates among the candidates so rejected whose qualifications were “ approximately equal ” to those of the selected candidate?

(e) Where was the selected candidate educated, and employed previous to his present appointment?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) District Engineers are appointed by district boards, subject to confirmation by Divisional Commissioners. The letter referred to stated that the rules under the Local Self-Government Act contained no provision giving a privileged position to candidates educated at the Sibpur College, but Government desired that in three divisions preference should ordinarily be given to applicants from that College, provided that their qualifications were approximately equal to those of others who may offer their services. It is reported that the District Board of Burdwan was of opinion that the qualifications of the selected candidates were greatly superior to those of any of the Sibpur College candidates. It does not therefore appear that the District Board failed to comply with the wish expressed in the letter in question.

(b) There were 37 qualified candidates, of whom 21 were graduates of (c), (d) and (e) The selected candidate was educated at the Jubbulpore College and obtained the B.Sc. degree of the Allahabad University, securing a gold medal for general proficiency and a post-graduate scholarship. He was subsequently at the Roorkee College, where he passed the Assistant Engineers' examination. He was employed first as Engineer of the Burdwan Municipality, which he resigned on being appointed as Assistant Engineer in the Public Works Department, Central Provinces. He served there as Assistant Sibpur.

Engineer in Seoni, Raipur and Bilaspur and officiated as Executive Engineer of the Raipur Division. Some of the Sibpur graduates had held the post of District Engineer in small districts, but none had held an appointment as Assistant Engineer or been in charge of such responsible work as the selected candidate."

9.

(a) With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. 13 asked at the last meeting of the Council, regarding free studentships in primary schools, will the Government be pleased to state whether the aided schools are not under some control of Government? Control of Government over aided and unaided primary schools.

(b) In what respects, if any, do the aided and unaided schools differ in the matter of supervision and control by the Department of Education?

(c) Are the authorities of district boards authorized to admit any number of free students in aided primary, middle English and middle vernacular schools?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"(a) and (b) The control over aided primary schools is vested in District Boards, subject to the rules made by Government under the Local Self-Government Act of 1885. The Education Department has no direct control over them or over unaided primary schools. The difference between them is that aided schools are, and unaided schools are not, subject to the educational rules issued under the Local Self-Government Act.

(c) Rules for the award of free studentships in Government and Government-aided schools have been issued by Government, but so far as Government-aided schools are aware there are no such rules for schools aided by District Boards."

10.

Will the Government be pleased to make a statement showing, district by district, the number of scholarships obtainable by students on the result of scholarship examinations in secondary stages of education, and how the respective numbers and amounts have varied during the last ten years? Number of scholarships obtainable by students on the result of scholarship examinations.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

"A statement showing the distribution, number and amounts of

- (a) Middle scholarships,
- (b) Senior scholarships,
- (c) Junior scholarships,
- (d) Special scholarships,
- (e) Mohsin scholarships for Muhammadans, and
- (f) Scholarships for backward classes for the last 10 years is laid on the library table

Separate statements regarding scholarships for girls, Trust Fund scholarships and Mohsin Fund special scholarships and stipends are also laid on the library table."

Manufacture of salt by Indians.

(a) Is it a fact that no Indian has been granted permission to manufacture salt in Bengal?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state the names of the Indians who applied for such permission, and the reasons for refusal of permission in each case?

(c) What are the circumstances that differentiate these applications from those that have been successful?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DONALD :—

“(a) Yes.

(b) and (c) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the statement given in reply to question No. LVIII (unstarred), asked by the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri at the Council meeting held on the 19th August, 1918. The petition of Abdul Barik Haji of Sandip was rejected because the petitioner asked for a special concession in the matter of the salt duty which could not be entertained; and that of Mr. P. C. Dass because he desired to manufacture under conditions which did not provide adequate safeguards for the Government revenue. The license granted to Mr. Glen George provides for payment of the full duty on all salt manufactured, and secures adequate safeguards to ensure such payment.”

12.

Establishment of a Board of Agriculture in Bengal.

(a) Are the Government aware of the recent establishment of a Board of Agriculture in the United Provinces of Agra and Oudh, to advise Government on questions of policy and administration in connection with the Department of Agriculture?

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of making a detailed inquiry from the Government of the United Provinces on this subject, and of starting a similar Board in Bengal?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McALPIN :—

“(a) Yes.

(b) Government do not consider it necessary to make a detailed inquiry from the Government of the United Provinces on the subject. The question of starting a Board of Agriculture, with the connected questions of the fate of the Provincial Agricultural Association and the establishment of branch associations, has been under the consideration of this Government for some time. A communication will be issued on the subject.”

13.

Government grant to the Society for the improvement of the backward classes.

(a) Is it a fact that Government have made certain grants to the Society for the improvement of the backward classes? If so, will the Government be pleased to state the particulars about these grants?

(b) Is it a fact that the primary schools conducted by the said Society do not conform to the rules of the Department of Education either in the matter of equipment or the curriculum of study?

(c) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of inquiring whether the said system of instruction is satisfactory, so far as it goes?

(d) What is the average cost of maintenance of a school under the management of the said Society, and how does it compare with the minimum cost of maintenance of a primary school recognised by the Department?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) Government have sanctioned a recurring grant of Rs. 3,000 per annum for a period of 5 years and a non-recurring grant of Rs. 5,000 to the Society for the improvement of the backward classes on the understanding that the Society complies with the following conditions :—

- (1) That it spends at least Rs. 2,400 a year in grants-in-aid to schools under its control.
- (2) That it adopts the departmental curricula and the rules and orders issued by the Department except in cases where the Inspector of Schools agrees to a departure.
- (3) That the schools under the Society are open to inspection by inspecting officers of the Department.
- (4) That the Society works in co-operation with district and municipal boards and inspecting officers of the Department in utilisation of its funds and in other matters connected with its educational work.
- (5) That it submits each year a report of its work in each division to the Inspector of Schools and a complete report, together with an account of its educational expenditure, to the Director of Public Instruction.

(b) and (c) This is the first year of the grant and it is not yet known whether the departmental rules are followed in all the schools under the Society. The grant is made on condition that such rules are complied with

(d) The average monthly cost of the maintenance of a school under the Society is reported to be about Rs. 8·9; that of primary schools of all classes in 1916-17 was Rs. 9·7.”

14.

(a) Are the Government aware that a representation has been submitted to the Director of Public Instruction, through the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, by the parents and guardians of the pupils as well as by the benefactors of the Madaripur High English School complaining that the school committee has been constituted by the existing school committee in contravention of the rules recently prescribed for the constitution of aided high English school committees?

(b) Is it a fact that in June last the Inspector of Schools, Dacca Division, asked the Secretary of the school to reconstruct the committee in accordance with the said rules and that on the 20th December last the committee sent up the names of the members of the old committee without allowing the parents and guardians of the pupils and the benefactors of the school an opportunity to elect or nominate their representatives?

(c) Is it also a fact that the parents and guardians of the pupils and the benefactors of the school made an application to the President of the school committee to allow them to choose their representatives for the new committee, but that no action was taken on this application?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of asking the Director of Public Instruction to inquire into the matter and require the President of the school committee to reconstitute the school committee in accordance with the rules referred to above?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) A representation of this nature was submitted to the Inspector of Schools on January 9th. 1919. Previous to this, on December 31st, 1918, another representation had been submitted to the Inspector of Schools, signed by other parents and guardians, asking that the existing committee might be allowed to continue for the full term of 3 years.

(b) Yes. On the 20th December, 1918, the committee resolved that as parents and guardians, as well as benefactors of the School, were represented on it and the term of office of most of the members would expire in about 1½ years, it was not necessary to make any change in the constitution of the committee.

(c) Yes. As the committee had been reconstituted in July, 1917, and was working satisfactorily, the District Magistrate was of opinion that the existing committee should be allowed to continue for its full term of 3 years.

(d) The Director of Public Instruction has approved of the continuance of the existing committee, and it is not proposed to take any further action until the expiry of the full term of 3 years.”

Treatment of beggars in Calcutta.

(a) With regard to the treatment of beggars in Calcutta, are the Government considering the desirability of circulating among members of this Council the replies received to their letter dated the 4th September, 1918, to representative bodies?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what further action, if any, they propose to take?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“Copies of replies so far received are being circulated to Hon'ble Members of the Council for present information. Government are awaiting the reply of the Corporation of Calcutta, and after receiving it, will circulate it also and consider what further action should be taken in the matter.”

Grant of land by Government to the District Charitable Society for Alms-houses.

(a) Is it a fact that in or about the year 1840 the Government of Bengal made to the District Charitable Society a grant of 10½ bighas of land in Amherst Street to be held by the Society for the purpose of Alms-houses?

(b) Did a Committee appointed by Government submit a report in August, 1916, recommending that a site in a more suitable locality should be provided for the Alms-houses and that Government should either buy out the Society or allow them to sell the land to a third party?

(c) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they are prepared to agree to the above proposals?

(d) If the answer to (c) above is in the negative, will the Government be pleased to state their reasons for not agreeing, or, if in the affirmative, will they be pleased to state when leave to put the proposals into effect may be expected?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. KERR :—

“(a) and (b) Yes.

(c) and (d) Government agree that it is desirable to give effect to the proposals of the Committee. The sale of the site requires the sanction of the Government of India who have been addressed in the matter.”

By the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq:—

17.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement giving, district by district, the following information regarding co-operative societies— Particulars to district co-operative societies.

(i) the number of societies which were sent into liquidation under the orders of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, since the 1st April, 1912;

(ii) the date of registration of each such society;

(iii) the amount of working capital with which each such society started, and the amount of such capital at the time when it was sent into liquidation;

(iv) the amounts realized in each case by liquidators from members, out of their total debts to the societies under liquidation;

(v) the percentage of cases in which the liquidators realized monies from members by compulsory processes; and

(vi) the percentage of cases in which the liquidators had to sell the goods and chattels of members to realize dues, stating roughly the month or months of the year when such sales were held?

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state what steps were taken by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, to improve the working of each society ultimately sent into liquidation, before passing final orders for winding up each such society?

(c) In how many cases did the Registrar or his gazetted assistants supervise the work of liquidation, and in what manner was the supervision exercised?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. McALPIN :—

“(a) (i) (ii) and (iii) (second part) Statements A and B are laid on the table so far as information is available. Information regarding the first part of (iii), (iv), (v) and (vi) is not available.

(b) In order to keep himself abreast of the working and financial condition of societies the Registrar of Co-operative Societies, Bengal, has issued special instructions to auditors to classify societies at the time of the annual audit.

Societies which are marked 'bad' or 'hopeless' receive the personal attention of the Registrar or the Joint Registrars.

As soon as a society begins to show signs of deterioration attempts are made to reconstitute it. The Central Bank staff and the Government staff keep a strict watch over such a society and the Department of Co-operative Societies carefully watches the progress of reconstitution. When all possible attempts at reconstitution fail and the continuance of such a society becomes a menace to the interest of financiers and a danger to the neighbouring societies, the society is liquidated after a careful inquiry into its working, constitution and financial position under section 35 (1) of Act II, 1912. The steps described were taken in all cases.

(c) In almost every case the Registrar or his gazetted assistants supervised the work of liquidation. Circle Inspectors are now appointed liquidators in almost every case.

Supervision is being maintained where possible by local inspection, by keeping a close watch over the progress of liquidation and by insisting on regular returns as to the progress made."

Is it a fact—

- (i) that the Directors of the Madaripur Co-operative Central Bank resolved some time ago to appoint a paid secretary; and
- (ii) that the resolution of the Directors had the approval of the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, and that this vacancy was duly advertised; but the Subdivisional Officer of Madaripur (who is the Chairman of the Central Bank) wanted to make the appointment himself without reference to the opinion or wishes of the Directors?

Appointment of a Secretary to the Madaripur Co-operative Central Bank.

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN:—

“(i) Yes.

(ii) The answer to the first half of the question is in the affirmative. As regards the second half, the facts do not warrant this conclusion. The Registrar was requested by the Central Bank to take the appointment into his own hands, but he declined to do so on the grounds that the secretary was to be the servant of the Central Bank and that he should therefore be appointed by the Central Bank.”

(a) Is it a fact—

- (i) that the majority of the Directors of the Co-operative Central Bank, Madaripur, appointed one Anwar Hosain to the post of secretary.
- (ii) that the said Anwar Hosain was serving under the Bank at the time and had been complimented by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, for his good work; and Appointment and resignation of one Anwar Hosain as Secretary to the Madaripur Co-operative Central Bank.

(iii) that the Subdivisional Officer influenced the Registrar against the decision of the Central Bank?

(b) Did the said Anwar Hosain resign immediately after his appointment? If so, why?

(c) Is it a fact that the Registrar threatened to withhold the said Anwar Hosain's license under section 17 of the Co-operative Societies Act, 1912 (11 of 1912), if he did not resign?

(d) Is it a fact that the said Anwar Hosain did not then resign?

(e) Is it a fact that the Registrar subsequently induced the said Anwar Hosain to resign?

(f) Is it a fact that the said Anwar Hosain has been appointed a Government auditor on a higher salary?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. MCALPIN :—

" (a) (i) On the 26th January, 1918, the Board of Directors of the Madaripur Co-operative Central Bank appointed Maulvi Anwar Hosain to the post of secretary.

(ii) Yes.

(iii) No.

(b) Maulvi Anwar Hosain resigned the post, saying that he had accepted it under the misapprehension that it was a post with better prospects than that of auditor which had been offered to him.

(c) No.

(d) Vide (b).

(e) The Registrar advised Maulvi Anwar Hosain to resign. He did not approve of the appointment.

(f) Maulvi Anwar Hosain has been appointed an auditor of Co-operative Societies. The pay of an auditor is Rs. 75 and the pay of the secretary of the Madaripur Central Bank was Rs. 75—5—100."

(b) Is it a fact that the said Muhammadan gentleman had been working for years as Honorary Secretary, and that he had been the pioneer of the movement in the subdivision?

(c) Is it a fact that the Subdivisional Officer disapproved of his appointment? If so, why?

(d) Is it a fact that the Subdivisional Officer warned this gentleman against offering himself as a candidate for appointment? If so, for what reasons?

(e) (i) Is it a fact that the Subdivisional Officer asked the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, to cancel the appointment?

(ii) If so, has the Registrar any authority under the by-laws of the Madaripur Central Bank to do so?

(f) (i) Is it a fact that the Registrar went to Madaripur at the instance of the Subdivisional Officer and caused the Directors to cancel the appointment?

(ii) If so, on what authority did the Registrar do so?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. MCALPIN :—

(a) Yes.

(b) He had worked for some time as honorary secretary of the Madaripur Central Bank and was one of the pioneers of the movement in the subdivision.

(c) The Subdivisional Officer disapproved of his appointment. He considered him unsuitable for the post of a paid secretary whose work would be more onerous than that of an honorary secretary.

(d) The Subdivisional Officer warned him to withdraw his candidature for the reason given in reply to (c).

(e) (i) The Subdivisional Officer asked the Registrar to veto the appointment.

(ii) The Registrar has no authority under the by-laws of the Madaripur Central Bank to cancel the appointment of the secretary, but under a circular of the department issued in 1914 all Central Banks were instructed to make all appointments to paid posts in consultation with the Registrar.

(f) (i) The Registrar went to Madaripur not at the instance of the Subdivisional Officer, but in the ordinary course of his duty. That was at the end of February, 1918. As a result of bad realisations from societies during the previous harvest, the state of the finances of the Central Bank made it impossible for it to entertain a paid secretary. The Registrar pointed this out to the Directors, who accepted his advice and postponed the entertainment of a paid secretary.

(ii) By virtue of his position as Registrar he advised the Central Bank."

Interference by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, with the Madaripur Central Bank in regard to appointments.

(b) Will the Government be pleased to state how many of the candidates for this post were younger than, and how many possessed superior educational qualifications to, this gentleman?

“(a) The Subdivisional Officer, Madaripur, appointed some supervisors in the Central Bank with effect from the 1st of April, 1918, without reference to the Directors.

(b) His authority for so doing was the following resolution passed by the Directors of the Madaripur Central Bank on the 23rd March, 1918 :— ‘The Directors delegate all their powers relating to the appointment and dismissal and all other matters regarding supervisors and clerks unconditionally to the Chairman for a period of one year and until revoked afterwards.’ ”

(ii) If so, what were the materials ?

“(a) The remark was as follows :— ‘Although the candidate is a very deserving man, he was obviously not the best candidate and he was obviously elected because of his religion.’

(b) (i) Yes.

(ii) The materials were the strained relations between the Directors in this connection, the request made to the Registrar by several people in Madaripur to use his influence to have a Muhammadan appointed and the following resolution which was passed by the Anjuman-i-Mafidul-Islam on the 18th February, 1918 :— ‘Resolved that the Registrar be requested to accord his sanction to the appointment of a Muhammadan paid secretary for the Madaripur Central Bank.’ A copy of this resolution was sent to the Registrar by the President of the Anjuman, who was a Director of the Madaripur Central Bank.’

(e) What principles, if any, were followed by those district boards which made such selection of text-books for the current year ?

Answer by the Hon'ble MR. O'MALLEY :—

“(a) The reply is in the negative.

(b) and (d) The Director of Public Instruction has informed Chairmen of district boards that the boards may select from the list approved by the Department a small number of text-books for use in the schools under their control, care being taken to discourage anything in the shape of exclusive prescription and to secure that the selection is made with the utmost care so as to avoid undue patronage. Inspecting officers have been instructed to refrain from recommending any books to the teachers of primary schools for selection and in giving advice to district boards in the matter of selection of text-books, to bear in mind that the system of exclusive prescription should be discouraged.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 3 and 4.

THE AMENDED DRAFT FINANCIAL STATEMENT.*

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler presented the amended draft Financial Statement for Bengal for 1919-20 :—

* This statement was identical with the Revised Financial Statement as presented to the Council on the 13th March, 1919, except for one or two alterations which will be found in the Memorandum accompanying that statement.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

He said :—" My Lord, I have the honour to present the Amended Draft Financial Statement for the year 1919-1920.

Hon'ble Members are already in possession of the papers, together with a copy of the Civil Budget Estimates, and my remarks may, therefore, be brief. It will be noticed that the Statement has been prepared in a somewhat different form from that followed in previous years. On the occasion of the last budget I mentioned that the form then in use seemed susceptible of improvement, and, after examination of the Financial Statements as presented in other provinces, we prepared our Statement for the approaching year in the form in which it now appears. The changes are designed to make for clearness, so as to enable Hon'ble Members to grasp easily the salient features of the accounts. The memorandum by myself which appears at the beginning of the Statement mentions briefly the most noticeable points in connection with the opening balance and revised estimates of the current year and the budget estimates of the ensuing year. It endeavours to set forth the major variations in tabulated statements of fairly simple form, and in the text it makes mention of individual features of importance. Then follows in Part II a more detailed note by Mr. Donald which, taking each major head in turn, gives further particulars regarding revenue and expenditure, each paragraph being intended to give a bird's-eye view of the position as regards each main section of the accounts. If Hon'ble Members find it easier to follow the figures and to appreciate their meaning the object of our alterations will have been achieved.

I do not propose to anticipate the remarks which will be made by the various members of Government in respect of the figures relating to individual Departments, and I will, therefore, confine myself to the more general aspects of our financial position. We started the current year with a balance which was Rs. 9,88,000 less than our expectation, but according to our revised estimates our receipts for the current year will be appreciably in excess of those for which we budgetted, while our expenditure will be noticeably less, thus leaving us at the close of the current month with a balance which is Rs. 28,70,000 better than the budget. On the receipt side we have gained heavily under the head of Excise, and to a fair extent under those of Stamps, Income Tax, Forests, Ports and Pilotage, and Miscellaneous, while on the expenditure side the most noticeable fluctuations are the large decrease under the head of Education and the large apparent increase under Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department. The latter is a normal feature of any budget, as sums provided for buildings in the departmental accounts are transferred to the Public Works head in order that the works involved may be actually executed. This fact affects the Education figures among others, but the savings in that respect are also due to the non-utilisation of grants.

In the next year's budget we anticipate still further growth of revenue under Stamps, Excise and Income Tax in particular, in comparison with the revised estimates, while in the matter of expenditure a large increase will be noticed under Education, Sanitation and Public Works. In the net result we propose, with the sanction of the Government of India, to draw on our balances to the extent of Rs. 43,79,000, mainly in order to enable us to undertake urgent public works of importance which have been deferred owing to the financial stringency of recent years. It will be observed that we have made large deductions on account of anticipated savings. These are based on past experience as to the actual spending capacity of different departments.

We expect to close the year with a balance of Rs. 3,22,23,000. Of this the major portion is practically earmarked for the particular purposes for which certain Imperial grants were given from time to time and to which effect will be given in subsequent years.

It is useless to attempt to forecast the financial future of the province since this will be so largely affected by the financial proposals of the Reform Scheme. At present these have only been outlined in the report of the Secretary of State and His Excellency the Viceroy, and presumably one of the most important tasks which will be before the Finance Department during the ensuing year will be the conversion of that sketch into the definite figures which are to be taken as the basis of the future relations between ourselves and the Government of India. The Government of India have not yet addressed us on the subject, but I imagine that they will do so in the ensuing year, when we shall have to make an examination of the figures in accordance with whatever scheme may be approved. This will not be altogether an easy business in view of the abnormal conditions of the recent years of war, but we shall do our best to see that the financial interests of the province are duly protected, and that our successors are placed in possession of all funds to which they can fairly lay claim.

Hon'ble Members will of course remember that the figures as now furnished are still only provisional and that they will not be final until the budget is finally presented. Should any Hon'ble Member desire further information on individual points the Finance Department will do its best to supply it.

I now beg to introduce the various heads of Expenditure and Revenue which are my particular concern.

The following heads call for no comment beyond the remarks which already appear in the Statement :—

Expenditure—

1. Refunds and drawbacks.
6. Stamps.

Revenue—

XII.—Interest.

XXII.—Receipts in aid of superannuation, etc.

Expenditure—

29. Superannuation allowance.

These are all obvious heads and the figures in the statement give details.

Turning to heads, Revenue V and Expenditure 7—Excise, we come to a source of revenue which is rapidly becoming one of the chief mainstays of our finance. Last year the Hon'ble Mr. Donald said that he did not expect any large increase of revenue in the current year, but events have falsified our anticipations, and the revised estimate has been enhanced by Rs. 15 lakhs, while in the budget we have taken credit for a still further rise of Rs. 9 lakhs, raising the total revenue to the large figure of Rs. 1,84 lakhs. These results are mainly due to the increased consumption of country spirit in Hooghly, Howrah, the 24-Parganas and Calcutta, and to larger issues of Indian made foreign liquor owing to the higher prices ruling for European drinks. Owing to the raising of the duty on opium an increase is also expected under that head. As a set-off against the increased consumption we have materially enhanced the duty and price of country spirit in Hooghly, Howrah, the 24-Parganas and Calcutta with effect from the 1st February. As regards the ensuing year, with a return to more normal conditions, there is little reason to forecast a diminution in revenue, and in fact, even if consumption goes down, the increased rates of duty and price should ensure a larger revenue. The fixed fee system of settlement has been introduced in the district of Midnapore, accompanied by an increase in duty with effect from the 1st April next, and in consequence larger receipts may be looked for. The trade in Indian made foreign liquors is showing a tendency to expand, and the receipts from duty on Indian made tinctures in bonded laboratories are also likely to increase. The tree tax system on tari palms, which has been productive of such favourable results in Madras in particular, has been a success in Hooghly and Howrah, and should result in a larger yield of revenue.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

Expenditure on the department shows a tendency to increase, which is not an unnatural consequence of the growth of revenue. The Statement mentions one or two details of interest in this respect.

The next item on my list is—

Expenditure—

10.—Income-Tax,

which both in the revised and in the budget estimate exhibits an increase. This is the inevitable consequence of the introduction of the Super Tax Act VIII of 1917 and the new Income-Tax Act VII of 1918, which have materially added to the work of the department, coincident with the large increase in revenue which has been derived from this head in recent years. Assessment of income-tax is now far more complicated than it used to be, and we have had to add to the establishment noticeably in Calcutta where the bulk of the income-tax is collected.

Turning to Jails—

XVIB—Revenue, and

19B—Expenditure,

the budget both under revenue and expenditure shows a decrease in comparison with the revised of approximately Rs. 3 lakhs. For this result the sub-head 'jail manufactures' is mainly responsible. With the cessation of the war our supplies to the Military Department are bound to diminish with a consequent reduction under the cost of manufacture. During the war the Army Department indented on our jails very largely for various articles which they manufacture. On the other hand it is hoped that, with a return to more normal conditions, the expense of keeping prisoners, which has been greatly enhanced in these days of high prices, will be reduced.

We next come to the head—

Police—

XVII—Revenue.

20.—Expenditure.

The revenue figures call for little remark except in so far as the transfer of the control of hackney carriages in Calcutta from the Corporation to the Police will swell the receipts from fees and fines leviable under the relevant Acts, and it should be noted that the receipts from hackney carriages and motor cars will practically meet the expenditure involved in the maintenance of the administrative department. This is worth remembering, as the Finance Committee remarked that the expenses of the Department seem to be rather high. The reason is that we hope to get a more efficient department under better control. And, of course, it is not a department from which we want to make money. If the receipts from hackney carriages and motors cover the expenses there will not be any very reasonable ground for complaint. On the expenditure side the revised estimate of the current year shows, on the face of it, a decrease of Rs. 7,40,000 as compared with the budget, but the saving is more apparent than real as, of the difference, Rs. 5,75,000 has been transferred to the Public Works Department on account of works in course of completion. The budget estimate for 1919-20 is rather over Rs. 3 lakhs in excess of the revised estimate for the current year, although some Rs. 4 lakhs less than the budget estimate for 1918-19, though here again, as against the apparent saving, it is to be noted that expenditure in connection with the schemes of reorganisation in Eastern Bengal, which was previously met in the departmental budget from the special assignment made by the Government of India in this respect, will in future appear in the Public Works budget, the special assignment having been exhausted. This will now be dealt with as ordinary works under the Public Works head, whereas previously we were working against the special assignment granted by the Government of India to the old Government of Eastern Bengal in pursuance of the reorganization scheme. The important new items in next year's budget are mostly to be found in connection with the Calcutta Police. It has been found necessary to raise the pay of European inspectors and sergeants, as recruits otherwise find superior attractions elsewhere, while the development of street traffic in this city has necessitated a larger expenditure on the staff maintained for its control. A glance at the streets, even, outside Government House, would show the congestion which now exists and the difficulty of handling the traffic. The item of Rs. 40,000 on account of the public vehicles department is counterbalanced, as I have already mentioned, by corresponding receipts, while the provision for a new launch is not in reality a fresh outlay, but in substitution for a launch commandeered by the military authorities for which we shall in due course receive compensation. Since the war the Army Department took away from us a good many launches. They were paid for, so we did not lose over the transaction, but of course new launches have to be found in their place. In respect of the district executive force the large entries in the matter of the reserve of head-constables and constables, and the improvement of the pay of the head-constables are really in continuation of similar provision during the current year; in other words, they are no novel departures, but the addition of a new company to the Dacca Military Police accounts for an appreciable increase under the sub-head 'Special Police.' The duties of the Military Police are scattered over a large area of the province and the existing force is inadequate; hence this increase.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The figures of the Medical Department—Revenue XXA and Expenditure 24A—would at first glance give the appearance of steady jogging along on customary lines. But in reality we look forward during the ensuing year to the initiation of various important schemes for which provision is made in the Public Works budget. In particular I would instance the following :—

	Rs.
The Hygiene Institute attached to the Tropical Medical School	1,00,000 (It has previously been mentioned that towards this scheme we have been promised a grant from the Research Committee).
New medical school at Burdwan	1,00,000

Sir Henry Wheeler : Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Rs.

New nurses' quarters at the Medical College,
Calcutta	6,30,000 (A large portion of this is for the purchase of land).
New Eye Hospital at the Medical College,
Calcutta	2,00,000 (This is the beginning of the rather heavy expenditure which the whole scheme will involve).

Each of these items holds out good prospects of useful development, and it is a ground for satisfaction that we can at last see our way to making a commencement with them. It must be within the recollection of Hon'ble Members that this new Eye Hospital and the Hygiene Institute have been frequently mentioned in this Council in recent years. But it is only now that we have been able to make a beginning with them and I hope that good results will follow. The Hygiene Institute is a new departure, and is really the completion of the general scheme connected with the Tropical School. The new medical school at Burdwan will afford increased facilities for medical education which we have been pressed so often to provide; the new nurses' quarters at the Medical College, though unfortunately expensive, are a necessary preliminary to the further development of that great institution, while the new Eye Hospital is a long-pending want which I am only too glad to be able now to begin to meet. In all these respects we are making distinct advances under the head 'Medical,' and while many other demands await our attention, and can on their merits be pressed—there are many excellent and laudable pending schemes if money could be found for them—I think it will be admitted that, compatibly with other demands upon us, we have endeavoured to recognise the importance of this branch of the administration.

As regards Stationery and Printing—Revenue—XXIII and Expenditure 30—the most annoying feature is the rise in the price of paper, etc., which involves us in additional outlay. The construction of the new Secretariat Press has rather hung fire. We hope to make a beginning on the site already acquired and to push on with the work next year.

The head 'Miscellaneous' Revenue XXV and Expenditure 32—presents no very novel features. The revised estimate of receipts of the current year is abnormal owing to the inclusion of the sale-proceeds—I think it was 3 lakhs—of the Amherst Street Police Hospital, though as against this we have the cost of the new building which will shortly be under construction. Under expenditure we save Rs. 1,50,000 by the dissolution of the Publicity Board, though the unfavourable agricultural conditions are reflected in the provision of Rs. 75,000 for gratuitous relief."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, introduced the following heads :—

Expenditure—

19A.—Courts of Law.

24B.—Sanitation.

Revenue—

XXXI.—Civil works in charge of Civil officers.

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Expenditure—

45.—Civil Works in charge of Civil officers.

He said :—“ My Lord, I rise to introduce the figures relating to Courts of Law. The total budget estimate for 1918-19 was Rs. 1,01,75,000, but the revised estimate was raised to Rs. 1,04,20,000. The increase is chiefly due to larger payment of fees to Counsel and pleaders in connection with both civil suits and criminal cases

The total expenditure for 1919-20 has been estimated at Rs. 1,04,35,000. This includes an enhanced provision of Rs. 1,35,000, under the head ‘ Process-serving establishment ’, to meet the cost of the war bonus recently sanctioned for menials, and a lump provision of Rs. 1,25,000 for the improvement of the pay of the officers of the Provincial Judicial Service, besides a provision of Rs. 14,724 for the appointment of a Seventh Judge in the Calcutta Small Cause Court and his establishment ; it also includes Rs. 24,000 for additional establishment for the reorganization of the record-room of the High Court, Appellate Side.

As the Jury system has been extended this year to 12 more districts, a provision of Rs. 60,000 has been made for payment of allowances to Jurors, as against Rs. 41,645 in the budget for 1918-19. Provision for six temporary Subordinate Judges and six temporary Munsifs with their establishments have been made in the budget for 1919-20, as the existing provision for Subordinate Judges and Munsifs with their establishments proved inadequate for administrative requirements, and money had to be reappropriated from other heads during the year. Provision has also been made for the Additional Legal Remembrancer and his establishment as the term of his appointment has been provisionally extended.

A provision of Rs. 1,74,500 has been made for Judicial major works which will provide for Additional Sessions and Munsif's Courts at Bogra, a civil court at Burdwan and residences for the Additional Sessions Judge and four Munsifs at Bogra, four Munsifs at Satkhira and three at Bagerhat in the Khulna district, and Rs. 50,000 for minor works has been made in the Provincial Civil Works Budget for the year 1919-20.

I beg now to introduce for the consideration of the Council the figures relating to Sanitation.

The expenditure for the current year was originally estimated at Rs. 11,71,000 and has now been reduced to Rs. 9,04,000. A large portion of the decrease is more apparent than real, for a sum of Rs. 1,90,000 has been transferred to the Irrigation Department in order to enable it to execute anti-malarial schemes that appear in the Sanitary Department programme, but for carrying out which the agency of the Public Works Department has to be utilized. As regards the budget for next year the figures alone will show how anxious we are to embark on a forward policy in the campaign against disease. The total provision is Rs. 18,66,000, or more than double the amount provided for in the revised estimate for the current year. The sanitary schemes shown on page 83 of the draft Financial Statement alone involve a total cost of Rs. 13,70,000, a figure which exceeds the Imperial assignment for sanitary work by over 4 lakhs. Of this amount a little over a lakh and a quarter is for various recurring charges, the most noticeable item being the very largely enhanced provision for quinine grants, which stands at half a lakh. Altogether 7½ lakhs have been provided for sanitary engineering works, mainly drainage and water-supply, and it will be seen that Rs. 3 lakhs has been provided for beginning the Dacca Sewerage scheme, a most important and long pending project towards the execution of which Government has promised a grant of Rs. 25 lakhs but which it has not hitherto been possible to take in hand. Then we have approximately 5 lakhs specially allotted for anti-malarial works carried out either entirely or partially at the cost of Government. Considerable sums are allotted for works that appeared in this year's programme and three new schemes are now provided for, viz., the Amta and Bhairab Drainage schemes, both large and important projects, which will be taken up by the District Boards under the Bengal Sanitary Drainage Act, and the Ghaghat scheme which will benefit Rangpur. A beginning is to be made with a publicity bureau for the education of the general public in matters of public health—details will be found on page 76 of the Financial Statement. Special provision has been made for research work, Rs. 36,000 being set apart for an investigation into river pollution and a survey of kala-azar, while Rs. 75,000 is set aside for the campaign against hook-worm disease, which, as Hon'ble Members may remember, formed the subject of an address recently delivered by His Excellency at a meeting held at Government House."

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan : Mr. Cumming.

I beg also to introduce the figures relating to Civil Works in charge of Civil Officers.

The budget estimate of receipts for the current year was Rs. 1,58,000, but in the revised estimate this has been reduced to Rs. 1,40,000 mainly with reference to actuals for the first nine months of the year. The budget estimate for 1919-20 is Rs. 1,69,000.

As regards expenditure, the decrease of Rs. 66,000 in the revised estimate is the result of a new provision of Rs. 40,000 for grants to District Boards by Commissioners of Divisions set off against a decrease of Rs. 1,07,000 under grants to Municipalities by those officers. As explained last year, the latter reduction is due to the fact that the grants made by the Divisional Commissioner for educational and medical purposes are debited to those heads instead of to the head Civil Works by reappropriation to this head.

The estimate for 1919-20 is Rs. 15,64,000 of which details for Rs. 14,31,114 are given in paragraph 49 of the Financial Statement."

He said :—My lord, I have the honour to introduce the main heads under ‘Land Revenue’ and its connected subjects. The Financial Statement has been prepared in such detail that few remarks are required from me.

As regards receipts under the head ‘Land Revenue’ it will be observed that the estimate has been prepared on the assumption, and with the fervent hope, that the year 1919 will be a normal agricultural year. On the expenditure side the budget estimate is three lakhs in excess of the revised estimate for the current year. Provision has been made for a further increase in the number of Circle officers, regarding the appointment of which reference was made last year. The expenditure under ‘General Administration’ represents a normal expansion.

In the case of the Forest Department the increase of revenue which was due primarily to the demand for railway sleepers for military purposes seems likely to continue for civil requirements. The proposed expenditure represents a normal increase. The administration of the Forest Department in the existing Presidency of Bengal since 1902 furnishes a net profit which has varied from a little over five lakhs to a little under ten lakhs.

Turning now to the Registration Department we find that the income during the last two years has been somewhat checked. On the expenditure side it is proposed to make provision for an improvement in the prospects of the clerks in the rural offices and also for a portion of the reorganisation of the gazetted staff, which was sanctioned by the Secretary of State.

The general head ‘Agriculture’ covers the subsidiary heads of the Veterinary Department, the Co-operative Credit Department and the Agricultural Department proper. Under the two latter heads considerable advance is being made in accordance with a policy of steady expansion. In the case of the Agricultural Department the extension consists in the increase of District Agricultural farms, District Agricultural officers and seed stores, and in the extension of the distribution of selected seed, while under the head of Mr. Cumming; Mr. Cowley.

Co-operative Credit a similar advance has been made in the obligations which the State has undertaken for the purposes of propaganda and control.

Under the head 'Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments' it will be noticed that provision has been made for the extension of Cinchona Plantations in the Darjeeling Hills.

I also beg to introduce the subject 'Ports and Pilotage' under the Marine Department. In addition to the information given in the Statement I need only add that an important matter which is receiving the consideration of Government is the financing of the improvement works for the Port of Chittagong, including the purchase of dredging plant, as recommended by Sir George Buchanan in the report which he submitted under the direction of the Government of India. During the present year a grant of one lakh in addition to a recurring grant of one and-a-half lakh has been sanctioned and the Government of India have agreed to contribute four lakhs next year. A financial programme on the basis of grants and loans is being prepared in consultation with the Port Commissioners of Chittagong for executing a complete works programme within a definite number of years."

He said :— " My Lord, I have the honour to introduce for the consideration of Council the Public Works heads of the Budget entitled 'Irrigation—Major Works, XXIX—Receipts and 42—Expenditure and Minor Works and Navigation, XXX—Receipts and 43—Expenditure.'

The Major Works with which we have to deal in this Presidency are the Midnapur and Hijli Tidal Canals. In regard to these, I have nothing to add to the statements which have been made under this head in paragraphs 44 and 45 of the amended draft Financial Statement. In regard to the head 'Minor

Mr. Cowley.

Works and Navigation', which is more important in its effect upon the Provincial Revenues, the chief sources of revenue are the tolls received from navigation on the Calcutta Canals, the Sunderbans route and the Madaripur Bil Canal which together form the navigable route for boats and inland steamers between Calcutta and Eastern Bengal. By the construction of a regulating bund to the south and east of the Madaripur Bil Canal, the financial prospects of the Canal which at one time was maintained at a loss to Government, have been improved; so that the project is likely to prove remunerative and to fulfil all the conditions of a Productive Public Work. The recent improvements by dredging in the Lower Kumar river have also been successful; the whole route is now an efficient navigable channel. In this respect, I have nothing to add to the statement made in paragraph 46 of the amended draft Financial Statement.

In regard to the estimates of expenditure under this head I have to refer to the statement made in paragraph 47 of the draft Financial Statement. I may state that the increased provision under 'Capital Expenditure, Madaripur Bil Canal' has been made in the Budget of 1919-20 to enable this Government to start with the scheme for widening of the Madaripur Bil Canal, which has become a matter of urgent necessity owing to the heavy increase in the steamer and barge traffic through the Canal, which is the main artery between Eastern Bengal and Calcutta.

The efforts of Government are largely expended in the conservation and improvement of waterways, i.e., navigable waterways. Inextricably bound up with this question is that of the drainage of the hinterland immediately beyond the reach of the tidal influence and in the upper reaches where tidal influence is felt. We are collecting data to enable us to deal effectually with the whole problem of river improvement.

An example of a project of this nature and one on which we have now been working for some years is the improvement of the Bidyadhari river, and for this a sum of Rs. 2,10,000 has been provided for expenditure during 1919-20.

By extending the tidal spill of the river and training the river by means of groins to obtain a narrow and deep channel, we have succeeded in improving the condition of the river both from the drainage and navigation points of view.

We are also continuing the measures already started for mitigating the effects of the Damodar floods; the exit channels of these floods have been and are being improved, and a scheme for construction of controlling reservoirs has been partly worked up. In this connection I may add that the services of the special officer placed at the disposal of this Government for a period of 18 months have been extended for another year, so that he may be in a position to complete the whole project.

A provision of Rs. 3,16,000 has been made for these remedial measures in the budget estimate for 1919-20, and in connection with the Damodar Reservoir Scheme a sum of Rs. 20,000 has been provided for the further investigation of sites for reservoirs in the Damodar Catchment; the investigations carried out during the year 1918-19 have proved the necessity for the construction of a second reservoir in the valley of the river Damodar apart from and in addition to that proposed on the river Barakar. A sum of Rs. 2,50,000 has been provided in the Irrigation Budget for two large drainage projects, namely, the Amirabad and Pachaboni project in the Contai Subdivision and the Bulli Bil project in the 24-Parganas. The former is the first contribution towards the major Hijli Drainage Scheme.

Mr. Cowley : Mr. Kerr.

In regard to measures of anti-malarial drainage we have devoted special attention and care to working up projects and the following measures have been started :—

The Arool Bil Project,
The Jaboona Project,
The Nawi Sunti Project,
The Saraswati improvement project,
Baragachia Project,
Monikhally Project,

and the Banka project has been completed : these are all in the Presidency and Burdwan Divisions. Surveys are continuing and new projects being developed.

I have also to introduce for the consideration of the Council the Budget for Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department.

On the receipt side I have nothing to add to the remarks in the amended draft Financial Statement.

The increase of Rs. 40,000 under Establishment in the ensuing year's Budget is necessary chiefly on account of the reversion of several officers from Military duty. After providing for Establishment and Repairs and for the completion of works which will be in progress on the 1st April, there is a sum of over twenty-five lakhs left for new major works the distribution of which is shown on page 52 of the Statement and five lakhs for new minor works distributed amongst all Departments."

The Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said :—

"My Lord, the provision for district partition schemes appears in the Public Works Department budget, but it may be useful if I give a few words of explanation on behalf of the Political Department regarding the present position of the schemes. Last year, as I told the Council, the position in regard to Midnapore was that the Secretary of State had accepted the general principle of the scheme and authorised preliminary work in the way of brick-burning. In August last, he accorded formal sanction to the scheme and we are now in a position to proceed with building operations, subject to such technical or professional sanction as may be necessary to the individual building estimates under the rules of the Public Works Department Code. Work has been greatly hampered by the shortage of building materials and also by the shortage of staff in the Public Works Department owing to the deputation of officers to military duty. We hope that these difficulties will decrease to some extent during the coming year and that we shall be able to complete some of the more important buildings.

In the case of Mymensingh, the complete scheme was submitted to the Government of India last August. The Secretary of State has sanctioned the acquisition of land, which is now in progress and will we hope be completed before the end of this month. The Secretary of State's sanction to the scheme as a whole is still awaited, but we have every reason to hope that it will soon be received and that we shall be able to make a start on the buildings next cold weather.

While we hope to make substantial progress with both the schemes next year, there are the difficulties regarding shortage of staff and material and there is also the fact that formal sanction to the Mymensingh scheme has not yet been received. We have, therefore, thought it right to budget with caution, and the total amount provided for partition schemes in the budget for 1919-20 is only 7 lakhs."

Mr. Wordsworth.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth introduced the following heads :—

Revenue—

XIX.—Education.

Expenditure—

22. Education.

He said :—

“ My Lord, I have the honour to introduce for the consideration of the Council the heads of Revenue and Expenditure of the Education Department.

Revenue.—On the receipts side of the budget there is nothing deserving of remark except that receipts are steadily increasing. From Rs. 8,86,574 in 1915-16, they have risen to an estimate of Rs. 10,29,000 for the next financial year. The increase is due to larger collections on account of fees from Government Colleges and Schools, General.

Expenditure.—Till 1914-15, the Education budget shewed uninterrupted growth and progress. But the abnormal conditions induced by the War checked progress and it took some time to recover lost ground. It is however satisfactory to note that expenditure on education has now not only attained its former figure but is rising beyond it. The figures on page 30 of the Financial Statement explain the situation.

The sanctioned budget for the current financial year stood at Rs. 1,03,01,000. From what has been spent during the first nine months of the year, it is anticipated that the expenditure during the year will fall short of the sanctioned estimate. The deficit in the expenditure is due to—

- (1) non-utilisation in full of the Imperial grants, as certain of the proposed schemes have been sanctioned only in part,
- (2) transfer of money to the Public Works Department for educational works,
- (3) deputation to military duty of several officers of the Department, with consequent saving of salaries and house allowances,
- (4) stoppage of the payment of exchange compensation allowance,
- (5) impossibility of recruiting officers for the Indian Educational Service, and
- (6) decrease in contingent expenditure on account of the economy enforced by war conditions.

The budget for the year in prospect has been placed at Rs. 97,86,000, a figure below the sanctioned estimate for the current financial year, but in advance of the revised estimate by Rs. 12,86,000. The final budget figure has been kept down by allowing large deductions for probable savings and rounding. In reality, the budget provides for a much larger expenditure than the final figure would seem to warrant, insomuch as deductions have been made from totals, but not from detailed heads.

Many new items are included in the programme of educational expenditure for next year. These are fully explained in the Financial Statement on pages 70-72.

Mr. Wordsworth.

Besides the expenditure proposed under the main head, an amount of Rs. 1,95,000 will be spent by the Public Works Department on original building works of the Department. Details of these works will be found on page 52 of the Financial Statement.

“The education portion of the Civil estimates presented along with the Financial Statement is novel in some respects. A word of explanation may be useful in reference to the arrangement and grouping of heads observed in the present estimates. Certain detailed and sub-heads, unauthorised by the Government of India, had crept into the budget and the accounts of the Department. These unnecessary heads have now been removed or combined with other heads, the existing sub-heads being in certain cases suitably re-named. For example, the head ‘Arts Colleges’ includes ‘Arts Colleges for Boys’ and ‘Arts College for Girls,’ the head ‘Secondary Schools, English’ includes ‘High Schools for Boys,’ ‘High Schools for Girls,’ ‘Middle English Schools for Boys’ and ‘Middle English Schools for Girl’.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what action, if any, has been taken on it?

(c) Is it a fact—

(i) that the strength of the upper division is not sufficient to cope with the work, and that a fairly large number of the lower division assistants are actually employed to do the work without proper remuneration;

(ii) that many deserving assistants in the lower division who entered the Secretariat long before the re-organization scheme of 1910 and have put in a qualifying service of 15 years or more, are still in the grade of Rs. 70 or Rs. 80 and have not yet been promoted to the upper division; and

(iii) that many outsiders who have been appointed direct to the upper division do not possess the necessary office experience or better educational qualifications and in most cases do routine work?

(d) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of candidates who appeared at the clerkship examination for admission into the lower grade of the Bengal Secretariat during the years 1916, 1917 and 1918, as well as the number of vacancies which occurred in those years?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) It was held that the lower division clerks had no cause for complaint, except that in the case of two Departments orders passed in 1910 regarding the promotion of such clerks to the upper division had not been fully adhered to. Steps have been taken to remedy this grievance.

cost of primary education in the United Kingdom.

Will the Government be pleased to state what proportion of the cost of primary education controlled or provided by local bodies in England, Wales, Scotland and Ireland is contributed by the State in those parts of the United Kingdom, respectively, so far as such information is available to the Government?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"On the average of the five pre-war years 46·9 per cent. of the total expenditure on elementary education in England and Wales was from Parliamentary grants. Statistics for the war years are not available since the compilation of statistics in England and Wales was suspended during the war. For comparative purposes, therefore, the five pre-war years have been taken in the case of Scotland and Ireland. Expenditure from Parliamentary grants for education in Scotland during this period was 54·2 per cent. of the total expenditure by School Boards. It is not possible to say how much of this was on "elementary" as opposed to "secondary" schools, both of which are, in accordance with the Education Act of 1872, under School Boards. In Ireland the expenditure by the Commissioners of National Education from Parliamentary grants in the same quinquennial period was 84·9 per cent. This latter figure excludes 3·5 per cent. which is provided for the erection and maintenance of school houses provided for in the vote of the Board of Works."

UNSTARRED QUESTIONS.

(Answers to which were laid on the table.)

By the Hon'ble Babu Brojendra Kishor Ray Chaudhuri:—

education in England.

(a) With reference to the observations made by the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell, in connection with the discussion of the budget in April, 1915, in which he expressed his anxiety to overhaul the whole system of primary education, will the Government be pleased to state what progress, if any, has since been made in the matter, and when the whole question is likely to be referred to a "large committee" as foreshadowed by Mr. Hornell in his said speech?

(b) Has Mr. Hornell drawn up any programme in this connection?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"(a) The reorganization of the system of primary education involves a number of reforms such as—

- (1) the improvement of the pay and prospects of teachers,
- (2) the training of teachers,
- (3) the establishment of more primary schools and the proper maintenance and equipment of those already established, and
- (4) the revision of the curriculum.

Progress has been impeded by financial exigencies imposed by the war, but during the quinquennium ending in 1917-18 the pay of trained teachers in aided primary schools and maktabs for boys was increased by Rs. 6 a month with the help of Imperial grants and that of untrained teachers by Re. 1 a month. An allotment has since been made from the 5½ lakhs grant to enable local bodies to raise the stipends of untrained teachers to Rs. 2 a month where they are below that figure. The stipends of gurus under training have been raised to Rs. 10 a month and a comprehensive scheme for training teachers has been prepared which will require the sanction of the Secretary of State. A scheme for establishing a lower primary school of an improved type in each panchayati union has been held in abeyance owing to financial stringency, but will now be resumed : it is hoped shortly to establish 120 schools of this class. As regards maintenance and equipment, arrangements have been made for district boards undertaking the annual repair of Board primary schools, Government contributing two-thirds of the cost, and about 50 per cent of the existing primary schools have been furnished with additional equipment. A survey of primary education both in Calcutta and the districts has been carried out; and a revised curriculum has been prepared, which it is proposed to publish for criticism. It is not at present proposed to convene a committee

(b) Mr. Hornell, who has been on deputation since the latter part of 1917, had a definite plan of action but did not submit a programme to Government."

2.

(a) Are the Government aware that there is, in Bengal, a particular class of people who practise with remarkable success an indigenous system of treatment, and supply nurses, in small-pox cases?

Indigenous system of treatment of small-pox.

(b) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the action recently taken by the District Board of Mymensingh in announcing rewards and prizes to these men for their encouragement and for promotion of the system of treatment they practise?

(c) Is it a fact that the number of these men has been decreasing in recent years?

(d) Are the Government considering the desirability of taking steps to insure that the above indigenous system of treatment of small-pox largely availed of by the people, particularly in rural areas, and often with very good results, may not die out for want of support?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"(a) Government have made inquiry as to the facts relative to the Mymensingh district. It is said that there exists there a class of people called tikadars who nurse small-pox patients, but it is not clear that these persons possess or even claim to possess an indigenous system of treatment.

(b) and (c) In November last the Mymensingh District Board resolved to allot a sum of Rs. 2,000, in the budget for 1919-20, for rewards to persons credibly reported to have nursed small-pox patients. The sanitation committee of the Board had expressed the opinion that it was desirable to prevent the class of tikadars from dying out.

(d) The information available does not permit of a definite answer; further inquiry will be made."

3.

(a) Are the Government in a position to make a statement showing how far the utilisation by the people of water-hyacinth for manurial and commercial purposes has helped to check the spread of the plant in the water-courses of Eastern Bengal?

Spread of water-hyacinth in Eastern Bengal

(b) Is it a fact that Mr. R. S. Finlow, Fibre Expert, Government of Bengal, is of opinion that the low grade ash of water-hyacinth growing in shallow water cannot benefit either the producer or the buyer?

(c) Is it also a fact that the low grade ash has only a restricted use as a manure and that Messrs. Shaw, Wallace & Co. are not prepared to take water-hyacinth ash containing less than 15 per cent. of potash?

(d) If so, how do the Government propose to deal with the problem of checking the spread of water-hyacinth?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) It is too early to make any definite pronouncement on the subject. On inquiry it is, however, found that a considerable and increasing quantity of the plant is being used by the people for manure and fodder for cattle and also as fuel.

(b) Mr. R. S. Finlow, Fibre Expert to this Government, is of opinion that for commercial purposes the production of low grade ash will be unprofitable, but that for manurial purposes on the part of the producer or his immediate neighbours it is of value commensurate with its potash content.

(c) As to the first part of the question the Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to question (b). The answer to the second part is in the affirmative.

(d) The question assumes that, because the low grade ash has only a restricted use, the problem of checking the spread of water-hyacinth is seriously affected thereby. This is not the case, as experiments show that a considerable proportion of the plant is capable of yielding an ash of sufficiently good quality for commercial purposes; moreover, a simple process has been evolved for extracting the potash in the form of crystals.

The fact that low grade ash has only a restricted use is also not an undesirable drawback; for it is obvious that, if the ash were too profitable there would be a tendency to cultivate the plant rather than to exterminate it.

At present it is considered that the best method of checking the spread of the pest is the extended destruction and utilisation of the plant by the people for (i) manure, (ii) fuel, (iii) fodder and (iv) the manufacture of ash.

The Public Works Department of this Government are taking steps to root out the plant gradually from all canals or khangs maintained by Government or declared under the Canals or Embankment Act. Some of the District Boards are also co-operating in the matter of extermination.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“This Government have no information on the subject.”

5.

With reference to my unstarred question No. 16 asked at the meeting of the Council on the 18th February last, inquiring as to whether Government have addressed the district boards for the purpose of ascertaining which among them desire to have non-official chairmen, are the Government aware that the Government of Bihar and Orissa have addressed the district boards in the matter?

Collection of opinions of district boards as to which of them desire non-official chairmen.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"The reply is in the negative. As stated in the reply to question No. 16 asked at the meeting of the Council on 18th February, 1919, Government are considering the question of extending the system of elected non-official chairmen of district boards; and it is hoped to make an announcement on the subject shortly."

Are the Government aware of the procedure by which, under rule 13 of the United Provinces Legislative Council Rules, a committee of official and non-official members of the Council is appointed to consider and recommend legislation on any particular subject, before a Bill is formally introduced into the Legislative Council of the United Provinces?

Procedure under rule 13 of the United Provinces Legislative Council Rules regarding appointment of a committee to consider legislation.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"Rule 13 of the United Provinces rules for the conduct of business empowers the President of the Council to appoint a committee of members of the Council for the consideration of any question of public interest on which legislation is proposed or likely to be required, and also to appoint a chairman of such committee."

The procedure for the appointment of such committee and of the chairman of such committee appears to be for the President to announce these appointments at a meeting of the Legislative Council."

Wholesale and retail prices of Rangoon rice.

- (b) (i) What quantities of the said rice have been imported into Calcutta, since its wholesale price was fixed;
- (ii) how much thereof has been exported beyond the limits of Bengal; and
- (iii) how much of the same has been supplied to the different districts

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

Outbreak of dacoities.

10.

(a) Is it a fact that there has been recently an unusual outbreak of dacoities in certain parts of the province?

(b) Is it also a fact that an unusually large number of dacoities has been committed in the district of Bogra during recent months? If so, what special measures have been adopted for preventing and detecting such crimes in the said district, and with what results?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) Yes. 753 cases of dacoity were reported in 1918, against 525 in 1917. The increase is most noticeable in the districts of Bogra, Rajshahi, Dinajpur, Pabna, Bakarganj, Hooghly, Birbhum, Murshidabad and Nadia.

(b) Yes. Twenty-seven cases of dacoity were reported in the Bogra district during the last half of the year 1918, against seven cases during the corresponding period of 1917.

The following special measures have been taken to deal with the outbreak in this district, viz. :—

- (i) An extra Assistant Superintendent of Police was posted there in January last.
- (ii) Special police patrols have been introduced with the assistance of an extra force of sub-inspectors and constables.
- (iii) Four officers of the Criminal Investigation Department are assisting in the investigation of the cases.

Several specific cases have been detected and it is believed that the gangs responsible for the outbreak have been traced. Since the introduction of these special measures, the number of cases has decreased."

Will the Government be pleased to state—

- (i) the names of the journalists who have been dealt with under the provisions of the Defence of India (Criminal Law Amendment) Act, 1915, up to the 31st January, 1919, and

Action against journalists under Act
IV of 1915.

- (ii) the reasons for taking action in each case?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"Orders under the Defence of India Rules have been passed in respect of 22 persons who were journalists by profession, but in 13 of these cases the reasons for the orders were not connected with the journalistic activities of the persons concerned. Government do not consider it advisable in the public interests to give the names of the individuals, or the detailed reasons for the action taken. In each case the Local Government were satisfied that there were reasonable grounds for believing that the individual in respect of whom the order was passed had acted, was acting or was about to act in a manner prejudicial to the public safety."

Registers of water-supply.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"Government regret that they are unable to comply with the request owing to the undue amount of labour which would be involved in making copies of the registers for all districts. The registers, for instance, of the 24 Parganas alone are contained in 38 volumes."

Relaxation of the rule re contribution of one-third of the cost of water-supply.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether the rule insisting on the contribution of a third of the cost of works on water-supply has been relaxed? If not, why not?

(b) Is the number of cases in which the rule has been so relaxed small? If so, are the Government considering the advisability of impressing on the district boards the necessity of taking adequate measures for the supply of pure drinking-water in the rural areas on an extensive scale, in view of the fact that the funds of the district boards have at present been augmented by the surrender of the Public Works cess?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) In circular No. 15 L.S.-G., dated 17th February, 1917 of which a copy is laid on the table, it was made clear that there is no rule or order of Government requiring the local public to contribute one-third of the cost of improving the water-supply in rural areas.

(b) The question does not arise.”

Circular referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley to question No. 14 (unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble Babu SIV NARAYAN MUKHARJI at the Council meeting of the 13th March, 1919.

Circular No. 15 L.S.-G., dated Calcutta, the 17th February, 1917.

From—L. S. S. O'MALLEY, Esq., I.C.S., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Municipal Department,

To—All Commissioners of Divisions.

In continuation of the correspondence ending with Circular No. 13 L.S.-G., dated the 12th March, 1917, on the subject of expenditure on water-supply by District Boards, I am directed to forward a copy of a question asked and of the answer given to it at the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council held on the 23rd January, 1917.

2. In circular No. 12 T.—M., dated the 20th May, 1904, Government made a promise that it would contribute a third of the cost of improving the water-supply in rural areas subject to a maximum of Rs. 5,000 for any one district and of Rs. 50,000 for the whole province, provided that the District Boards contributed one-third of the cost and the public another third. The condition that the public should contribute one-third of the cost before a Government grant was made was withdrawn in Eastern Bengal by Government letter No. 4945 M., dated the 20th July, 1908, to the Secretary, Sanitary Board, Eastern Bengal and Assam, in which it was stated that the grant placed at the disposal of the Sanitary Board for the improvement of the water-supply in rural areas should be allotted under such agreements as to private contributions as they might find practicable and suitable to local conditions. In West Bengal the condition was withdrawn in Circular No. 16 T.—L.S.-G., dated the 4th October, 1911, in which Government agreed to contribute one-third of the expenditure incurred by District Boards in any one year on the improvement of the local water-supply subject to a maximum of Rs. 3,000 in each case, irrespective of the amount contributed by the public. It was at the same time explained that the expenditure of the District Boards should supplement and not supersede local efforts. Subsequently the District Funds were considerably augmented by the surrender of the Public Works cess, and it was accordingly announced in resolution No. 228 L.S.-G., dated the 24th January, 1914, that Government would in future give no special grants for the improvement of water supply in rural areas as the District Boards should have no difficulty in providing sufficient funds for the purpose.

3. I am to request that you will make it clear to District Boards in your division that there is no rule or order of Government requiring that the local public should contribute one-third of the cost of improving the water-supply. It is left to the discretion of the District Boards to decide what contribution the public should make, but as stated in Circular No. 16 T.—L.S.-G., dated the 4th October, 1911, the idea should not be allowed to gain ground that the need for local co-operation has disappeared.

[4. A copy of Circular No. 16 T.—L.S.-G. dated the 4th October, 1911, is enclosed.]

missioners only.

Question asked and the answer given to it at the meeting of the Bengal Legislative Council held on the 23rd January, 1917.

Question.—With reference to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Nawab Sir Sy Shams-ul-Huda in the course of the debate on the rural water-supply resolution, moved in the Council by the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter in September last, are the Government considering the advisability of withdrawing the circular issued under orders of Sir Andre Fraser which insisted upon a local contribution of one-third of the total expenses of excavating tanks, etc?

Answer.—The circular of 1904 to which the Hon'ble Member refers laid down inter alia that one-third of the cost of any project for improving the supply of drinking-water in rural areas should be met from public subscriptions before a Government grant was made. This condition was withdrawn by the Government of Eastern Bengal and Assam in 1908, and by the Government of Bengal in 1911. The orders contained in the circular of 1904 applied only when grants were made by Government to District Boards for the improvement of the rural water-supply and not when District Boards spent money for this purpose without receiving a Government subvention. As there appears to be considerable misapprehension on the subject, a circular will shortly issue explaining the position.

Scheme for the erection of refuge mounds on the right side of the Damodar.

With reference to the answer to starred question No. 17 (iii) asked at the Council meeting of the 3rd July 1918, are the Government considering the advisability of developing the scheme for the erection of refuge mounds on the right side of the Damodar into a practical measure by excavating a number of tanks in the spill area, or at any rate for the present in certain important villages or centres within that area, and by utilizing the banks of these tanks to serve the purposes of refuge mounds?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

“ Government have under consideration proposals for the construction of refuge mounds on the right bank of the Damodar but not on the lines indicated in the Hon'ble Member's question.”

Statement of certain cases pending in sub-judges' courts.

Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a statement showing, district by district, the total number of suits, appeals and miscellaneous cases pending for six months and one year, respectively, in the different sub-judges' courts in the Presidency of Bengal up to December, 1918?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Duval:—

“ Statistics are not compiled of cases pending for six months and for one year. A statement showing, district by district, the total number of suits, appeals and miscellaneous cases pending for over six months and for over one year in courts of the subordinate judges in the Presidency, is laid on the table.”

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Duval:—

“ Government have no information beyond that contained in the annual reports of the High Court on the administration of Civil Justice, to which the Hon'ble Member is referred. Government are not prepared to undertake the compilation of further statistics as it would involve an amount of trouble and labour wholly incommensurate with any object to be achieved ”

DEATH OF SIR ANDREW FRASER.

The President said :—

"Hon'ble Members will wish, I think, that there should appear on the record of our proceedings some expression of our feeling of sorrow at the death of an ex-Lieutenant-Governor of this Province, Sir Andrew Fraser. Sir Andrew Fraser came to Bengal to administer the Province at a time of great difficulty. He had to face the full force of public hostility which was roused by the partition of the Province and, as Hon'ble Members will remember, his life was saved on one occasion by an act of conspicuous gallantry on the part of my Hon'ble colleague the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan. Sir Andrew Fraser consistently endeavoured to bring the non-official and the public into close touch with the Government of the Province. For example, the practice of calling in non-official members to assist in the preparation of the Budget originated with him, and it was his invariable practice, I believe, to hold conferences and informal consultations with the representatives of the public upon all measures of importance which he had in contemplation. He was a man of very strong religious proclivities and he took an enthusiastic interest in all matters of social reform. It was under his administration that the Juvenile Jail was established and it was under his auspices that the Disorderly Houses Act was passed. His interest in the cultivator found practical expression in a variety of ways. As for example the passing of the Bengal Tenancy (Amendment) Act which had for its object the securing of the interest of landlord and tenant and the protection of the tenant from undue raising of rent. Again, he was deeply interested in the Agricultural Department, the Department of Land Records, the appointment of a Director as the head of the former, and the establishment of an Agricultural College at Sabour. As I have said he came to Bengal at a time of great difficulty. He retired from this country ten years ago after five years of very strenuous labour as Lieutenant-Governor and after a total of thirty-seven years of service in India, and I cannot doubt that when the dust raised by the acute political controversy which darkened his term of office in this Province has blown aside, there will stand revealed to the impartial eye of the historian a valuable output of solid and lasting achievement."

Sir H. Wheeler.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 2.

LEGISLATIVE BUSINESS.

THE BENGAL VILLAGE SELF-GOVERNMENT BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler presented the further report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919.

He said :—

"My Lord, I beg to present the further report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Village Self-Government Bill, 1919.

The circumstances under which this Bill was recommitted to the Select Committee are fresh in the memory of the members of the Council. The only new material which the Select Committee had before it was the mass of amendments of which notice had been given in Council, and these papers, therefore, formed the basis of our further examination of the question.

The report draws attention to the important changes which we have made, and it will be seen that we started by going through the amendments which, had the Bill been taken in Council on the last occasion, would have been moved by myself. Of these we have embodied 14 in the Bill. We then went through various other amendments which, on the occasion of a previous examination of the list by the official members, seemed susceptible of acceptance without objection if the current of discussion in Council showed that feeling was in favour of them. Out of these amendments we have inserted some 16 in the Bill. Apart from that, there are two other small points in respect of which we made changes. Finally, our consideration of the amendments of which notice had been given, and the further incidental scrutiny of the papers, revealed three other points in which we thought that alterations might be made. In all, therefore, we have made 35 major changes in the Bill, and I hope to that extent the subsequent discussion of the Bill in this Council will be lightened.

The report explains most of them, and I need hardly go through them all. I would invite attention to the amendment mentioned in paragraph 2(10) which undoubtedly drew attention to a defect in the Bill, viz., the absence of any specification of the time within which notice of a desire to move for the transfer of a suit from the union bench should be given. The provision that we are now placing in the Bill is somewhat on the lines of the corresponding section of the Criminal Procedure Code. Then, in paragraph

Sir H. Wheeler.

2(13), we have endeavoured, in part, to meet an amendment of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, who desired that the income derived from all pounds and ferries within the union should be made over to the union board. Under the Cattle Trespass Act that is already permissible and we have made no change, but we have amended the Ferries Act so as to render it similarly possible for Government to make over the proceeds from ferries to the union board. In paragraph 3(b) reference is made to an amendment by which we have tried to meet a fairly widely expressed wish that, in respect of voters, the residential qualification should be made rather more elastic, though we have preserved it as originally drafted in respect of candidates. It seemed to us that it might reasonably be said that the member of a union board should be a bonâ fide resident of the area with the administration of which he has been charged, but on the other hand, a man might not have been resident within the original meaning of the draft Bill so as to entitle him to vote, whereas, owing to his interest in the union, he might reasonably be interested in the selection of his representatives.

In paragraph 3(c) we have endeavoured to make it clearer what person should vote on behalf of a joint family. The amendment accepted in paragraph 3(f) is of considerable importance, and we have practically reverted to the original position under Act VI of 1870 in respect of the appointment of daffadars. The change which the Bill contemplated, and for which there is much to be said, was the subject of some criticism by way of amendment, and on the whole we have thought it best to maintain the existing practice.

In paragraph 3(j) we have taken the opportunity of making what, I think, is an improvement in the basis of assessment, and in paragraph 3(k) we have referred to an amendment which was moved by Kumar Shibshekhareswar Ray which reduces the penalty realisable along with the arrear to half the arrear, instead of the whole which is permissible under the present Chaukidari Act. In paragraph 3(o) we have taken another amendment of the same Hon'ble Member which entails the omission of a section which was designed with the good intention of ensuring that the class of suits were instituted in the union court for which that body was intended, instead of being taken to the ordinary courts, but on further consideration, we thought that, as it appeared to be controversial and was unlikely often to be used, it might well be omitted. Otherwise, perhaps the most noticeable change we have made is in removing the authority to delegate to circle officers the power to amend an assessment list. A certain amount of wish had been expressed to that effect, which, on the whole, we thought it expedient to meet.

It will be observed that two minutes of dissent are annexed to the report. That of Babu Mahendra Nath Ray, who throughout has given us in the Select Committee much assistance in the consideration of these proposals, deals with two points, the most important of which is the question whether any statutory obligation should be laid on district boards to give financial assistance to union boards. The other note of dissent is by the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray, who, unfortunately, did not find himself able to attend our supplementary meetings, and we have therefore been unable to influence him by argument or discussion in respect of the points on which he has now put in a note of dissent.

The only other point to which I would like to invite the attention of the Council is that we propose to take up the consideration of this Bill on the 7th of April. That being so, the latest date for the filing of amendments will be 11 o'clock on the 24th March, and if Hon'ble Members still desire to move in respect of the re-amended Bill the same amendments of which they gave notice to the Bill as first examined by the Select Committee, it will be necessary to give fresh notice, because we must have a clear intimation as to how many of the amendments in that list still stand in the light of the further changes we have made in the Bill. Of course it will be quite sufficient to refer to the numbers of that list in giving this second notice."

Sir H. Wheeler.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.THE REVISED FINANCIAL STATEMENT.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler presented the Revised Financial Statement for Bengal for 1919-20.

He said :—

“My Lord, I have the honour to present the Revised Financial Statement of Bengal for the year 1919-20. Since the draft amended Financial Statement was laid before the Council, certain changes have been made in the figures, and these are dealt with in the Memorandum which I think is in the possession of Hon'ble Members. Under the instructions of the Government of India we have raised our receipts from Excise in the revised estimates for 1919-20 by Rs. 3 lakhs, all of which will come to us, and our receipts under Stamps by a like sum, of which we shall get half. So that we have benefited under those two heads to the extent of Rs. 4½ lakhs. In the Budget for the ensuing year there is a corresponding addition of Rs. 3 lakhs under the Excise head, while in respect of Income-tax certain changes contingent upon the Excess Profits Act and the exemption of small incomes, have now been inserted in the estimates.

On the expenditure side we have made some important changes, one of which, that relating to Famine Relief, affects some of the resolutions of which notice has been given to day. It will be noticed that a communiqué was issued recently improving the pay of the officers of the Imperial Police and the officers of the Indian Medical Service. In respect of these two reorganizations, we have had to make financial provision, which will entail an increase under Police of Rs. 2½ lakhs, and an increase under Medical of Rs. 1½ lakh. Under Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments we have made a further lump provision of Rs. 2 lakhs in the hope that during the coming year we may be able to make a beginning on the lines of the recommendations of the Industrial Commission—a provision which I trust will commend itself to all—while in respect of Famine Relief, the situation now being slightly worse than it was when we originally framed the Budget, we have made a further provision of Rs. 2 lakhs for relief measures, of which Rs. ½ lakh is debitable to us and the balance to Imperial. In the net result, at the end of 1919-20, our closing balance is estimated to be Rs. 3,23,23,000 in place of Rs. 3,22,23,000, at which it stood before.

Hon'ble Members will notice that there is an error of printing in the heading ‘revised estimate, 1919-20’, which really, of course, should be the revised estimate for 1918-19.”

REVISED FINANCIAL STATEMENT OF THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL FOR 1919-20.

PART I.—Memorandum by the Finance Member.

General Financial Situation.

THIS statement is presented to the Council under rule 14(I) of the Rules for the Discussion of the Annual Financial Statement, published with Notification No. 4482-F., dated the 10th December 1912. On the 18th of December last, when the departmental budgets were under preparation, the Hon'ble Members of the Finance Committee were invited in an informal meeting to advise Government as to the selection of new schemes for inclusion in the coming year's budget. As required by rule 6(I) of the Bengal Legislative (Financial Statement) Rules, 1912, copies of the Draft Financial Statement were formally presented to the Finance Committee on the 24th January 1919, and the committee was asked to advise on the distribution of the "unallotted" expenditure provisionally allowed by the Government of India in passing orders on the first edition of the budget. On the 26th of February 1919, all the Hon'ble Members of this Council were supplied with copies of the Amended Draft Financial Statement, together with copies of the second edition of the Civil Budget Estimates.

This memorandum is divided into two parts. Part I gives a brief but fairly comprehensive review, and Part II more detailed particulars, of the provincial transactions. As Part II gives detailed explanations of the estimates of revenue and expenditure, it is not necessary here to do more than refer to the more important figures.

2. The budget for the current year provided for an opening balance of Rs. 3,77,52,000, but the actual opening balance amounted to Rs. 3,67,64,000 or Rs. 9,88,000 less than the estimate. This was the result of a diminution in receipts and an increase in expenditure in 1917-18 as compared with the results anticipated at the time the estimate was made. The fall in the receipts was shared principally by Income-tax (Rs. 1,54,000), Forests (Rs. 1,23,000), Jails (Rs. 1,98,000) and Miscellaneous (Rs. 1,30,000). These decreases were, however, counterbalanced to some extent by larger receipts under Excise (Rs. 1,36,000), Interest (Rs. 85,000) and Transfers between Imperial and Provincial (Rs. 2,87,000). The expenditure was Rs. 9,03,000 in excess of the revised estimate, due mainly to an increase under Police (Rs. 3,29,000), Ports and Pilotage (Rs. 1,25,000) and Civil Works, Public Works Department (Rs. 6,46,000). The excesses were, however, to some extent counterbalanced by savings under Sanitation, and under Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments. The transactions of the year thus showed a surplus of Rs. 28,00,000 against the surplus of Rs. 37,88,000 anticipated in the revised estimate, thereby reducing the opening balance by Rs. 9,88,000.

3. Turning now to the general financial situation of the province in the current and coming financial years, the following is a summary of the position :—

		Budget estimate, 1918-19	Revised estimate, 1918-19	Budget estimate, 1919-20.
		Rs.	Rs.	Rs.
Opening balance	...	3,77,52,000	3,67,64,000	3,70,52,000
Receipts	...	6,96,34,000	7,29,57,000	7,29,83,000
Expenditure	...	7,36,54,000	7,26,69,000	7,77,12,000
Closing balance	...	3,37,32,000	3,70,52,000	3,23,23,000

The current year's budget provided for an opening balance Rs. 3,77,52,000, adding which to the revenue estimate of Rs. 6,88,67,000 allowing for a net transfer from imperial to provincial revenues of Rs. 7,67 a total of Rs. 10,73,86,000 is arrived at. Of this sum it was proposed to spend Rs. 7,36,54,000, leaving a closing balance of Rs. 3,37,32,000. The revised estimates show how far these anticipations have been realised in actual working. They are an attempt to forecast the probable receipts and expenditure of the year by adding to the actuals of the first nine months an estimate of the transactions of the remaining period. As the actuals for each successive month become available, the estimates are further revised, and the figures, therefore, are liable to modification up to the time the budget is finally passed. So far as can be seen at present, receipts this year will be Rs. 33,23,000 better than the budget figure. The table below compares the budget and revised estimates for the current year under chief major heads :—

The main features of the figures here presented are the large increase under Stamps, Excise, Income-Tax, Forests, Ports and Pilotage, Miscellaneous and Minor Works and Navigation, an increase in transfers between Imperial and Provincial, and a set-back in Registration and Law and Justice.

Courts of Law. The largest increase occurs under Excise. The revenue under this head recovered in 1917-18 from the fall in the three successive years ending in 1916-17. Particularly was this so in Calcutta, where the adoption of measures for the better control of the trade, and in particular the prevention of dilution and the fixing of maximum prices, contributed to a large increase in the consumption of licit country spirit. It was anticipated that this recovery would be followed by an increase in the receipts in 1918-19, and the budget estimate was placed at Rs. 5 lakhs above the revised estimate of the previous year. The growth of this revenue, however, has much exceeded the forecast and a yield of Rs. 18 lakhs over the budget figure is now expected.

The framing of the estimates of Income-tax under present conditions is a matter of great difficulty, not only because of the introduction of different rates of taxation, but also in consequence of the uncertain and varied effects of the war on trade generally; the increase in profits in various trades is also very unequal, and accentuates the difficulty in arriving at accurate figures. The jute trade enjoyed prosperity in the early part of 1917, and from companies engaged in this trade a considerable increase in income-tax was foreseen. Companies of other kinds, however, showed greater variations in their working. In view of these facts the estimate for the current year was fixed at Rs. 1,07,50,000, but the first ten months' actuals indicate that this forecast was an under-estimate, and this year's receipts are likely to be higher by Rs. 2,50,000 than the sanctioned figure.

The receipts under Stamps fell off in 1914-15, but there was a satisfactory recovery in the two following years. In the year 1917-18 there was again a set-back, but a recovery was anticipated this year, and the estimate for 1918-19 was placed at Rs. 5 lakhs higher than the revised estimate for 1917-18. Owing to improved prosperity in certain trades the actual revenue has exceeded anticipations and is now expected to be higher than the budget figure by Rs. 3½ lakhs.

The large increase under Forests is due partly to larger supplies of timber and sleepers to the Munitions Board for war purposes and partly to the payment this year, by the Munitions Board, of the cost of timber and sleepers supplied to them in the latter part of 1917-18.

The increase under Miscellaneous is due to a special receipt from the sale of the police hospital in Amherst Street. The large increase under Ports and Pilotage is the result of the temporary imposition of a surcharge on pilotage fees in order to counterbalance the increase in expenditure due to the introduction of the system of guaranteed remuneration to the officers of the Pilot Service, while that under Minor Works and Navigation is due mainly to the improved condition of the Madaripur Bil Canal and to a general increase in water-borne goods traffic owing to the shortage of railway wagons.

Transfers between Imperial and Provincial funds show a plus entry of Rs. 1,17,000. This difference as compared with the budget figure is mainly due to the additional assignments of Rs. 1,50,000 for the Bengal War Publicity Board, Rs. 47,000 for the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, Rs. 95,000 for anti-malarial schemes, Rs. 1,07,000 for improvements and repairs to "Belvedere", Rs. 1,80,000 for agricultural education and Rs. 1,75,000 in connection with the financial arrangements made for the payment of quinine purchased in Java. These additions were counterbalanced to some extent by larger contributions from Provincial funds as compensatory payment to Imperial revenues for the additional taxation accruing from income-tax. The total yield from additional taxation under VIII—Income-tax, which was originally estimated at Rs. 55,72,000, will, it is now anticipated, amount to Rs. 60,00,000. The fall in revenue under Registration is mainly due to adverse economic conditions, and under Law and Justice—Courts of Law, to smaller receipts from fines and process serving fees.

On the expenditure side, against the budget estimate of Rs. 7,36,54,000. the revised estimate stands at Rs. 7,26,69,000, showing a net anticipated saving of Rs. 9,85,000. The conditions induced by the war have rendered the observance of strict economy essential, and expenditure which can be deferred for the present without causing serious administrative inconvenience has been postponed. This partly accounts for the savings enumerated above, while other contributory causes are detailed below. The statement below gives particulars of the more important heads :—

The largest difference between the budget and revised estimate appears under the head "22—Education", and it will be observed that a saving of Rs. 18,01,000 is expected under this head during the current year. The savings are mainly due to the non-utilization in full of the grants made by the Government of India, but are also partly due to the transfer of money to the Public Works Department for educational works. When the budget was framed the Imperial grants were provided in full in the hope that schemes would be ready early this year, and that most of the provision would be utilized. The nine months' actuals, however, indicate that these expectations are not likely to be fulfilled. Under "20—Police" a saving of Rs. 7,40,000 is expected. This is mainly due to the transfer of about Rs. 6 lakhs to the Public Works Department budget for the purpose of providing for the being due to vacancies in the rank and file of the force, which under present conditions it has been difficult to fill.

The savings under Land Revenue are partly due to savings under salaries owing to the deputation of a number of officers to military duty, and partly to the non-utilization in full of the provision for outlay on improvement in Government estates.

Large savings also occur under "Sanitation" and "Miscellaneous", but they are more apparent than real. The savings under the former head are mainly due to the transfer of Rs. 1,90,000 to Irrigation for anti-malarial works. It has been the practice to include under the head "Miscellaneous", a small reserve of Rs. 2 lakhs to meet expenditure under any head of account for which money may be immediately necessary. As the Local Government is precluded from drawing on its balances, it is essential that there should be some money in reserve, for though lapses do generally occur under many heads of expenditure, these lapses seldom become available until late in the year, and in the meantime some provision must be at hand to meet urgent and unforeseen demands. All appropriations out of this reserve, as well as all sanctions accorded by His Excellency the Governor from his petty grants allotment and the adjustments of expenditure on grain compensation allowance, appear under the appropriate major heads; this accounts mainly for the large savings under the head Miscellaneous. The largest excess in expenditure occurs under "Jails", and is mainly due to an increase in the number of prisoners, and to the abnormal rise in the price of cotton, woollen yarns, cloth, blankets, medicines and raw materials for manufacturing purposes.

The increased expenditure under "Law and Justice—Courts of Law", is mainly due to the appointment in several districts of additional District Judges, Subordinate Judges and Munsifs to clear up arrears of judicial work, and to the entertainment of establishment for them.

The difference between the budget and revised estimates for the current year under "26B—Scientific and Miscellaneous Departments" is the result of a large outlay in the purchase of quinine from Java to replace the stocks which have been largely drawn on for military requirements during the past four years.

The large increase under "45—Civil Works, Public Works Department" is chiefly due to the augmentation of the grant under this head by transfers of funds for Educational, Police, Jail and other works, and is, therefore, more apparent than real.

4. In consequence of these changes in the figures of receipts and expenditure, the estimated closing balance of the current year, which is the starting point of the budget for 1919-20, has been taken at Rs. 3,70,52,000, or Rs. 33,20,000 better than the budget. Of the closing balance Rs. 20 lakhs represents the prescribed minimum closing balance of the province, which must be kept intact, while Rs. 2,34,12,000 represents the unspent balances of Imperial recurring and non-recurring grants, or grants which are ear-marked for specific purposes, as detailed below, and which must be spent on those objects. The free Provincial balance, therefore, amounts to Rs. 1,16,40,000 which may be spent in future years :—

			Rs.

Beyond the explanations given in Part II of this memorandum few of the figures call for remarks. It is difficult at a time when everything is largely unsettled by the cessation of the war, and when the immediate future is to some extent uncertain, to adjust the revenues with reference to those of the past four years or to pre-war times. It is anticipated, however, that the improvement in the Stamp revenue will be maintained, and that the administration of the Excise Department will result in a still further rise in the Excise receipts. Income-tax receipts are expected, however, to be less than those of the present year. The profits of the jute industry are expected to be better, while there has been increased prosperity in certain mercantile trades. On the other hand, the cotton piece-goods trade has suffered, and there will be loss in revenue on account of the exemption from assessment of all incomes below Rs. 2,000 per annum, and also on account of the rebate of income-tax that shall have to be given in respect of the amounts paid as excess profits duty. Taking it all round, a decrease of Rs. 21½ lakhs as compared with the revised estimate for the current year is expected. With the cessation of the war the receipts from Jail manufactures and from the sales of quinine are likely to diminish also. In the Transfer Budget the only items calling for mention are the assignment in favour of the Government of Bihar and Orissa for the Ranchi Lunatic asylum, and the Imperial assignments to this Government for expenditure on the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, and for the improvement of the port of Chittagong, and the assignment to compensate this Government on account of the loss in income-tax revenue necessitated by the changes in taxation.

For next year a total expenditure of Rs. 7,77,12,000 has been provided, which is higher by Rs. 40,58,000 and Rs. 50,43,000 than the current year's budget and revised estimates, respectively. Details by chief major heads are given in the following table :—

In framing the estimates of expenditure full weight has been given to the spending power of the various departments, with particular reference to their ability to utilize the lump grants made to them for particular purposes, and while making full provision for these grants, large sums have been deducted as probable savings with reference to the expenditure of recent years. A large provision of Rs. 13,84,000, or Rs. 4,34,000 over and above the recurring Imperial assignment, has been made, in accordance with the policy initiated last year for schemes of sanitary improvement and anti-malarial works, in addition to provision for an enquiry into the hookworm disease, for kala-azar research, for an investigation into river pollution and for other minor improvements. In the Irrigation budget too increased provision has been made for drainage schemes in connection with the malaria problem. The schemes for mitigating the effects of the floods of the rivers in the Burdwan Division and for creating a spill from the Bidyadhari river, for the partial canalization of Tolly's Nala, for the reconstruction of the Kidderpore Bridge and for the construction of buildings at Khulna required in connection with the establishment of a new permanent waterways division, have necessitated further large provision in the coming year's Irrigation budget. Agricultural development has also received marked attention. In continuance of the scheme for the distribution of improved paddy and jute seed it is proposed to establish two new district agricultural farms, while in order to complete the cadre of district agricultural officers, which is necessary in connection with this scheme, provision has been made for nine additional appointments in this class. It is also in contemplation to strengthen the establishment for the control and audit of Co-operative Societies, which are rapidly rising in numbers. Further, with the view of giving full effect to a resolution which was adopted by this Council in the course of the budget debate last year in regard to the development of Co-operative Societies for industrial purposes a sum of Rs. 38,000 has been so allotted. These are the more important items of expenditure on Sanitation and Agriculture, and they follow on the further development of the policy which has been pursued during the current year. Turning to other important items of expenditure, there is a provision of Rs. 1,25,000 as a first instalment of the expenditure to be incurred on Circle officers appointed in anticipation of the hoped for development of village self-government. This and larger provision under Survey and Settlement operations in the Darjeeling, Terai and Kalimpong Government estates, and the provision of Rs. 25,000 for settlement of waste lands in the 24-Parganas, Sundarbans, under the raiyatwari system, account for the increase under the Land Revenue head. Under Registration a lump provision of Rs. 48,000 has been put down for a partial revision of the pay of the clerks and muharrirs of the sub-registry offices in the Presidency, a long delayed reform which has hitherto been barred by financial stringency. A provision of Rs. 11,000 has also been made towards the revision of the cadre of district sub-registrars, which has been sanctioned by the Secretary of State, and the introduction, as a tentative measure, in a few selected districts, of a system of district registrars on the lines followed in Madras, by which district officers will be relieved of all legal and routine duties connected with registration. Another item which has often been the subject of attention in this Council is that of the pay of munsifs. The Governor in Council has recently published a Resolution on this subject in connection with the report of the Public Service Commission, and it seems probable that during the coming year effect will be given, at any rate, in part, to the revision of the pay of these officers. A provision of Rs. 1,25,000 has been made on this account. Under the Scientific and Miscellaneous head, funds have been set apart for the Director of Industries, the Director of Civil Supplies and their staff, while a sum of Rs. 78,400 has been allotted for the completion of the research tannery together with its establishment, in addition to a lump provision of Rs. 2,50,000 for the development of industries, with a view to give immediate effect, as far as possible, to the recommendations of the Indian Industrial Commission. The estimate of Police expenditure is some Rs. 1½ lakh less than the budget provision of the current year. The reduction is due mainly to two causes. In the first place no allotment has been made for capital expenditure in connection with the reorganization of the subordinate police. Expenditure on this account has been shown in recent years under the head Police so long as the assignment for the purpose made by the Government of India remained unexhausted. That assignment having now been expended, further provision, will in future, be made under the Civil Works head. Secondly, large probable savings have been deducted in the light of the expenditure incurred by the department in recent years. While provision has been made for normal development, and for the furtherance of the schemes for raising the pay of head constables and the proportion of the ordinary reserve, the only new schemes of importance are (1) revision of the rates of pay of Imperial Police officers recently sanctioned by the Secretary of State, (2) the reorganisation and extension of the traffic police, Calcutta—a measure necessitated by the growth of the city and the general extension of motor traffic, (3) additional staff in connection with the Public Vehicles Department—a consequence of the transfer from the Corporation of Calcutta to the Calcutta police of the control of hackney carriages, etc. (this it may be noted will be largely met by receipts), (4) the raising of the strength of the Dacca military police battalion by the addition of one company, and (5) the improvement of pay and prospects of European inspectors and sergeants of the Calcutta police in order to facilitate recruitment to make up the full complement. The large increase under Ports and Pilotage is mainly due to the system of guaranteed remuneration to pilots, and to meet charges for the reorganization of the various shipping offices, provision for freight charges and for the purchase of marine stores. The provision for Education also shows a decrease of about Rs. 5 lakhs as compared with the current year. This reduction is more apparent than real, and is due to large deductions made on account of probable savings. The department has been unable to spend in full the annual grants made to them by the Government of India, and in the case of several schemes it does not appear probable that sanction will be accorded, and expenditure incurred, during the coming year. A provision of Rs. 15 lakhs has been made, in accordance with the instructions of the Government of India for expenditure on schemes arising out of the report of the Calcutta University Commission, but as it is not anticipated that such expenditure will be of any considerable amount in 1919-20, a sum of Rs. 12 lakhs has been set off as probable savings against this item. The allotment for grant-in-aid has been increased by Rs. 1 lakh to meet a capital grant to the Calcutta Girls' High School and a provision of Rs. 1,55,000 has been made for the completion of the scheme for the improvement of the sewerage and drainage of the Sibpur Civil Engineering College. Other educational allotments of importance are those of Rs. 30,000 for the furtherance of the scheme of madrasa reforms, and Rs. 24,000 for the appointment of additional inspectresses of schools. Details as to the distribution of the Imperial grant of Rs. 5,50,000 for the development of primary education, are given in paragraph 28 in Part II of this memorandum. The increase under Medical is mainly due to a provision of Rs. 1,50,000 for raising the emoluments of the officers of the Indian Medical Service. Owing to the unfavourable agricultural conditions prevailing in certain parts of the Presidency a provision of Rs. 2 lakhs has been made under "33—Famine Relief" for expenditure on relief measures. Of this sum only Rs. 50,000 is debitable to Provincial revenues and the balance to Imperial revenues. In the Civil Works budget, there is provision to the extent of Rs. 31,20,000 for new works including minor works, details of which are given in Part II of this memorandum, while the usual necessary allotment has been made for works in progress, repairs and establishment. The allotment for works in progress and repairs is considerably higher than that of recent years, as it includes provision for the works in progress in connection with the partition of the districts of Midnapore and Mymensingh and the police reorganization schemes, and allows for the expenditure necessary to effect repairs neglected while the financial situation was adverse.

Large reductions appear under Jails and Scientific and other Miscellaneous Departments. The smaller provision under the former is due to a reduction in the estimate for the purchase of raw material, and under the latter mainly to the absence of any provision for the purchase of quinine from private firms.

The closing balance has been placed at Rs. 3,23,23,000. Of this Rs. 20 lakhs represents the prescribed minimum closing balance of the Province, which must be kept intact, while Rs. 2,21,27,000 represents the unspent balances of Imperial recurring and non-recurring grants, or sums which are ear-marked for specific purposes as detailed below, and which must be spent on those objects. The free Provincial balance therefore amounts to Rs. 81,96,000 which may be spent in future years :—

REVENUE.

1. The Provincial share of this head of revenue is one-half, except for receipts from Government estates and from recovery of the cost of maintenance of boundary pillars, which are wholly provincial.

The budget estimate for the current year was fixed at Rs. 1,65,48,000, but on the basis of the latest actuals the revised estimate for the current year has been placed at Rs. 1,66,21,000. The increase of Rs. 73,000 in the revised estimate as compared with the sanctioned estimate, is mainly under the head—"Ordinary revenue—fixed collections" due to better collection of arrears in the earlier part of the year and under "Recovery of the cost of maintenance of boundary pillars". The sanctioned estimate under the latter head is only Rs. 1,000, but the revised estimate has been fixed at Rs. 21,000 on the basis of the latest actuals.

On the assumption that agricultural conditions next year will, on the whole, be normal, the estimate for the year 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 1,66,21,000 which is the same as the revised estimate for the current year.

EXPENDITURE.

2. The total provincial expenditure for 1919-20 is estimated at Rs. 38,14,000 against the revised estimate of Rs. 35,18,000 for the current year and the sanctioned budget estimate of Rs. 36,28,000 for 1918-19. The large saving in the revised estimate is mainly under the head "Management of Government estates," consequent on the non-utilization of the full provision for outlay on improvements in Government estates. It is also due to the discontinuance of the payment of exchange compensation allowance, and savings under salaries owing to the deputation of additional officers to military duty.

As regards the budget estimates for 1919-20 larger provisions under (1) survey and settlement, and (2) charges of district administration account mainly for the increase of Rs. 1,86,000 as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year. The large increase under (1) is mainly due to a lump provision of Rs. 57,000 for the initiation of settlement operations in the Darjeeling Terai (Rs. 32,000) and Kalimpong Government estates (Rs. 25,000), and to increased provision for minor settlements. The main reason for the increase under (2) is the inclusion of a provision of Rs. 1,25,000 for the appointment of circle officers against a provision of Rs. 25,000 in the current year's budget for the same purpose. The war bonus recently sanctioned for menials also contributes towards the increase. Under management of Government estates, the estimate includes a lump provision of Rs. 25,000 for the settlement of waste lands in the Sunderbans, of the 24-Parganas, under the raiyatwari system, while the small increase under land records is due to larger provision for the revision of land registration registers and to the increase in the pay of menials recently sanctioned.

REVENUE.

3. The receipts represent the share, credited to this major head, of the sale-proceeds of the unified postal and revenue stamps, the sale-proceeds of bills of exchange and other general stamps, and of stamped papers for the copies of documents, court-fee stamps and plain papers, the duty on embossing receipt, cheque and other stamps, the duty levied under the Indian Stamp Act, 1899, on documents brought for adjudication and on documents not stamped or insufficiently stamped, and fines and penalties levied by Judicial and Revenue officers under the Stamp Act on insufficiently stamped instruments. The revenue from the unified postal and revenue stamps is credited to the imperial head "Post Office", but a sum of Rs. 1,99,000 is credited under the sub-head "Sale of general stamps", as the Civil Department share of the sale-proceeds of these stamps.

The actuals of 1917-18 amounted to Rs. 2,32,12,000, but the collection up to the end of December 1918 show an increase of Rs. 9,30,000 as compared with the corresponding period of the last year. The increase is mainly under the head "Sale of general stamps", and is partly due to improved prosperity in certain trades in the earlier part of the year in Calcutta, and partly to the execution of a greater number of documents in the mufassil on account of the high prices of food grains in the latter part of the year. Owing to adverse economic conditions, however, there has been a falling off in litigation. The fall in revenue under the head "Sale of court-fee stamps" would have been larger but for the payment of large administration duties in respect of certain estates as well as a large number of applications for administration grants in the High Court. With uncertainty as to trade pending the final settlement of war and peace problems, no great increase in the revenue from "Stamps" can safely be anticipated during the next few months of this year, and the revised estimate for 1918-19 has been placed at Rs. 2,48,00,000.

With the prospect of new industrial development and a revival of trade next year an improvement in the stamp revenue may be confidently hoped for and allowing for an increase of 7 lakhs over the revised estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 2,55,00,000. The provincial share is one-half and amounts to Rs. 1,24,00,000 for 1918-19, and Rs. 1,27,50,000 for 1919-20.

EXPENDITURE.

4. The estimate for 1918-19 was Rs. 7,37,000, but this has been reduced to Rs. 6,31,000 in the revised estimate owing partly to a fall in the consumption of plain paper, resulting in smaller charges under "Stamps and plain paper supplied from Central Stores", and partly to less expenditure under "Discount on sale of other general stamps," and "Charges on sale of court-fee stamps". The saving under the last named head is due to a falling off in litigation resulting in a fall in revenue, as already explained. The small saving under "Superintendence" is mainly under the head "Establishment" and is due to the Superintendent of the Stamp office having been transferred to the Income-tax office, no one being appointed to fill his post.

The budget estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 6,83,000, and includes larger provision as compared with the revised estimate for discount on the sale of stamps and a larger issue of stamp papers. The charges of this department are divided equally between imperial and provincial revenues, and the provincial shares amount to Rs. 3,16,000 and Rs. 3,42,000, respectively.

REVENUE.

5. The actuals of 1917-18 amounted to Rs. 1,56,36,000, and those in the first nine months of the current year show an increase of Rs. 14,84,000 as compared with the actuals of the corresponding period of the preceding year; the revised estimate for the current year has therefore been fixed at Rs. 1,78,00,000. The rise in revenue is mainly due to an increase in the consumption of country spirit in Calcutta and the adjoining districts of Hooghly, Howrah and the 24-Parganas; the total consumption for the first nine months of the year in this part of the Presidency has risen from 263,582 proof gallons in 1917-18 to 327,585 proof gallons in 1918-19. This increase is the result of the extension to the industrial areas round Calcutta, with effect from 1st April 1918, of the restrictive measures of fixed prices and the monthly adjustment of license fees which obtains in Calcutta. There has also been an increase in revenue from the duty on Indian-made foreign liquor and a rise in the opium receipts due to the higher treasury price of opium.

With the cessation of hostilities the probabilities are that there will be a further increase in the consumption of excisable articles, bringing in large receipts in license fees and duty. The budget estimate for 1919-20 has therefore been fixed at Rs. 1,87,00,000.

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 36 to 41.

6. The total expenditure for 1918-19 was originally estimated at Rs. 10,85,000, but in view of the actuals of the first nine months, the revised estimate for the current year has been placed at Rs. 10,47,000, savings being anticipated mainly in salaries under "Superintendence," and "Presidency Establishment" and in the estimates for establishment and contingencies under "Distilleries."

The estimate for the coming year has been framed at Rs. 11,37,000. Besides allowing a larger provision of Rs. 29,000 for travelling allowance of officers and establishment under "District Executive Establishment" based on recent actuals, the estimate includes Rs. 2,460 for the appointment of a prosecutor in Excise and Salt cases, Calcutta, Rs. 2,520 for the entertainment of additional establishment in the areas in which the tree tax system has been introduced, and Rs. 2,880 for the employment of female Excise preventive officers to detect smuggling of excisable articles by women employed by smugglers.

REVENUE.

7. Since the surrender of the Public Works Cess to District Board this head of revenue is now practically confined to the general rates which are levied from Wards estates so as to cover approximately the cost of management (including supervision charges and contributions for pension and leave allowances) of the staff employed. The variations in the receipts from year to year are due to old estates being released from management by the Court of Wards and new ones being taken up. The increase in the revised estimate for the current year is due to the assumption of charge of certain large estates in the districts of Dinajpur, Malda and Mymensingh. The receipts would have been larger but for the release of the share of Babu N. G. Biswas in the Janbazar Estate No. I and the transfer of the management of the Balasore portion of Babu B. L. Mukerjee's trust estate to the Government of Bihar and Orissa.

Page 9.

With effect from the 1st of April 1916 the Government of India imposed additional taxation, and that part of the increase which depends on the increased rates is made over to the Government of India by means of an assignment under the transfer head in accordance with their decision to appropriate the whole of the extra receipts from the new rates to the needs of the Imperial Exchequer. Excluding, therefore, the full increment due to new taxation, the revenue from income-tax is shared equally between Imperial and Provincial. No part of the super-tax on incomes imposed under Act VIII of 1917 and the duty on excess profits proposed to be imposed from 1st April next are included under this divided head, as the proceeds are wholly Imperial.

Pages 41 to

EXPENDITURE.

9. The amount provided for 1919-20 is higher by Rs. 34,000 than this year's allotment and higher by Rs. 26,000 than the revised estimate. The increase in expenditure is due partly to an enhancement in the pay of the Deputy Collector of Income-tax, but mainly to the revision of the strength and pay of the assessors employed in Calcutta, to the revision of the clerical staff of the Calcutta Income-tax office, and to the appointment of additional assessors and establishment in the Rajshahi Division, necessitated by the large increase in work consequent on the introduction of the new Income-tax Act, VII of 1918. The Provincial share is one-half, and amounts to Rs. 93,000 and Rs. 1,06,000, respectively.

10. Assuming that the demand of the Munitions Board for sleepers and timber for war purposes would be larger this year, the estimate for 1918-19 was fixed at Rs. 16,00,000 against the revised estimate of Rs. 15,00,000 for 1917-18. The demands of the Munitions Board for timber and of the Railway companies for sleepers have, however, far exceeded expectations, and a large increase in revenue under the head "Timber and other produce removed from the forests by Government agency" is therefore expected. The increase under this head is also due to the adjustment this year of the cost of timber and sleepers supplied to the Munitions Board at the end of last year. Considering this and the fact that there has also been an increase in the demand for timber by consumers and purchasers, the revised estimate for the current year has been fixed at Rs. 18,00,000.

Owing to the cessation of hostilities the demand for timber and sleepers for military purposes, will not continue next year, but following the end of the war, it is expected that there will be larger demands for all kinds of raw material from consumers and purchasers, and on this assumption the budget estimate for the next year has been placed at Rs. 16,30,000.

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 43 and 44.

11. The sanctioned budget for the current year is Rs. 7,50,000 and the revised estimate has been taken at Rs. 8,30,000 to provide for larger expenditure to meet the demand of the Munitions Board for increased supply of timber and sleepers. This increased outlay, however, it may be pointed out, will be accompanied by increased revenue during the year.

The budget estimate for the ensuing year has been passed for Rs. 7,66,000 which is higher by Rs. 16,000 than the sanctioned estimate of 1918-19, and lower by Rs. 64,000 than the revised estimate for the current year. Under "B—Establishment", besides provision according to the sanctioned scale, with the usual deductions for probable savings, a provision of Rs. 6,000 has been made for the appointment of two extra Assistant Conservators of Forests. The provision for timber operations by Government agency has been reduced, as the amount of business in timber contracts is not likely to equal that done in the current year. Provision has, however, been made for the feed and keep of a larger number of elephants and to meet the increased cost of maintenance of steam launches and flats. The next year's estimate also includes a lump provision of Rs. 24,000 for the purchase of barbed wire and sheep netting for the Buxa and Jalpaiguri divisions, and larger outlay on communications and buildings.

12. Owing to adverse economic conditions the actual collections in the first nine months of 1918-19 show a falling off of Rs. 1,25,000 as compared with those of the corresponding period of the preceding year, and the revised estimate has, therefore, been placed at Rs. 19,00,000 against the budget estimate of Rs. 19,60,000. As no increase in revenue is expected next year, the estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed also at Rs. 19,00,000.

13. The minor head "Superintendence" comprises charges on account of the Inspector-General of Registration, his office establishment and contingencies, while "District Charges" represent the salary of district sub-registrars and sub-registrars and their establishments and contingent charges. The decrease in the revised estimate for 1918-19 under the head "District sub-registrars and sub-registrars", as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year is mainly due to savings under "Salaries" and "Establishment". The savings would have been larger but for the increased rate of pay recently sanctioned for menials.

The budget estimate for 1919-20 is higher by Rs. 64,000 than the sanctioned estimate for 1918-19. The increase is mainly due to a lump provision of Rs. 48,000 for a partial revision of the pay of the ministerial establishment of district headquarters and rural registration offices, and to larger provision for the opening of new sub-registry offices. A provision of Rs. 11,000 has also been made for the revision of the cadre of district sub-registrars which has received the sanction of the Secretary of State, and the introduction, as a tentative measure, of a system of district registrars on the lines followed in Madras.

14. The amounts shown above represents the debits to Provincial funds of the expenditure under refunds in proportion to the Provincial shares of the revenues under the respective heads in connection with which refunds are made. The charges under the head are of a fluctuating character and are not subject to any departmental control. Owing to the new procedure prescribed in the new Indian Income-tax Act, VII of 1918, in accordance with which income-tax is levied, in the first instance, at one anna in the rupee on the total profits of companies and owners of securities, refunds being subsequently allowed to individual share-holders or stock-holders, the amount paid in income-tax refunds has nearly doubled during the current year. The budget estimate for 1919-20 makes sufficient allowance for this.

The minor heads under this major head are treated as wholly Imperial, wholly Provincial, or divided between Imperial and Provincial, according to the classification of the corresponding heads of revenue, but purely Imperial minor heads which are not under the financial control of the Government of Bengal are not shown in the above statement. The charges consist chiefly of pensions paid to landholders as compensation for lands resumed by Government, malikana allowances and other special compensations. Excise compensations represent mainly the compensation paid by Government in lieu of abkari rights which have been resumed in Native States. The main items under this head are an annual payment to the Bhutan Darbar of a sum of Rs. 97,340 as compensation for the removal of liquor shops from the borders of the State, and of Rs. 4,000 to the Cooch Behar State for the transfer to Government of the excise administration of certain isolated areas belonging to the State.

REVENUE.

16. The revenue represents mainly the interest received by the local Government on advances and loans made from the Provincial advance and loan account. This account, the capital transactions of which are outside the budget figures, provides for the grant of loans to agriculturists, local bodies, etc. The monies required for the loans are furnished by the Government of India. The local Government pay interest thereon and bear losses due to bad debts. In order to cover risks and cost of management, the local Government charge a higher rate of interest than that which they have to pay to the Imperial Government. The revenue under this head also includes interest on Government securities belonging to institutions taken over by Government along with the endowments for the upkeep of such institutions, and also interest on advances to ex-students of weaving institutions. In spite of the enhancements, which are noticed below, of the rates of interest charged by the Government of India to this Government, no change has at present been made in the rate charged by this Government for loans to agriculturists. The rate of interest charged on loans to local bodies made after the enhanced rates came into force has, however, been raised to 6 per cent.

The estimate of loans, as submitted to the Government of India, provides for a return in the way of interest during 1919-20 of Rs. 5,33,000 against Rs. 5,35,000, the revised estimate for 1918-19, as shown below :—

	Revised estimate, 1918-19	Budget estimate, 1919-20
	Rs.	Rs.
Interest on advances to cultivators, etc.	61,000	65,000
Interest on advances to co-operative societies	900	1,000
Interest on drainage and embankment advances	18,000	16,000
Interest on loans to landholders ...	1,68,000	1,54,000
Interest on loans to municipalities and district boards, etc. ...	2,68,000	2,77,000
Interest on advances to ex-students of the Weaving Institute ...	200	200
Interest on Government securities ...	12,000	12,300
Miscellaneous	7,000	7,300
For rounding	- 100	+ 200
Total ...	5,35,000	5,33,000

The variations between the revised estimate for 1918-19 and the budget estimate for the ensuing year are small and call for no remarks.

EXPENDITURE.

17. The interest which is paid to the Government of India by the local Government, on sums placed at the disposal of the latter for advances and loans to cultivators, co-operative societies, notabilities, municipalities (excluding Presidency corporations), district boards and ex-students of the Weaving Institute and for advances on drainage and embankment scheme is shown as expenditure under this head, the interest being calculated on the mean between the outstanding balance of the Provincial advance and loan account at the beginning and at the end of each year. The rate of interest charged to the local Government by the Government of India was until recently, $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. per annum, but with effect from the 1st October 1916 this rate was raised to $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in respect of loans sanctioned by them on or after that date, and again to $5\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in respect of loans sanctioned on or after the 1st April 1917, while loans sanctioned prior to those dates are charged at the old rate of $3\frac{1}{2}$ per cent.

EXPENDITURE.

18. The estimate for 1918-19 was fixed at Rs. 25,88,000, but considering the actuals of the first nine months of the current year, the revised estimate has been fixed at Rs. 26,11,000. The excesses occur mainly under the heads "Civil Secretariat" and "Commissioners". The increase under the former head is partly under the head "Salaries" due to the appointment of special officers to carry out special work which could not be foreseen when the budget was framed, and partly under establishment and contingencies consequent on the large increase in work caused by the war. The increase under the latter head is mainly under "Salaries and Establishment". The excesses would have been larger but for savings under "Staff and household of the Governor" owing to the non-utilization in full of the allotments for band and bodyguard establishments.

Against the actuals of Rs. 25,84,000 in 1917-18 and the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 25,88,000 for the current year, the budget estimate for next year has been fixed at Rs. 26,38,000. The increase is mainly due to a provision of Rs. 12,000 for the revision of the establishment of the Outside Audit Department of the Accountant-General's office, for which this Government will be fully reimbursed by the Government of India by an assignment through the transfer head, and to a provision of Rs. 35,000 for the construction of a new metre-gauge bogie saloon for the use of His Excellency the Governor. The war bonus recently sanctioned for menials also contributes towards the increase. Otherwise the usual provision has been made for officers on special duty and for temporary establishment, and the next year's estimates generally follow the sanctioned estimates for the current year.

REVENUE.

Page 12.

19. The principal source of revenue is "General fees, fines and forfeitures". The revenue under this head is, however, liable to fluctuation as it depends largely on the amount of judicial fines inflicted. The total collections under the major head in 1917-18 amounted to Rs. 11,22,000 and taking into account the fees and commissions that would be realized by the Administrator-General and Official Trustee, the estimate for this year was fixed at Rs. 12,23,000. The actuals, however, indicate that the sanctioned estimate is not likely to be realized and the revised estimate for 1918-19 has therefore been passed for Rs. 10,67,000. The fall occurs under all the minor heads, but is most marked under the head "Court-fee realized in cash and under "General fees, fines and forfeitures".

Following the revised estimate and allowing for a small expansion of revenue, the estimate for 1919-20 has been placed at Rs. 11,88,000.

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 61 to 65.

20. High Court.—Under this head are shown the salaries of the Judges and officers and establishments of the High Court, and the connected contingent expenditure. The saving in the revised estimate is mainly under "Salaries" owing to the two additional Judges, for whom a provision of Rs. 96,000 exists, not having been appointed; this provision has been appropriated to meet the cost of appointments of additional District and Session Judges in several districts. The ensuing year's estimates generally follow the revised estimates of the current year and include the following:—

	Rs.
Provision for an additional Judge at Rs. 4,000 per mensem for four months	16,000
Additional establishment for the reorganization of the record-room on the Appellate side	24,000

Pages 65 to 67.

Law officers.—This minor head comprises the charges on account of the Advocate-General, the Legal Remembrancer, the Government Solicitor, the Standing Counsel, the Public Prosecutor and Government Pleaders in the High Court and in the mufassal. It also includes the fees paid by Government to pleaders in civil and criminal cases and the excess in the revised estimate is mainly under this head. The expenditure being dependent on the number and importance of the cases entrusted to pleaders, the charge is of a fluctuating nature. The decrease in the estimate for 1919-20 as compared with the estimates for 1918-19, is mainly due to less provision under "Fees to pleaders".

Pages 71 and 72.

Civil and Sessions Courts.—To this minor head are debited the charges in connection with the Courts of District and Sessions Judges, Subordinate Judges and Munsifs and process-serving and copyist establishments.

The steady increase in Judicial work necessitated, in several districts, the appointment of additional District Judges, Subordinate Judges and Munsifs to relieve the congestion of work and there is consequently a increase in the revised estimate for the current year. The budget estimate for 1919-20 contains an enhanced provision of Rs. 1,35,000 under "Process serving establishment", to meet the cost of the war bonus recently sanctioned for menials, and a lump provision of Rs. 1,25,000 for the improvement of the pay of the officers of the Provincial Judicial Service. It also includes a few other schemes involving small expenditure, details of which are given in the schedule attached as an annexure to this memorandum.

Pages 73 and 74

Courts of Small Causes.—The salaries of the Judges and officers of the Presidency and Mufassal Courts, their establishment and connected contingent expenditure, are shown under this minor head. The only item of importance in the coming year's estimate is the provision of Rs. 14,72 for the appointment of a 7th Judge in the Calcutta Small Cause Court and his establishment.

Criminal Courts.—Under this minor head the variations in the figures follow the corresponding alterations under the head "3—Land Revenue—Charges of district administration", a portion of which is transferred to this head. Larger provision under "Supplies and Services", and a lump provision of Rs. 1,25,000 for the appointment of circle officers, are the chief causes that have contributed to the increase in the budget estimate for 1919-20. REVENUE.

21. The main source of receipts under the head "Law and Justice—Jails", is the sale-proceeds of articles manufactured in jails and supplied to the public and public departments. The revenue also includes the sale-proceeds of quinine packets. The fall in the revised estimate is mainly due to the Commissariat Department having ceased to indent for their supply of gunny cloth in the jails of this Presidency. The receipts during the last three years were swelled by the sale-proceeds of articles of jail manufacture to the Military Department, but as no such revenue is expected next year owing to the cessation of hostilities the budget estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 10,01,000. Page 12

EXPENDITURE.

22. Under this head are shown (a) the salary of the Inspector-General of Prisons and the cost of his office establishment and contingencies, (b) the expenditure connected with the staff employed in the supervision of jails, (c) the charges for the maintenance of convicts, and (d) the cost of the purchase of raw materials for jail manufactures. The items (c) and (d) are fluctuating, being dependent on the strength of the jail population and on demands for jail manufactures. Variations in the price of food-grains, and outbreaks of epidemic diseases in jails, also affect the charges for maintenance of prisoners.

Jails.—Owing to the rise in the price of food-grains, cotton clothing, blankets, and medicines and other hospital equipment, which has been accompanied by an increase in the number of prisoners, the revised estimate for 1918-19 has been placed at Rs. 21,07,000 on the basis of recent actuals. In Pages 74 to 8 the hope that economic conditions will be better next year, and that the price of clothing, blankets, and medicine may gradually come down more nearly to the rates which prevailed in pre-war times, the ensuing year's estimate has been fixed at Rs. 20,43,000. The only noticeable item in the estimate for 1919-20 is the provision for the opening of a new sub-jail at Sherpur in the Mymensingh district.

Pages 85 and 86.

Jail manufactures.—The increase in the revised estimate for the current year as compared with the sanctioned estimate for 1918-19, is mainly due to the rise in the price of cotton, woollen yarn and other raw materials used by the jails. The enhancement in the cost of European stores and freight charges due to the war and larger demands for police uniforms also contribute to some extent to the increase. Owing to the cessation of hostilities it is hoped that there will be some diminution in the price of raw materials, and on this assumption the budget estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 9,60,000. The next year's estimate includes a provision of Rs. 2,400 for the establishment of a central depôt, in the Juvenile Jail, for the distribution of quinine.

23. The receipts under this head consist mainly of (a) fees and fines levied under the Cattle Trespass Act, (b) the recovery of the cost of Police supplied to public departments, private companies and persons and (c) fees levied under the Motor Cycles Act. The increase in the revised estimate for the current year as compared with the sanctioned estimate for 1918-19 is mainly due to the credit of a sum of Rs. 57,000 under this head, being the amount realized from the Military Department in payment for the steam launches commandeered by them for military purposes. With the passing of the Calcutta Hackney Carriage Act the control of vehicular traffic in Calcutta will now devolve on the Presidency Police. The budget estimate for 1919-20, therefore, includes an income of Rs. 30,000 from fees and fines leviable under the Act.

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 87 to

24. Presidency Police.—The sanctioned estimate for 1918-19 under this head was Rs. 22,13,000, but in view of the actuals of the first nine months, this has been reduced to Rs. 21,53,000 in the revised estimate for the current year. The decrease is mainly due to savings under "Police force" and to the non-utilization in full of the provision for river patrol arrangement, owing to the steam launch "John Lambert", which was being constructed in the dockyard for the purpose, having been commandeered by the military authorities for war purposes.

The budget estimate for the coming year which has been fixed at Rs. 22,77,000 includes the following noticeable items :—

	Rs.
For the improvement of pay and prospects of European inspectors and sergeants	50,000
Reorganization and extension of the Indian traffic police	24,550
For the creation of three posts of Assistant Commissioners (Provincial) in lieu of three posts of Superintendents (Provincial) and the substitution of an Imperial Assistant Commissionership for one Provincial Assistant Commissionership	3,220
Additional police staff in connection with the loading and unloading of petroleum from vessels at Budge-Budge	4,401
Additional staff in connection with the Public Vehicles Department	40,000
Purchase of mosquito nets for head-constables and constables	5,000
Construction of a launch to replace the launch "John Lambert"	40,000

Pages 93 to 100.

25. District Executive Force.—The salaries of District Superintendent Assistant and Deputy Superintendents and of their establishments, and the cost of the District Police Force, and the Provincial police training schools at Sardar Dacca and Berhampur are included under this head. The expenditure under this minor head represents nearly 69 per cent. of the expenditure under the whole major head. The decrease noticeable in the revised estimate is mainly due to the transfer of Rs. 5,75,000 to the Public Works Department for new works and works in progress in connection with the reorganization of the subordinate police in Eastern Bengal, but is also due to savings under the police force. A provision of Rs. 1,30,759 was made in the current year's budget in connection with the scheme for raising the proportion of the ordinary reserve of head-constables and constables. During the year a proposal was made that this provision should be utilized in the formation of a reserve police battalion, but this was subsequently abandoned. The recruitment of constables in part accomplishment of the original scheme thus began late in the year and this accounts for a saving of Rs. 25,000 under this head. Four launches which were under construction in the dockyard were to have been delivered to the Police Department early this year, and provision for crew and stores was made for the whole year. Only three launches were delivered, and the fourth not till after September, while one was not delivered at all, and consequently there was a saving of Rs. 22,000 out of the lump provision of Rs. 1,48,596 for the reorganization of the river police in Eastern Bengal.

The budget estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 93,22,000 against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 96,58,000 for the current year. The large reduction in the next year's estimate is more apparent than real, as it is mainly due to large deductions of probable savings on the basis of recent actual expenditure, as well as to the absence of any provision for capital expenditure on buildings in connection with the reorganization of the subordinate police in Eastern Bengal, the necessary provision for this purpose being made in the Public Works Department budget. Besides providing for normal development the coming year's estimate provides Rs. 2,50,000 to meet the cost of the revised rates of pay of Imperial Police officers recently sanctioned by the Secretary of State, Rs. 2,17,260 for raising the pay of head constables, Rs. 1,38,037 for raising the proportion of the ordinary reserve in pursuance of the scheme already undertaken, Rs. 11,019 for the entertainment of crews of five thana launches, Rs. 12,126 for raising the number of head constables in Eastern Bengal to ultimate strength, and Rs. 6,601 for the appointment of additional constables for employment as armourers.

Pages 101 and 102.

Special Police.—Under this minor head are recorded the accounts of the Bengal Military Police, the Frontier Police, Chittagong, and the charges of the Upper Burma Police Depot. The increase in the ensuing year's estimate compared with the sanctioned and revised estimates of this year, is mainly due to a provision of Rs. 32,207 for raising the strength of the Dacca Military Police battalion by the addition of a company, and Rs. 6,570 for the payment of allowances to non-commissioned officers and sepoy of the Dacca Military Police deputed for guard duty at jails.

Pages 103 and 104.

Railway Police.—This head includes the cost of the supervising staff and their establishments and the police force employed in the East India Railway, Eastern Bengal Railway, Bengal-Nagpur and Assam-Bengal Railways. Except in the case of expenditure in the Eastern Bengal railway, which is wholly met from Provincial revenues, the line being a State railway, seven-tenths of the total cost is realized from the railway companies concerned, the recoveries being shown as deductions from the charges. The budget estimate for 1919-20 provides for normal charges.

Pages 105 and 106.

Criminal Investigation Department.—The large increase in the revised estimate is mainly due to the revision of pay of the ministerial establishment of the Criminal Investigation Department, and to the entertainment, as a temporary measure for two years, of three inspectors and 13 sub-inspectors and 19 constables for the surveillance of the registered members of criminal tribes in the districts of 24 Parganas, Midnapore and Bakarganj. The budget estimate for 1919-20 generally follows the revised estimate for the current year and calls for no remarks.

25. The large increase in the revised estimate as compared with the sanctioned estimate for 1918-19 is partly due to the imposition of surcharge pilotage fees in order to counter-balance the increase in expenditure due to the introduction of the system of guaranteed remuneration to officers of the Pilot service, and partly to the adjustment in the accounts of this year of Rs. 58,413 paid as hire by the Government of India for the pilot vessels "Fraser" and "Lady Fraser". The pilotage surtax, it may be mentioned, was discontinued from the 1st December last, as sufficient revenue had been obtained to meet the extra charges.

Owing to the cessation of hostilities, it is hoped that tonnage will gradually improve, causing a recovery in the receipts under the head "Pilotage receipts—Calcutta" and the budget estimate for 1919-20 has, therefore, been placed at Rs. 12,64,000.

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 107 to 116.

26. The sanctioned budget estimate for the current year was Rs. 11,12,000, but on the basis of the actuals of the first nine months of the current year, the revised estimate for 1918-19 has been placed at Rs. 12,47,000. In view of the decrease in the earnings of the pilots owing to the shrinkage of tonnage visiting the port of Calcutta, Government have guaranteed a minimum remuneration to them, and the increase in the revised estimate is partly due to this, and partly to a grant of Rs. 1 lakh.

sanctioned for the improvement of the port of Chittagong. As pointed out above the extra cost on account of the extra remuneration to the pilots will be more than covered from the revenue realized by the imposition of the surtax. The increase in expenditure would have been larger but for the savings caused by the failure of Mr. Mott to submit his report on the construction of the new Howrah Bridge and the non-payment to him of the fee of Rs. 15,750 provided for the purpose in this year's budget.

In the budget estimate for 1919-20 provision has been made for payment of remuneration to the pilots under the guaranteed system, besides larger provision for the purchase of marine stores and for mooring hire. It also includes Rs. 18,480 for the appointment of mate pilots as chief officers, and outsiders as junior officers, of the two pilot vessels "Fraser" and "La Fraser", in order to set free the leadsmen apprentices to study the condition of the river, Rs. 3,000 for the appointment of a superintendent for the branch shipping office, Kidderpore, Rs. 8,180 for the revision of the strength of shipping establishments and Rs. 2,400 for increase in the salary of the engineer and shipwright surveyor. The usual annual grant of Rs. 1,50,000 for the Chittagong Port Fund has also been provided.

REVENUE.

27. The actuals in 1917-18 amounted to Rs. 9,52,000 and the budget estimate for 1918-19 was Rs. 9,79,000. This has been raised to Rs. 9,89,000 in the revised estimate with reference to the actuals of the first nine months of the current year. Considering the steady increase in revenue during the last three years, the estimate for 1919-20 has been passed for Rs. 10,29,000 and includes larger collections from Government colleges and schools—General. Pages 14 to 1

EXPENDITURE.

28. The provision for education shows a decrease of about Rs. 5 lakhs as compared with the current year's sanctioned estimate and is mainly due to larger probable savings having been deducted in the light of the expenditure incurred by the department in recent years, as explained in detail below. Considering recent actuals, therefore, the budget for the coming year is a progressive one.

University.—The budget estimate of Rs. 16,15,000 is made up of recurring Imperial grants of Rs. 30,000 for administration, Rs. 20,000 for Law Colleges and Rs. 65,000 for the development of the University. Besides the above usual provision a lump provision of Rs. 15 lakhs has been made, at the instance of the Government of India, to provide for capital expenditure which the recommendations of the University Commission might entail. As it is unlikely, however, that any schemes following on these recommendations will mature early enough in the coming year to admit of so large an expenditure as Rs. 15 lakhs, a lump deduction of Rs. 12 lakhs has been made, and a net provision of Rs. 3 lakhs allowed to stand as the first instalment of the expenditure to be incurred in 1919-20. Page 117.

Direction.—Under this minor head are shown the salaries of the Director of Public Instruction and of his Assistants; also the pay of the establishments of the Director's office and the connected contingent expenditure. The reduction in the revised estimate is mainly due to savings under "Salaries" owing to the permanent head of the department being absent on deputation and the post of the Director of Public Instruction being held by an officiating officer. The budget estimate for the next year provides for normal charges. Page 118.

Inspection.—The sanctioned estimate was Rs. 9,28,000; but the revised estimate has been placed at Rs. 8,88,000 in view of the actuals of the first nine months of the current year. The decrease is mainly under "Inspectors of other Schools", "Salaries" and "Allowances" and is due partly to the deputation of certain officers to military duty, and partly to the discontinuance of the payment of exchange compensation allowance. The budget estimate for 1919-20 includes a provision of Rs. 36,134 out of the Imperial grants for the appointment of additional inspectresses of schools, Rs. 3,960 for house allowances to assistant inspectresses, and Rs. 1,080 for the entertainment of additional establishment in the office of the inspector of European schools. Pages 119 to 1

Government Colleges—General.—The decrease in the revised estimate for 1918-19 occurs under "Salaries" and "Allowances", and is due mainly to the difficulty of recruitment and to the deputation of certain officers to military duty. The reduction in the budget estimate of 1919-20 as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year, is mainly due to the deduction of large sums as probable savings based on previous actuals. The estimate for 1919-20 includes a provision of Rs. 5,550 for the extension of affiliation of the Hooghly College in philosophy and economics, and Rs. 1,500 for the appointment of a lecturer in mathematics for the Rajshahi College, besides provision for the whole year for one appointment of professor in the Hooghly College and one lecturer in the Chittagong College sanctioned in June and July 1918, respectively. A provision of Rs. 2,400 has also been made for the post of a lecturer of philosophy and logic in the Dacca College. Pages 121 to 1

Government Colleges—Professional.—The reduction in the revised estimate for 1918-19 is chiefly due to savings under "Salaries" in the Law College, Pages 124 to 1

Training Colleges and in the Civil Engineering College, and to the non-utilization of the lump provision of Rs. 40,000 for the proposed Secondary Training College for women teachers at Ballyganj. The estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 3,77,000 against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 3,94,000 for 1918-19 and the revised estimate of Rs. 3,65,000 for the current year. The decrease in next year's estimate as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year, is mainly due to the omission of the lump provision of Rs. 40,000 for the Training College for women teachers at Ballyganj. The coming year's estimate includes provision of Rs. 4,500 for the appointment of an instructor in mechanical drawing, and Rs. 1,728 for a lecturer in architecture, in the Civil Engineering College, Sibpur. Larger provision under supplies and services and contingencies has also been made according to the requirements of the Civil Engineering College.

Pages 127 to 130.

Government Schools—General.—The sanctioned estimate for the current year was Rs. 27,68,000, but considering the actuals of 1917-18 which amounted to Rs. 22,30,000 and the actuals of the first nine months of this year the revised estimate has been fixed at Rs. 22,75,000. The large savings in the revised estimate are mainly due to the non-utilization of the provision of Rs. 11,25,000 from Imperial grants in full. In the budget estimate for 1919-20 though the Imperial grants have been repeated, large deductions have been made as probable savings on the basis of recent actuals. The next year's estimate includes Rs. 8,520 for the payment of house allowances to zenana governesses and mistresses, the provision being in pursuance of the policy to replace male teachers in girls' schools by women teachers, and Rs. 720 for the appointment of an additional teacher of English for the Eden High School for girls.

Pages 131 to 136.

Government Schools—Special.—Considering the actuals of 1917-18 which amounted to Rs. 7,11,000 and the first nine months' actuals of the current year, the revised estimate for this year has been fixed at Rs. 7,09,000 against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 10,49,000 for 1918-19. The savings are partly under "Salaries" and "Supplies and Services" and partly due to the transfer of allotments to the Public Works Department for the construction of educational buildings; large lapses also occurred out of the provisions from Imperial grants owing to schemes not having matured in time to admit of the full provision being utilized. In the next year's budget estimate the Imperial grants have been repeated, but as it does not appear probable that sanction will be accorded and expenditure incurred in full, large deductions have been made as probable savings. The coming year's estimate includes Rs. 9,600 for the appointment of a member of the Indian Educational Service as Principal of the Government Commercial Institute, Rs. 4,200 for special Islami Matriculation examinations, Rs. 1,24,000 for the construction of buildings for guru-training schools, and Rs. 12,270 for the training of Moslem women teachers. Of the last two allotments Rs. 1,12,270 have been provided from the recurring Imperial grant of Rs. 5,50,000 for the improvement of popular education.

Pages 137 and 138.

Grants-in-aid.—The sanctioned estimate of Rs. 23,29,000 for 1918-19 includes Rs. 10,22,000 out of the Imperial grants. The large saving noticeable in the revised estimate is due partly to the inability of the department to utilize the Imperial grants in full, and partly to the transfer of sum to the Public Works Department for the construction of educational buildings. Though the Imperial grants have again been repeated in the coming year's budget, large deductions as probable savings have been made on the basis of recent actuals. Noticeable features in next year's budget are a provision of Rs. 1 lakh to meet a capital grant to the Calcutta Girls' High School and Rs. 30,000 for the furtherance of the madrasa reform scheme.

Pages 139 and 140.

Scholarships.—The sanctioned estimate for 1918-19 was Rs. 2,81,000 but this has been reduced to Rs. 2,69,000 in the revised estimate in view of the actuals of the first nine months of the current year. The budget estimate closely follows the revised estimate for the current year, and includes a provision of Rs. 2,000 for the grant of stipends to the children of Indian soldiers, and Rs. 5,400 to the children of indigenous dhais.

Miscellaneous.—Under this minor head provision is made for the payments of grants for the encouragement of literature, examination charges and other miscellaneous charges of the Department. The large reduction in the revised estimate of the current year is mainly under the lastnamed head, and is chiefly due to the non-utilisation in full of the provision for Calcutta messes and hostels out of the imperial grants. In the next year's budget besides normal provision the following allotments have been made :—

	Rs.
Calcutta hostels	1,89,000

Lump grant for the development of Primary Education.—In passing orders in the second edition of the estimates for 1918-19, the Government of India sanctioned a recurring assignment of Rs. 5,50,000 from imperial revenues for the development of primary education. The assignment is shown on the receipt side in the budget for 1918-19 under the head, "Transfers between imperial and provincial revenues," and an equivalent amount is provided in lump under the head "22—Education". Out of the lump grant Rs. 5,26,000 have been distributed as follows in the budget for the coming year :—

29. The estimate of Rs. 3,96,000 for the year 1919-20 is less Rs. 9,000 than the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 4,05,000 for the current year.

This is mainly due to a fall in revenue under the head "Receipts from paying patients," owing to the transfer of the European inmates of the Bhowanipur Lunatic Asylum to Ranchi. The fall in revenue under the abovementioned head is, however, counterbalanced to some extent by the increase in income from hospital receipts.

EXPENDITURE.

30. Medical Establishment.—Under this minor head is shown the salaries of the Surgeon-General, the Civil Surgeons and their establishments and contingent charges. It also records the pay of the assistant and sub-assistant surgeons paid by Government and of the reserve medical officers and subordinates. The decrease in the revised estimate is partly due to the transfer of a part of the provision of Rs. 54,670 for the revision of the pay of sub-assistant surgeons to other minor heads, to which their pay is debitable, and to savings on account of the late introduction of the revised scheme. The estimate for 1919-20, which generally follows the sanctioned estimate for the current year, includes, besides the increased rates of pay sanctioned recently for sub-assistant surgeons for the whole year, a provision of Rs. 3,300 for the appointment of second clerks in the offices of certain Civil Surgeons, and Rs. 1,50,000 to give effect to the proposal for an increase in the emoluments of the officers of the Indian medical service, which has been recently announced. Pages 143 and 144.

Hospitals and Dispensaries.—The accounts of all the Presidency hospitals and of the grants to hospitals and dispensaries together with the Government share of expenditure in mulassal hospitals and dispensaries are recorded under this head. The expenditure of the Albert Victor Asylum for lepers is also shown here. The large increase in the revised estimate, as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year, is mainly due to the revision of the pay of sub-assistant surgeons and to the increase in the pay of menials recently sanctioned. Larger expenditure under contingencies in the Medical College and General Hospitals, and under "Supplies and Services" in the General Hospital, also contribute towards the increase. The increase in expenditure under "Contingencies" and "Supplies and Services" is mainly due to the general rise in the price of all articles of contingency and medical stores. Pages 145 to 147.

The budget for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 12,39,000 against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 12,85,000 for the current year. The reduction is mainly under the head "Grants to hospitals and dispensaries" and is due to the absence from the next year's estimate of any provision for the non-recurring grant to the Belgachia Institute, as the last instalment amounting to Rs. 1,62,000 of the promised grant of Rs. 5,00,000 towards the cost of the buildings of the Institute will be paid in full this year. Next year's estimate provides for normal growth, and includes Rs. 11,970 for the revision of the pay of the menials of the Medical College and Presidency General Hospitals for the whole year, Rs. 2,748 for the appointment of two emergency officers for the Campbell Hospital, and Rs. 5,000 for the grant of war allowance to the nurses of the Campbell Hospital, besides several other schemes involving small expenditure, the details of which are shown in the schedule appended to this note. A sum of Rs. 20,000 has also been added for converting the Dacca Mitford Hospital into a State institution.

Medical Schools and Colleges.—Against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 5,10,000, the revised estimate for the current year has been fixed at Rs. 4,87,000 in view of the actuals of the first nine months, the savings being mainly under salaries. The estimate for 1919-20 generally follows the sanctioned estimate for the current year, the small increase in next year's estimate as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year being mainly due to the inclusion of the new schemes shown in the schedule attached to this note and to larger provision under "Supplies and Services" and "Contingencies" based on recent actuals. Pages 150 to 151.

Lunatic Asylum.—The reduction in the revised estimate for the current year and in the budget estimate for the coming year, as compared with the sanctioned estimate for 1918-19, is mainly due to the transfer of the European lunatics from the Bhowanipur Lunatic Asylum to Ranchi. For next year provision has been made for normal expenditure.

REVENUE.

31. The current year's estimate was framed in the hope that a grant of Rs. 12,000 would be received from the Indian Research Institute for the enquiry into diabetes. As this enquiry has been practically concluded a grant of only Rs. 2,000 is now expected and the revised estimate has accordingly been fixed at Rs. 8,000. In the year 1919-20, in addition to the normal revenue under this head, an income of Rs. 4,000 is expected from the sale of lymph and Rs. 3,200 as fees for water analysis. The estimate has therefore been fixed at Rs. 10,000.

Pages 155 and 156.

EXPENDITURE.

32. Sanitation and Vaccination Establishment.—The budget estimate for 1919-20, besides providing for normal charges on account of the staff of the Vaccine Department and the Sanitary and Deputy Sanitary Commissioners and their staff and establishment, includes Rs. 75,000 for an enquiry into the hookworm disease, Rs. 25,000 for an investigation into river pollution, Rs. 28,000 for the construction of a cold storage room in the Vaccine Depot, Rs. 5,000 to give a course of training to enable young medical men to take the Calcutta D. P. H. degree, so as to qualify for appointment as district health officers, Rs. 4,500 for the appointment of a special officer to scrutinize college and school buildings from the point of view of hygiene and Rs. 10,000 for the establishment of a Publicity Bureau to educate the general public in regard to public health matters.

Page 154.

Grants for Sanitary Purposes.—Under this head are debited the grants to local bodies for minor sanitary works and for water-supply and drainage schemes which are sanctioned out of the lump provision for sanitation. This accounts for the increase in the revised estimate for the current year, which includes a grant of Rs. 50,000 to the Krishnagar municipality for water-supply, Rs. 10,500 for the Jungipur drainage scheme, Rs. 10,400 for the Uttarpara water-supply scheme, Rs. 25,000 for the Kurseong drainage scheme, besides several small grants for sanitation purposes. The estimate of Rs. 12,000 in the budget of 1918-19 represents the provision for the enquiry into diabetes. As the enquiry has been stopped no provision has been made next year.

Expenses in connection with Bubonic Plague, Malaria and Epidemics.—The increase in the revised estimate for 1918-19 is mainly due to the purchase of quinine for distribution. The budget estimate for the coming year includes provision of Rs. 11,000 for Kala-azar investigation. Page 156

Lump provision for Sanitation.—The reduction in the revised estimate for the year 1918-19 is more apparent than real, as it is due partly to the transfer of a sum of Rs. 1,90,000 to the Irrigation Department for anti-malarial schemes, and of Rs. 23,000 to the Public Works Department for the improvement of the Berhampore sluice, and for the purchase of steel rods, etc., for sanitary projects to be undertaken by the Sanitary Department, and partly to some of the sanctioned expenditure having been debited under the heads "Grants for Sanitary purposes" and "Expenses in connection with malaria". The large provision in the budget for 1919-20 is in accordance with the policy initiated last year for schemes of sanitary improvement, and anti-malarial works. The details of the schemes proposed to be undertaken next year will be found in the schedule which forms an annexure to this note. Page 154

33. The estimate for 1918-19 was Rs. 2,99,000 but in the revised estimate this has been reduced to Rs. 2,88,000, chiefly owing to a decrease in the charges arising from the internments under the Defence of India Act. The budget estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 2,70,000, and besides providing for the normal charges includes Rs. 2,25,000 for the payment of personal and family allowances to détenus under the Defence of India Act, and Rs. 8,796 for the introduction of the scheme for the reporting of Bengali and Urdu speeches of importance in Calcutta and in the mufassal.

34. The agricultural receipts consist mainly of the sale-proceeds of produce at district farms and of receipts from sericultural nurseries. The budget provides for a small increase as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year, the increase expected being from the centres demonstration of the Kakya Bombai jute and Indrasail rice cultivation which the Agricultural Department have undertaken as an experiment "measure".

The head veterinary receipts includes mainly fees levied for the treatment of horses and cattle at veterinary hospitals.

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 159 to 161.

35. Veterinary charges.—The small decrease in the revised estimate compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year is chiefly due savings under salaries. The estimate for 1919-20, besides providing for the normal development of the veterinary department, includes a provision of Rs. 6,000 for the appointment of a second Imperial service officer in the staff of the Bengal Veterinary College, and a sum of Rs. 29,310 for the revision of pay of veterinary assistants; two-thirds of the cost of this revision, may be mentioned, will be recovered from local bodies.

Pages 162 to 167.

Agriculture.—The Agricultural Department at present comprises the following principal officers :—(a) a Director of Agriculture, (b) two Deputy Directors of Agriculture, (c) a Fibre Expert, (d) an Agricultural Chemist, (e) an Economic Botanist, (f) a Superintendent and a Curator for Botanic Gardens, and (g) Superintendent of Sericulture, and 22—District Agricultural officers.

The large increase in the revised estimate as compared with the budget estimate for 1918-19 is mainly due to the transfer of a sum of Rs. 20,000 to this head for the purchase and distribution of cotton seeds, an additional grant of Rs. 7,000 for experiments in water hyacinth, and to the larger expenditure of Rs. 25,000 under sericulture with a view to utilize the exceptionally good mulberry crop of the year. The cost of removal of the Director's office from Calcutta to Dacca, the appointment of ten district agricultural officers, together with the additional expenditure incurred in the extension of the areas under experiment, also contributed largely towards the increase. In September last the Government of India sanctioned an additional grant of Rs. 1,80,000 from Imperial revenues for the development of agricultural education, and though this amount does not appear in the current estimates among the sanctioned allotments of the current year, it is available for expenditure. A sum of Rs. 50,000 has already been transferred to the Public Works Department for the construction of certain buildings in connection with the establishment of an agricultural middle school at the Dacca farm. The budget estimate for the year 1919-20 provides for further development of the department. The estimate includes Rs. 90,000 for the establishment of two new district agricultural farms, and Rs. 19,872 for the entertainment of nine district agricultural officers, in pursuance of the scheme for the distribution of improved paddy and jute seed, Rs. 11,192 for the appointment of a third Deputy Director of Agriculture, Rs. 2,280 for the entertainment of 19 durwans for guarding the seed stores. Rs. 5,500 for the appointment of temporary establishment in connection with the census of cattle, Rs. 3,000 for additional establishment under the Economic Botanist, and Rs. 10,000 for the construction of a model rearing house at Berhampore. A provision of Rs. 1 lakh out of the Imperial grant of Rs. 1,80,000 for agricultural education has been made in next year's budget. A sum of Rs. 13,600 has also been added for the construction of certain agricultural buildings, and Rs. 1,080 for additional establishment under the Weaving Expert.

Co-operative Credit.—The budget estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 3,46,000 against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 2,56,000 for the current year. The coming year's estimate includes Rs. 21,672 for the appointment of additional auditors, the entire cost of which will be recouped by the levy of audit fees on the societies, Rs. 21,192 for the appointment of 4 sub-deputy collectors, 8 non-gazetted inspectors and 12 peons for strengthening the inspecting staff and Rs. 5,000 for the revision of establishment of the Registrar's office. A provision of Rs. 38,000 has also been made for the development of cottage industries.

REVENUE.

36. Owing to large demands from the Madras Government and the Military Department for the supply of sulphate of quinine, the current year's estimate under this head was fixed at Rs. 19,09,000, counting on revenue of Rs. 18,00,000 from the sale of quinine alone. This expectation has not been fully realized, the revenue anticipated this year being Rs. 17,00,000 only.

For the next year an income of Rs. 10,82,000 is estimated, as with the cessation of hostilities a fall in the demand for quinine from the Military Department is expected.

EXPENDITURE.

37. The original estimate for 1918-19 was fixed at Rs. 19,60,000 but it has been raised to Rs. 22,09,000 in the revised estimate, mainly owing to increased expenditure in the purchase of quinine and to an expenditure of Rs. 47,000 on the Director of Civil Supplies. Of the excess expenditure under quinine Rs. 1,75,000 will be provided from Imperial revenue and the cost of the Director of Civil Supplies will be eventually fully recouped by an assignment through the transfer head from the Government of India. The expenditure under this major head would have been still larger but for the transfer of Rs. 75,500 to the Public Works Department for the acquisition of land and the construction of buildings for the research tannery at Tangra.

The estimate for 1919-20 which has been placed at Rs. 10,68,000, besides allowing for larger provision for extension of the areas under Cinchona plantation in each of the plantations at Mungpoo and Munsong, includes Rs. 18,000 as a grant to the Bengal Home Industries Association, Rs. 78,400 for the equipment, establishment and other recurring and non-recurring charges of the research tannery, Rs. 2,50,000 for the development of industries, to give immediate effect, as far as possible, to the proposals of the Indian Industrial Commission, Rs. 3,000 for experiments in connection with hand-loom and other industries, Rs. 4,500 for the appointment of three District Fisheries officers, the cost of two of whom will be borne by this Government and the Government of Bihar and Orissa in equal shares, and of the third by this Government wholly, and Rs. 50,000 to meet the salary of the Director of Civil Supplies and the cost of his establishment and contingencies.

38. The receipts under this head consist chiefly of contributions for pensions and gratuities on account of officers of Government lent to foreign service for employment under the Court of Wards, municipalities and other local bodies and Native States. Deductions for pilot service pension funds are also shown under this head. The variations in the estimates are small and call for no remarks.

EXPENDITURE.

Page 177.

39. This head comprises charges for pensions, gratuities and compassionate allowances, and for the committed value of pensions to Government servants. The decrease in the revised estimate for 1918-19 as compared with the sanctioned budget is due to smaller expenditure under "Superannuation and retired allowances". The budget for 1919-20 provides for normal expansion of the pension list.

REVENUE.

40. The actuals of 1917-18 amounted to Rs. 1,40,000 and in view of the actuals of the first nine months of the current year, the original estimate of Rs. 1,22,000 for 1918-19 has been raised to Rs. 1,42,000 in the revised estimate. Following the revised estimate and allowing for small expansion the estimate for 1919-20 has been fixed at Rs. 1,49,000.

Pages 178 to 184.

EXPENDITURE.

41. The increase in the revised estimate is under the head "Stationery supplied from central stores" for which Rs. 9,60,000 has been taken against the sanctioned estimate of Rs. 8,50,000. This is due to the rise in the prices of paper and other articles of stationery. The small decrease under "Government Press" is mainly due to savings in the Jail Press owing to less expenditure in contract and miscellaneous printing and European stores.

For next year Rs. 9,25,000 has been provided under "Stationery supplied from central stores" and Rs. 34,000 for the purchase of typewriters and Rs. 4,000 for a book sewing machine for the Secretariat Press otherwise the estimate provides for normal requirement.

42. The receipts for 1918-19 were estimated at Rs. 6,81,000 against the actuals of Rs. 5,66,000 of 1917-18, which included Rs. 4,50,000 from unclaimed deposits. In view of the actuals of the first nine months of the current year, the original estimate of Rs. 5,50,000 for 1918-19 has been reduced to Rs. 5,10,000 in the revised, while on the latest actuals the revised under "Fees from Government audit" has been raised by Rs. 16,000. The large increase under the head "Sale of land and houses" in the revised estimate is mainly due to the credit under this head of the sale proceeds of the Amherst Street Police Hospital.

The estimate for 1919-20 is Rs. 6,99,000 and includes Rs. 5,10,000 for unclaimed deposits, Rs. 66,000 for "Fees for Government audit" and Rs. 75,000 under "Miscellaneous".

EXPENDITURE.

Pages 185 to 19

43. The estimate for 1918-19 was originally fixed at Rs. 9,14,000, but in the revised estimate this has been reduced to Rs. 7,96,000. The reduction, which is more apparent than real, is chiefly due to the adjustment, under appropriate heads, of the expenditure sanctioned by His Excellency from his allotment for petty grants, to the adjustment under the appropriate heads, expenditure on grain compensation allowance, and to the reappropriation of the reserve provision of Rs. 2,00,000 in order to meet expenditure under other heads. The expenditure Rs. 1,50,000 on the War Publicity Board is debited to this head. The charges on this account will, in the first instance, be debited to provincial revenues, but will eventually be recovered from the Government of India. Savings under this head have also been utilized in paying off the loans on account of the Bistupur embankment Uttarbagh work and the Moshagram-Delhaty embankment, and in making a remission in accordance with previous arrangements of Rs. 3,00,000 on the loan granted to the late Nawab Salimullah of Dacca.

As the War Publicity Board has been abolished no provision has been made for it in next year's budget. The coming year's estimate includes the following provision :—

	Rs.
For allotment of petty grants by His Excellency ...	40,000
For payment of Grain Compensation Allowance ...	4,00,000
For gratuitous relief ...	75,000
General reserve for unforeseen requirements ...	2,00,000

REVENUE.

44. The increase in the revised estimate as compared with the budget estimate for 1918-19 is chiefly under navigation receipts, due to the diversion of railway goods traffic, on account of the shortage of railway wagons to boat traffic on the canals. It is not now anticipated that this increase in canal-borne goods traffic will continue, and therefore the budget estimate for 1919-20 has been placed at a lower figure as compared with the revised estimate for 1918-19.

EXPENDITURE.

Page 189.

45. As compared with the actuals of 1917-18, the larger provision in the current year's budget is intended to meet necessary repairs which for many years had been postponed on account of the financial stringency. The decrease in the revised estimate is chiefly under "Establishment" and is due to the revised method of distribution of establishment charges recently adopted under the orders of the Government of India.

The decrease in the budget estimate for 1919-20 is chiefly under maintenance and repairs of the Hijili Tidal Canal and is due to the absence of any provision for special repairs to the canal next year.

46. The large increase in the revised estimate as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year, is due in part to the increase in water-borne goods traffic consequent on the scarcity of railway wagons, and in a large measure to the increased traffic in the Madaripur Bil Canal. The estimate for next year follows the revised estimate for the current year.

EXPENDITURE.

47. The revised estimate for the current year is higher by Rs. 1,34,00 than the sanctioned estimate for the year 1918-19, and is mainly due to the transfer to this head of a sum of Rs. 1,90,000 from the sanitation grant for expenditure on anti-malarial drainage projects. The excess would have been larger but for the credit of Rs. 89,000 on account of compensation awarded for the steam-tug "Dunneclaw" and two coal barges which were taken over by the military authorities for service in Mesopotamia. The large provision in next year's budget, as compared with the sanctioned estimate for the current year, is due to provision for certain drainage projects, connected with anti-malarial measures, viz., Rs. 1 lakh for the Pichaboni project, Rs. 1 lakh for the Amirabad and Rs. 50,000 for the Bullee B projects, for the improvement of waterways in the district of Dacca, and for the formation of a new Waterways Division for the management and development of the inland waterways in the districts of Khulna, Jessore, Faridpur and Bakarganj. Large provision has also been made for the continuance of the works already started, with a view to the investigation of the effect of floods in the Presidency, which includes Rs. 1,50,000 for the Hoorhoor Khal, and Rs. 1,00,000 for the Sagarputul Bexibazar escape. Other items of importance are the provision of Rs. 4,50,000 for widening the Madaripur Bil route, a work of urgent necessity owing to its great advantages as a route for steamers running to Cachar and Assam, and of Rs. 2,50,000 for creating a spill from the Bidyadhari river. The coming year's estimate also includes provision for the partial canalization of Tolly's Nala, for the reconstruction of the Kidderpore bridge, and for the purchase of one steam-tug and barges as coaling plant for the dredger "Foyers" and "Alexandra" to replace the plant taken over by the military authorities.

REVENUE.

48. Civil Works in charge of Civil Officers.—The bulk of the revenue under this head is from tolls. Considering the first nine months' actuals the revised estimate has been fixed at Rs. 1,40,000. The budget estimate of Rs. 1,69,000 for the coming year allows for normal expansion. Page 20

Civil Works in charge of Public Works Department.—The large increase in the revised estimate is mainly due to the payment of Rs. 24,000 by the Calcutta Corporation as the difference in the value of Government and Corporation lands exchanged in connection with the improvement and extension of the Campbell Hospital, of Rs. 25,000 in part payment of the cost of the site of the Police outpost at Kalighat, taken by the Corporation, and Rs. 19,000 on account of arrear recovery from the Port Commissioners of Calcutta of the half-yearly rent of the Strand Bank land. The estimate for 1919-20 includes the balance of Rs. 55,000 payable by the Corporation of Calcutta for the Kalighat Police outpost site and provides for normal expansion.

EXPENDITURE.

49. Civil Works in charge of Civil Officers.—Commissioners of divisions and Collectors of districts have been empowered, with reference to the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission, to make discretionary grants for general purposes of a public nature calculated to be of benefit to their districts. The expenditure so incurred is budgetted for under this head in the first instance, and the actual charges incurred are subsequently adjusted to the appropriate heads of accounts. Pages 191 and 192.

The estimate for the coming year includes the following :—

	Rs.
Augmentation grant	8,04,114
Grant to the Calcutta Improvement Trust ...	1,50,000
Special grants at the disposal of Divisional Commissioners and District Collectors ...	1,52,000
Imperial grant for the improvement of the port of Chittagong	3,25,000

Civil Works in charge of Public Works Department.—The increase in the revised estimate is more apparent than real, as it is mainly due to the transfer to this head of allotments from other heads for new works and for works in progress of the Police, Education and other departments. The large increase in the estimate for 1919-20 is mainly due to larger provision for urgent new works, for works in progress, for repairs and for minor works. The table below shows the position :— Page 192.

Provision for buildings in connection with the Police reorganization schemes has hitherto been made under "20—Police", but from next year such provision will be made under this head. Next year's provision works in progress includes Rs. 3,80,000 on this account. Owing to economy the expenditure on repairs has been kept down to the minimum during the past three years, and the larger provision for the purpose in the next year's budget, is to make up in part for the deficiencies thereby caused. A list of new works for the next year is annexed.

50. The increase of Rs. 1,17,000 in the revised estimate as compared with the sanctioned estimate is mainly due to the payment by the Government of India to this Government of Rs. 1,50,000 for the Bengal War Publicity Board, Rs. 47,000 for the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, Rs. 95,000 for anti-malarial works, Rs. 1,07,000 for improvements and repairs to Belvedere, Rs. 1,80,000 for agricultural education, and an assignment of Rs. 1,75,000 as compensation for the loss in exchange for the purchase of quinine at Java. Against these additional receipts must be set off the larger contribution from provincial funds to imperial revenues on account of the provincial share of the extra income-tax accruing from additional taxation.

Beyond the assignments from imperial revenues of Rs. 50,000 for the Director of Civil Supplies, Bengal, Rs. 6,000 to meet the cost of investigation of the fibre resources of India by the Bengal Fibre Expert, Rs. 3,25,000 for the improvement of the Port of Chittagong, Rs. 26,25,000 on account of the loss in income-tax revenue necessitated by the changes in taxation, and a larger payment to imperial revenues as the provincial share of the extra income-tax due to additional taxation, the assignment budget of the coming year calls for no remarks. No assignment will be made next year on account of the non-recurring grant to the Dacca University, the last assignment of the promised grant of a lakh each year for five years from 1914-15 having been paid this year.

Fishery Department ... Appointment of District Fishery Officers.

With a view to obtain first-hand information regarding the condition of fishermen and fisheries it is proposed to appoint, as an experimental measure, two District Officers on the lines of District Agricultural Officers. They will make a survey of the district from a fishery point of view, keep themselves in touch with fishermen and owners of fisheries, initiate co-operative societies amongst fishermen, replenish fisheries, both Government and public, take steps to facilitate import and export of fish, etc.

RESOLUTIONS.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 1.

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that—

- (a) provision be made in the Budget for Rs. 2,00,000, or such sum may be profitably spent, for the improvement of the medical services in the hospitals of Calcutta ;
- (b) this sum be provided for by a corresponding reduction in estimated expenditure under the head "Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department".

He said :—

"My Lord, in moving this resolution I desire to call attention to item '24A Medical' on page 2 of the Amended Draft Financial Statement. So far as I can understand, it is proposed to spend Rs. 48,000 less in 1918-19, and Rs. 1,85,000 less than in 1917-18, on medical services.

It is admitted on all hands, I think, that the hospitals in Calcutta are on an imposing scale, but from personal experience and from what I hear from several quarters it would appear that these splendid hospitals are woefully under-staffed and the officers are overworked. I have had painful experience of this, and my experience is corroborated by others who are in a position to judge.

It is well known that a very large percentage of medical officers have been called up and are employed on military duty owing to the war, but it is felt that a full explanation is due to a patient public as to what steps are being taken to build up the cadre up to its full strength in the hospitals.

I have searched in vain for information on this point in the other lucid explanations given in Part I by the Hon'ble Finance Member."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I think I can set the Hon'ble Member's mind at rest in respect of any idea that we have reduced the expenditure on Calcutta hospitals during the current year. Whatever alterations there may have been in the figures—and I have not, at the moment, traced the details to which he refers—they must be due to ordinary, what I might call, Budget corrections, made in view of the actuals of past years, for instance, or circumstances affecting ordinary fluctuations as between year and year. There has been nothing of the nature of any general retrenchment of expenditure on the Calcutta hospitals.

In referring to the general standard of work in the Calcutta hospitals during this year, I think it is essential that we should bear in mind the overshadowing effect of the war. As we all know, our medical cadre has been particularly depleted owing to a large portion of it being put to the purpose for which it was intended, namely, that of a war reserve, and we have had to carry on the medical administration of the province, not only in Calcutta, but still more markedly in the districts, with a staff which is far below the level that would be maintained in normal times, and far below the level at which we would have maintained it, if we had had a free hand in the matter. Obviously we have not had a free hand ; we had to give way to the preponderating necessities of the war. I think, too, that in considering the question we should bear in mind the strain under which these medical officers in Calcutta have been working, and pay a tribute to the devotion to duty and energy which alone enabled the hospitals in Calcutta to run during these years of heavy strain at the level of efficiency at which they have been kept. It must be common knowledge to all of us that the strain has been told a good many of our officers, mostly senior officers, who are working in Calcutta at the present time. Some of them are overdue for retirement, and last year we would have had a serious break-down had we not been able to give a rotation of short leave to a few. Rotation of short leave does not make for efficiency, but if we had not done this, the officers would not have been able to carry on.

Well, Sir, the Hon'ble Mr. Phelps has asked particularly when we intend to bring the hospitals in Calcutta up to their full strength. The actual facts are that at present the Medical College is short by one resident medical officer, as also is the Presidency General Hospital, while in respect of the latter institution, had the conditions been normal, it is likely that we might have taken up a request that has been pressed upon us, namely, to post a third medical officer there. We have not been able to do that as no men are available owing to our inability to get back from military duty some of our officers who are still thus engaged. We are in constant communication with the Army Department, pressing our needs upon them, but there again, we are only bow to their decision, which is come to in the light of their military requirements. So much then, for the pre-war standard. There is, of course, the general question whether the whole staff of some of the Calcutta hospitals does not require to be strengthened. I think there is a considerable reason for thinking that step to be desirable, but it is impossible to undertake now, while our cadre is so depleted, and, again, the whole question of the Indian Medical Service and its future is being examined by the Medical Organization Committee which is now sitting, and until we know the result of its deliberations, it is impossible to make large proposals involving gazetted officers.

That is the position as regards gazetted officers, but in respect of the minor establishments, we have, even during the war, been not neglectful of our needs. We have had to raise the pay of nurses, and we have raised the pay of menial servants. We have tried to the best of our ability to maintain a reasonable standard of efficiency, and when we complain of slight defects and deficiencies in Calcutta, let it be remembered how much more serious the defects and deficiencies have been for those living in the mufassal, most of whom have been deprived for the last four years of any hope of the Military Civil Surgeon to whom they ordinarily look. Let us bear their troubles in mind, when we harp upon our own.

Sir, for these reasons, I do not think a provision of Rs. 2 lakhs is required in the Budget, and I do not propose, therefore, to accept that recommendation."

Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, in this resolution and in several others which are in the agenda, proposals have been made for meeting suggestions for new expenditure by diversion from Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department. It would probably be convenient if at this stage I make a general statement regarding the financial position of the Public Works Department in reply to these suggestions for diversion. The total Budget estimate for 1919-20 is Rs. 1 crore and 13 lakhs and is in excess over that of the previous year by Rs. 28 lakhs. Some Hon'ble Members have been tempted to consider that it is a pot of gold into which they can dip their hands at will. The position in some respects is not unlike that of the grant for railways in the Imperial Budget.

Now, let me shortly show what this total for 1919-20 really means. We exclude the small item of 'Tools and Plant' and the fixed item of 'Establishment'. There remain 'Works in Progress,' 'Repairs' and 'New Works'. To complete 'Works in Progress,' Rs. 34 lakhs are required, and no one can suggest that there is any economy in stopping such works.

Mr. Phelps ; Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

As regards 'Repairs', the grant of Rs. 32 lakhs is Rs. 3 lakhs less the amount for which the Department has asked ; and in view of the fact during the past three or four years there has been a minimum of expenditure on public buildings, which, though inevitable for the time being, is economical in the long run, this sum of Rs. 32 lakhs cannot be considered excessive.

Finally, as regards 'New Works' a sum of Rs. 5 lakhs has been devoted to 'Minor Works' distributed over all the departments of Government, there is no extravagance in this item. Under the head of 'Communications' I made certain requests in my capacity as Member in charge of the Public Works Department, but my requests were cut down by half ; and as regards 'New Civil Works', they are the ultimate residue of a very large number of works which were examined by the Finance Committee. It may be held that the Public Works Department is after all only an adjective department that as far as its operations are concerned, they are at the instance of, on behalf of, all the other departments of Government. Nevertheless, in view of the statement of facts which I have given, speaking as Member in charge of the Public Works Department, I deprecate any further reduction of the items in the Public Works Budget."

The Hon'ble Mr. Phelps said:—

"My Lord, I beg to thank the Hon'ble Member for his very kind elaborate explanation. I have also got to thank him for the provision—a substantial provision—in the Revised Statement for Hospitals, although Hon'ble Member does not see his way to accept my resolution. I thank Hon'ble Member for the liberal provision and I am perfectly satisfied with the reply. I would now withdraw my resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 2.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that provision be made for two lakhs of rupees for the Medical College, Calcutta, for the following purposes :—
 - (i) a special Out-patient Department for skin, throat, nose and diseases,
 - (ii) a Dental College,
 - (iii) a Physical Laboratory, and
 - (iv) a Materia Medica Museum, and
- (b) that the expenditure be met out of the grant of 2½ lakhs of rupees provided for the scheme for the development of Kalimpong.

He said :—

"My Lord, in this connection I would refer to the letter No. 14471, dated Calcutta, the 21st September, 1918, from the Hon'ble Surgeon-General to the Government of Bengal to the Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial (Medical) Department, published in the annual report of the Medical College, Calcutta, for the session 1917-18.

With these few words, I move this resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

Sir H. Wheeler; Mr. Cumming.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, on the merits of the four schemes on which the Hon'ble Member would like to see money spent, there is no disagreement, and obviously that will be so, as I think he has taken them from the annual report of the head of the institution, and the advice that Colonel Calvert gives us as to the improvement of the Medical College is more likely than not to be sound. All these projects figure in our papers as desirable works. Also, among the list there is that which is the subject of the third resolution, and which is equally desirable. A special out-patient department for skin, throat, nose and ear diseases is undoubtedly wanted, and a dental college is a need of Calcutta at the moment. Unfortunately these schemes are terribly expensive, and, as an example, I may mention that in a project for a dental college which was sent up to us not long ago, we had an item of Rs. 4,71,000 for the acquisition of land alone, and apart from the cost of buildings, which has not yet been estimated, we had items of Rs. 37,000 for equipment, Rs. 7,800 for furniture and Rs. 33,000 for establishment. It will thus be seen that these works, eminently desirable as they are, do entail a great deal of money. The physical laboratory and a materia medica museum would, I believe, be most useful, but they have not yet attained even the dignity of an outline scheme. All these works we should like to see accomplished, and the reason why we have not been able to insert them in the Budget is that we have given preference to matters connected with the Medical College which we thought even more urgent. These are briefly, the improvement of the nurses' quarters, which is a most necessary work, because, on the provision of accommodation for more nurses depends all these subsequent developments and enlargements of the institution. They will call for more nurses, and if there are more nurses, there must be somewhere to put them, so that work really stands on the threshold of all these subsidiary projects. Secondly, after consideration in the Finance Committee, we decided to make a beginning with the Eye Hospital, and the provision in the Budget is only a beginning. This is a very large and expensive scheme which has been hanging fire for many years, and which I am assured by Colonel Maynard is a most crying need. Apart from that, let it not be overlooked that in this year and in the ensuing year we have spent, and shall spend, some Rs. 8 lakhs on the acquisition of land near the Medical College for future extensions. That is a very heavy bill, and in the light of it, it cannot rightly be said that we have not recognized the needs of the Medical College. When the large new avenue was being put through by the Improvement Trust to the west of the College, thus clearing frontage sites which would serve as an excellent boundary to the College on that side, we thought it would be folly to let the chance slip through our fingers, and we took up this land even at a very high cost. We now have room for expansion and it will be a matter of carrying out these different works in an orderly programme as our funds permit. I can assure the Hon'ble Member that we have not overlooked them, but our feeling is that we must consider other demands upon us, and, compatibly with them, it is not possible to spend more money this year on medical institutions in Calcutta. We have done more than we have been able to do for several years past, while we have also got to remember that there are the needs of the districts, and that it is a complaint which we have heard in the past, not altogether without justification, that, in proportion, more money is spent on medical institutions in Calcutta than on those in the muffasal. Therefore, Sir, I do not see my way to accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, in view of what the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has said, it is hardly necessary for me to make any remarks on the second item, namely, that provision be made by a corresponding reduction in the estimated expenditure under the head 'Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department' ; but, as this appears in the agenda, I may simply inform the Council that Government are already committed to the expenditure, and, in the second place, that the project will be a remunerative one."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; Sir N. Sarkar.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I am thankful to the Hon'ble Members for explaining the situation. I am also thankful to get the information from them that Government has full sympathy with the resolution which I have had the honour to move before the Council, that it is desirable that these improvements should be taken up, and that Government has spent and is spending large sums of money over the improvement of medical institutions is a matter of gratification to me ; but it will be for your Lordship to consider whether the improvements which have been suggested in my resolution demand the immediate attention of the Government. If it be said that these matters may stand over for some time longer, I have nothing to say on the subject, and, therefore, I think it necessary, after the explanations given by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler and the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming, that I should withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 3.

The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a sum of Rs. 1,00,000 non-recurring and Rs. 20,000 recurring be allotted for the extension of the Eden Hospital and for starting an Extern Maternity in connection with the same ; and
- (b) that the non-recurring expenditure be met out of the sum of Rs. 33,80,000 provided for works in progress (Civil Works in charge of Public Works Department), and the recurring expenditure be met out of the sum of Rs. 2,00,000 provided as General Reserve for unforeseen requirements.

He said—

"My Lord, I would have been the last person to move this resolution if I had not felt that the proposal contained in it was for some unforeseen requirements of an extremely urgent character. The Eden Hospital is the only hospital for clinical training in obstetrics for the students of the Medical College, Calcutta. The number of beds that are available for the purpose of such training are 16 and the number of admissions to such beds in the course of a year comes up to about 600 or a little over. Out of these 600 cases the students generally get about 400, the other 200 being allotted to the clinical teaching of the dhais and nurses. It would thus appear that these 400 patients have to be utilized for the training of about 180 students, 150 of whom are the University students, 20 military students and about 10 lady students, on an average. The average number of patients allotted to each student thus comes up to 2.2, while the University requirement is a minimum number of 6 patients to each student. It would thus appear that the number of patients in the Eden Hospital is inadequate to meet the requirements of clinical teaching and that extension is necessary in the interests of the students. This has become particularly so on account of certain developments in which our students—I mean the local medical graduates—are about to lose some privileges in Great Britain and elsewhere which they had been enjoying for some time past, on account of inadequacy of training in this particular subject of obstetrics.

I have said something about the needs of the students, and I may be permitted to devote a few minutes to discuss the needs of the carrying-women in Calcutta. The number of women in Calcutta of the child-bearing age comes to about 108,000. The number of births registered annually comes up to about 18,000. About 1,600 of such confinements take place in hospitals and the remaining 16,400 outside hospitals. Probably 50 per cent. or about 8,000 of these women go without any help or they can get only the help which is worse than any help—the help of ignorant dhais. The infant mortality in this city during the first week of delivery comes to about 33 per cent. There is no organization for treatment in pre-puerperal or post-puerperal state.

It would appear from the facts that I have already given that the average stay of a patient in the Eden Hospital cannot be more than 9 days, which means that many of those patients are admitted into the hospital already in a certain stage of labour, and they stay there for a week or a little over, and then discharged. In this country, my Lord, it is generally held that 4 weeks would be the proper time for which a woman should receive treatment in confinement. The higher authorities everywhere hold that a woman in a delicate condition should receive proper treatment for 4 weeks before and 6 weeks after labour. If we compare the state of things in Calcutta with those prevailing in Madras, we find that in the Medical College Hospital there a fairly good number of patients in delicate condition are kept for a certain period during which they are well fed, well taken care of, and in proper time they receive proper help. On the other hand, we have here in Calcutta only 16 beds for about 600 patients, and the average stay is only 9 days. Some of the patients in the most delicate condition have to incur the odium of overcrowding the wards on extra beds or even on the floor; and they have to do that in preference to leaving the hospital unattended. There is no question about the need of extension from the point of view of patients also.

One word, my Lord, about the need of the extension from the point of view of professors and teachers. Every teacher in the medical line thinks of enlarging the bounds of his knowledge by observations and at the present moment prenatal physiology and prenatal pathology have become extremely interesting subjects of study. There is no opportunity for our professors and demonstrators to make such study in the Eden Hospital.

Looking at the matter whether from the point of view of the pupil, the professor, or the patient, the need appears to be urgent. I know there are difficulties. I know also that one ward accommodating another 16 beds could not solve the difficulty, but it would give relief to another 600 women and that is a good deal. My resolution seeks to give relief to a larger number of patients by the introduction of a system of an Extern Maternity in connection with the Eden Hospital. I am extremely happy to find that the Calcutta Corporation has realized the necessity of such a step and have already made some progress in this direction. The Extern Maternity that I propose is somewhat of a modified form of the maternity that has been introduced by the Calcutta Corporation. With the Eden Hospital as the centre, a maternity may be organized with a presiding officer, say of the rank of an assistant surgeon, who will always be present in the hospital, with 2 or 3 nurses and dhais and a number of students and who would be always available for helping such patients. I know there is a misapprehension in some quarters that this help would not be availed of on account of the prejudices in the minds of our women. It is held in certain quarters, and I believe without sufficient justification, that many of our women would prefer death to being treated on such occasions. I claim to know something of our women in Bengal, particularly of the Hindu community, and in my experience I have never met with a case in which a woman has refused to be treated under such circumstances when treatment was necessary for her; and my assertion would be borne out by the fact that at the present moment there are about a dozen of practitioners who practise in this line, and in this line alone, some of whom have turned to be specialists of the highest order. The increasing number of patients in the Eden Hospital which has made it necessary for the Campbell and Belgachia Hospitals to admit labour cases also supports my view that there is a great demand for such help. I have no doubt that if an Extern Maternity be organized with the Eden Hospital as the centre, our women folk would avail themselves of the help and it would be also of great benefit to the students who will be able to profit by the clinical experience gained there.

I believe, my Lord, that I am not justified in trying to enforce upon the Hon'ble the Finance Member a resolution like this, particularly after the decisions in the Finance Committee. But my plea is this: that it is one of the unforeseen requirements for which provision has been made to the extent of Rs. 2,00,000, and as regards the capital expenditure I have just nervously proposed to utilize a portion of the Rs. 33,80,000 which is reserved for works in progress. So far as I understand, all these works are not likely to be finished within the course of the next year and, I believe, if Government will graciously accept this resolution there will not be much difficulty about spending this small sum for meeting the very urgent needs that I have pointed out.

With these few words I beg to commend the resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, the general line of answer to which I would refer the Hon'ble Member is that which I have just followed in connection with the previous resolution, and I would ask him to take those arguments in the main, without their repetition by me, viz., that we are already spending heavily on these Calcutta institutions, and in fact, up to the limit to which in the current Budget we think we are justified in going. Two points have a particular bearing on this question of the Eden Hospital, viz., preliminary provision for the accommodation of more nurses—obviously nursing plays an important part in cases of this kind—and the acquisition of land, part of which is specifically designed for this extension of the Eden Hospital. As to the merits of this project I am in full sympathy, and in fact, I have here before me notes outlining the very urgent needs of this hospital to the extent roughly of 2 wards with 20 beds in each, 10 more private rooms, a new out-patient block for the diseases of women, and accommodation for private rooms for nurses, surgeons, clerks, servants' quarters and out-patients. So we are perfectly conscious of the need, and I am also aware that the wards are overcrowded. Indeed, I am told that the Calcutta University Commission are likely to refer to that fact. Therefore, I do recognize this scheme as one of the most pressing wants, and when we get through with those works which we have in hand, I should prima facie be inclined to put this Eden Hospital extension as the next scheme to be undertaken. That may not be pleasant to the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur since it does not figure in his list, but it is essential to bring people into the world under as healthy conditions as possible, and we may well give a high place to this work in anything connected with the medical improvement of the country. But, Sir, we do not see our way to make this addition to the present Budget, and there is another point of practical difficulty. At the present moment the Public Works Department is depleted in its staff, like every other department, and I understand that with the projects which we contemplate in the Budget they will have their hands full, if not more than full, during the coming year. But I can assure the Hon'ble Member that I will see that all the requisite preliminaries of plans and estimates to the best of our ability are pressed on, and that if I find any opportunity during the year of beginning this work, we will seize it.

As regards his suggestion for an extern maternity work, which I understand is on the lines followed in hospitals in London, where students attend outside cases, thereby helping the patient and gaining experience themselves, the idea, in connection with the Eden Hospital, is new to me, and I am glad to hear from Sir Nilratan Sarkar that he does not think that prejudices will stand in its way very much. Primâ facie I should have anticipated obstacles of that kind, but I am quite willing to refer the suggestion to the Superintendent, and if anything can be done on those lines, to try it. But the expenditure involved in this respect would scarcely be heavy, even if there would be any addition at all ; anyhow, it would not be more than we can find funds for. But regarding the major project of the building scheme, our attitude will be that of pushing on the preliminaries with a view to undertaking it at the first opportunity that presents itself, although we cannot now promise when that opportunity will arise."

The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar said :—

"My Lord, having regard to the sympathetic attitude of the Hon'ble the Finance Member, I would ask permission to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 4.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that provision be made for four lakhs of rupees in the Budget Estimates for 1919-20 for Famine Relief for Bankura and other districts ; and
- (b) that the charge for the Provincial share be met from the General Reserve Fund of rupees two lakhs under the head 32—Miscellaneous for unforeseen requirements.

He said :—

" My Lord, I had not the opportunity of receiving the Revised Statement which has been subsequently brought to the notice of the Council ; the reason which led me to bring this resolution to the notice of this Council was that I felt strongly as to the distress prevailing in Bankura. Being one of the representatives of the Burdwan Division I thought it my duty to bring it to the notice of Government and that was the reason which led me to place the resolution for the consideration of the Council. It is a great pleasure to me to read the Revised Statement and to find that a provision of Rs. 50,000 has been made out of the Rs. 2,00,000—Imperial Revenue.

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

I have great doubts whether Rs. 50,000 will be sufficient for the purpose, but I shall not venture any discussion on the subject. I ought to be satisfied now with the provision that has been made, and therefore, my Lord, with your Excellency's permission, I would withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 5.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a lump-provision of Rs. 3 lakhs be made for famine relief operations in Bankura ; and
- (b) that the money required be provided for—
 - (i) by curtailing the expenditure by Re. 1 lakh under Agriculture 26A—Co-operative Credit (reducing the Budget allotment from Rs. 3,46,000 to Rs. 2,46,000) ;
 - (ii) by curtailing expenditure under Sanitation 24B (reducing the Budget allotment under the sub-head "Sanitation and Vaccination Establishment" by Re. 1 lakh) ; and
 - (iii) by allotting Re. 1 lakh from the lump-provision of Rs. 2 lakhs for unforeseen requirements (Misc.—32).

He said :—

"My Lord, the resolution about which I have given notice deals with the subject of making some provision in the Budget for the relief of distress in the district of Bankura, and if I may now add 'in some other places in this Presidency'. I would not have pressed this resolution but for the fact that in my humble opinion the provision that has been made is grossly inadequate. The reports that we have received during the last few days from Bankura and certain parts of the Tippera district point to the very widespread scarcity that has been prevailing in those parts for some time past, and which threatens to turn into a very widespread famine unless precautions are taken at once and in an adequate measure. Rupees 50,000 would hardly be a sufficient contribution towards the money which would be requisite. Even with the Imperial contribution of Re. 1½ lakhs it would mean only Rs. 2 lakhs and I need hardly take up the time of the Council by trying to emphasize the fact that a sum of Rs. 2 lakhs is hardly sufficient to cope with the immensity of the work which officers on relief duty will have to face. I, therefore, press this resolution, although I do so with some regret. The question arises as to where the money, which I have proposed should be set apart, is to be got. I propose that the Provincial share should be Rs. 3 lakhs, and the balance should be got from the Imperial grant. Rupees 10 or Rs. 12 lakhs would, therefore, be at the disposal of your Excellency's Government, and it would be in some respects a tolerably good contribution towards the funds for the relief of distress. The suggestion that I have made refers to two of the departments of Government as to which there has been an impression that there ought to be as much grant as possible from Provincial revenues. As regards the Department of Co-operative Credit Societies which appeals so much to popular fancy, and which has received the benediction of the highest in the land on several occasions, and is daily praised by officials and non-officials, I might perhaps be accused of being a heretic for standing up in this Council to propose that there should be a curtailment of the Budget allotment on this head. I consider it my duty to point out that although this department is one of the most important of which the Government has got to take charge, there is still a limit to the extent to which public money should be spent on this department, and there are occasions when one has got to point out that these Government grants will not only do no good, but may be instrumental in doing positive harm and mischief. My Lord, I do not know if many of my colleagues are aware of the fact that I was connected with the working of this department some years ago, and at the time when this movement had to be guided through the struggles of early infancy. It was in those days that in consequence of the agitation over the Partition of Bengal, anything that was being proposed by Government was regarded as ban and anathema by the people. They used to think that every movement started by Government carried with it a sort of insidious desire to decoy people into unknown regions where they might be landed in some unforeseen difficulties. In those days there was one Registrar only, Mr. K. C. De, who is now the Commissioner of the Chittagong Division, and he had only two gazetted assistants and half-a-dozen Inspectors, and every time the Registrar went up to Government for financial help, he was told that this was a movement which ought to grow up spontaneously, and that it should not be forced on the people, as if it were an exotic growth on an uncongenial soil. We were also told, on the authority of no less a man than Mr. Woolfe, who is justly regarded as one of the highest authorities, not merely in England, but also on the continent and America, about the inadvisability of officialising a popular movement like this. I, therefore, submit that although Government ought to contribute towards this department in order to help the growth of this movement, Government should also take care that in course of time it does not become an official department like the other departments which your Excellency's Government has got to control. I find from the Budget estimates that the allotment this year exceeds by a little over a lakh of rupees the actual expenditure that has been incurred within nine months, and on that basis the actual expenditure which will be credited to this department by the end of this month will be a lakh and-a-half of rupees more than last year's expenses. The plain question is whether there is any necessity for increasing the Budget allotment by so large an amount, even conceding that the movement has been making progress and some Government help is necessary.

Now, my Lord, I looked up the figures and I find that there are at the present moment something like 52 central banks, and agricultural societies numbering a little over 3,300. For the control, and if I may say so, for the guidance of these societies it is proposed to give the Registrar not merely a Personal Assistant but four Joint Registrars on so high a salary as Rs. 500 and Rs. 400 a month, plus Rs. 100 local allowance, one Chief Auditor, 42 Inspectors and 2 Additional Inspectors. This means that the staff is going to be increased by 20 Inspectors and two Additional Inspectors, although the increase in the number of societies is not to be more than 300 in all. I would not have grudged this expenditure but for the fact that this large army of officials going about the country would naturally place the people in a position from which they will gradually lapse into a condition of lethargy and indolence. Why should this large army of officers be required? Hon'ble Members may not be aware, because one who has not actually been in touch with the working of the department, is not in a position to know that the work of these officers in the co-operative department is not of a very exacting character. The societies are situated somewhere in the interior of the district; the Inspector or the Joint Registrar or any other high officer of the department goes there and sends for the Chairman of the society, a few members may appear and he enquires of them whether there has been any defalcation or embezzlement. The actual auditing does not take more than twenty minute even in the biggest societies that now exist. That is not the sort of work which puts any strain either on the physical or mental capacity of these officers. There are Government servants who are four times as hard-worked who have not got this local allowance of Rs. 100 nor have they got the privilege of seeing their services mentioned in eulogistic terms every year in Government resolutions. My own impression is that the advance in this movement has not been so great or so marked as to necessitate an extra expenditure of a lakh and more which it is proposed to place at the disposal of the department. The extra expenditure will entail an allotment of over Rs. 60,000. Then, I find there is provision for temporary establishment costing over Rs. 15,000. There is then a lump-provision for additional establishment costing over Rs. 32,000, and office expenditure under head 'Miscellaneous Works' works out to Rs. 15,000. I submit, my Lord, that going over the question very carefully I do not find any sufficient justification for all the big provision that is going to be made for this department. There is another item which has called for lengthy changes costing over Rs. 9,000. I do not understand the utility of that lengthy change; at any rate Rs. 9,000 is a very big figure. I, therefore, think that instead of spending this money in this way it might be more usefully spent in alleviating the distress and discharging one of the highest and most humanitarian duties of which mankind can be capable.

On the second head, I have referred to 'Sanitation' under head 24-B. This is another department about which it would be blasphemous to say anything except in praise, but if I venture to make one or two remarks it is only with a view to point out that there are some allotments under this head the money for which might be more usefully employed in affording relief to famine-stricken people; I hope I shall be excused. There is a provision relating to the hookworm disease of Rs. 75,000; then there is a lump-provision of Rs. 10,000 for the Publicity Bureau; then there is a provision of Rs. 25,000 for investigating the cause of river pollution. So far as some of these works are concerned I do not know, at least the necessity of investigating the causes of hookworm disease as I am not a medical man, but I know the disease is somewhat prevalent amongst the people of this country; this is a kind of disease whose germs flourish very much in tropical countries, and if we find it prevalent in this country we may be sure that it is owing to our people living amongst the most insanitary surroundings which tend to develop the disease. I do not know how this money is to be spent for investigation at any rate I consider it a high figure for an investigation of this kind. Then there is Rs. 10,000 for the Publicity Bureau. That figure seems to me to be very high, because, so far as the dissemination of news is concerned, it can be done through the vernacular newspapers, and for which no Publicity Bureau is necessary. Then, about the question 'of river pollution' I do not understand the problems nor appreciate the money spent over it, but even admitting that this Rs. 10,000 is necessary, I would suggest that the money be found from the lump-provision under head 'Sanitation' of Rs. 13,17,000, of which, by the way, we have not been given any details, but I think that this Rs. 1,10,000 can very well be got out of that lump-provision. All things considered, that sum might easily be set apart from allotments made under the head 'Sanitation.'

Lastly, there is a reference to unforeseen charges. There again, I submit that a lakh of rupees can easily be set apart for these purposes. My Lord, on these grounds I beg to propose that over and above the allotment that has already been made, viz., Rs. 50,000, another allotment of about 3 lakhs of rupees ought to be made under the head. 'Famine Relief' and that the money be found by curtailing expenditure under the heads 'Co-operative Societies,' 'Sanitation' and 'Unforeseen Charges'. Before I sit down I do not wish to say that the expenditure of the Co-operative Societies is as a rule very much more than its normal requirements. What I mean to say is that the expenditure might be kept for the present within the limits which appeared to have been sufficient for the work during the last year. I only object to the extra expenditure for which I see no warrant."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"Sir, the substantive part of the Hon'ble Member's resolution is that a sum of half-a-lakh which he understands is devoted to famine relief is not sufficient. It may be pointed out that his resolution refers only to one district, Bankura; and I suggest that he went beyond the bounds of his resolution in discussing areas in which scarcity is likely or imminent. He should have spoken on the previous resolution of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur, which was a general resolution. However, I may point out that had I spoken on that resolution, I would have been quite prepared to place the Council in possession of the facts regarding famine relief regarding which both Hon'ble Members appear to be under a misapprehension; but before doing so now, I think it is only right to point out that the Hon'ble Member who has spoken has devoted a disproportionate part of his time to the discussion of defects which, he alleges, exist in the existing co-operative organization.

I proceed to the substantive part of his resolution. It is not a fact that only Rs. $\frac{1}{2}$ lakh has been given. The total sum placed under the head '33—Famine Relief' is Rs. 2 lakhs altogether, because one and-a-half lakhs is obtained from Imperial sources and half-a-lakh is derived from Provincial sources. Practically the whole of that will be devoted to Bankura. A sum of Rs. 75,000 also appears in our Budget under another head and is available for gratuitous relief; and for the present it is ear-marked for the other area, Brahmanberia, to which the Hon'ble Member drew attention. Both Hon'ble Members who have spoken have entirely overlooked the fact that in famine relief organization there is, to use the language of the United Provinces Government, 'a recognized prophylactic', the free and liberal distribution of agricultural loans. For both areas during the present year I have placed at the disposal of the District Officers more money than they have been able to distribute so far; and for the forthcoming year, we have entered no less than Rs. 6 lakhs in the Loans Budget. Originally the amount estimated was Rs. 4 lakhs, and that has been increased to Rs. 6 lakhs; and if operations are extended and we require more, more will be obtained; but the sums which have been allotted for relief work, gratuitous relief and agricultural loans in the ensuing year will not bear unfavourable comparison with the amount spent in the previous years for which we have records of distress in these two areas. If we are fortunate enough to have a good monsoon in the present year, I foretell that by October next in both areas there will be no further necessity for any special expenditure by the State. We should not overlook the fact that in both areas the District Boards are expected to do something, and I think we are entitled to call upon them to do something. So much, Sir, for the substantive part of the resolution.

As regards the excessive expenditure in the co-operative credit movement to which the Hon'ble Member has taken exception, he no doubt is a practised advocate and can argue on both sides of any question. I have heard him accusing Government for its laxity in not spending more on this movement. As regards the head 'Sanitation' the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur will deal with that point. I propose to visit shortly the two areas in question. I have refrained from doing so hitherto in order that the situation might sufficiently develop. The Hon'ble Members will realize that after many years of experience of famine conditions, not only in Bengal, but in other Provinces, I am not likely to be lax in seeing that Government do their duty."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose that part of my hon'ble friend's resolution which seeks to curtail expenditure under ‘Sanitation—24B’ (reducing the Budget allotment under the sub-head ‘Sanitation and Vaccination Establishment’ by Re. 1 lakh). As a member of the Sanitary Board I have seen the work which has been done and also as a member of the Malaria Sub-Committee I have seen the work which is now being done by that Sub-Committee. Hitherto our grievance has been, at least for the last two or three years, that Government have not allotted a sufficient sum for ‘Sanitation’, but this year a decent sum has been set apart by Government for sanitation—Rs. 13,00,000—that will meet some of our crying needs. Having got that sum allotted for sanitation we now say that a sum of Re. 1 lakh ought to be curtailed and spent for other purposes.

Then, as regards the hookworm disease, it is well known that it is prevalent in damp places, in mining districts and in tea gardens. In fact, it came as news to us when we heard for the first time from some of the experts that nearly 80 per cent. of the people of these localities were infected with the disease. Your Lordship was pleased to convene a meeting of the representatives of the mining districts and tea gardens here, and we all here heard your Excellency's speech and also what the other gentlemen, some of them experts, had to say on the subject. It is necessary, we all thought, that a sufficient sum of money should be set apart to tackle this question, and it is better to spend money, not in dribblets, but in a lump-sum, so that we shall be in a position to exterminate the disease, root and branch, from the infected localities. My friend says that it is much better that we should spend money in feeding people ; that is no doubt a very good thing, but can you say that simply by feeding people you guard against this hookworm disease? I was told just now by a friend of mine that it is just like building a house at a very large expense in order to prevent the house from catching fire. We may spend any amount of money, but if there is a fire near by, the house is sure to catch fire. So we must spend sufficient money to try to exterminate this disease, especially in mining districts, and in those tea garden areas and also in damp places where it is prevalent. The purpose of my hon'ble friend is no doubt very good—he wants Rs. 3 lakhs for famine relief operations in Bankura. Government will provide a sufficient sum of money for famine relief, but I am bound to say that this provision ought not to be made by curtailing expenditure on sanitation.”

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

“My Lord, I do not really know whether my hon'ble friend Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq, is serious. So far as I remember, last year about the Budget time I moved a resolution for allotting Rs. 50,000 for improvement of co-operative societies, and so far as I remember the then Hon'ble Member in charge, Mr. Beatson Bell, opposed my motion. That motion was put to vote, and if I remember aright, my hon'ble friend, Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, voted with me. Since then and in spite of the opposition of the Government the motion was passed and Government, to give effect to that resolution, provided Rs. 12,000 last year, because no complete scheme was ready then. This year as that resolution had already been passed by the Council I brought it to the notice of the members of the Finance Committee and the Finance Committee came to the conclusion that the balance of Rs. 38,000 should be provided. Last year when my hon'ble friend voted with me perhaps he was not a great disbeliever in the benefits which our people derive from the co-operative movement. I do not know what is the real reason which makes him change his opinion. Perhaps my hon'ble friend's reason is that whatever the Government does must be opposed irrespective of any consideration as to whether such opposition is detrimental or beneficial to the interests of his countrymen whom he professes to represent in this Council. If that be the reason then his position is explained :—when I was against Government my hon'ble friend was with me and now that the Government is giving effect to the resolution which was passed with his support he is consistent in his principle of opposing the Government. My Lord, I should have thought that of all persons my hon'ble friend who was connected with this department for some time as a member of the Provincial Civil Service and who is presumably conversant with the rural areas knew what great benefits this department could confer upon the poorer section of my countrymen. I should have thought that my hon'ble friend knows that although a large sum like one and-a-half crore is now invested in agricultural credit loans, not even 5 per cent. are the members of the co-operative societies. I should have thought that my hon'ble friend knows that in jute alone the raiyats of Bengal lose 28 crores of rupees through middlemen. My Lord, I do not desire to deal with this question further, but my hon'ble friend's opinion is so contrary to all opinions—Indian or European—that I can hardly think that my friend is serious especially after his vote last year in favour of extension of co-operative movement.

My Lord, his second point of attack is 'Sanitation.' For years past educated Indians have been urging that Government were not spending enough on sanitation. Only the other day I was reading in the papers of a slight breeze between the Hon'ble Mr. Ironside and the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Banerji. If that debate had taken place a few days later Mr. Ironside could use Mr. Haq's speech as a very effective weapon against Mr. Banerji.

But here again I hardly think my hon'ble friend is serious. His position seems to be that whatever Government do must be attacked. About sanitation we all know that 71 persons out of every 100 in Bengal die before they attain the age 30, 85 per cent. die before 40 and 93 persons out of 100 die before they reach 50. In view of this deplorable state of public health, can any one who represents the public in this Council urge the curtailment of provision made for expenditure on sanitation? I do hope, my Lord, that my hon'ble friend is not serious and that he will yet see his way to withdraw the resolution and withdraw his remarks opposing spending money on sanitation and co-operative societies."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, I have to get up to defend the provisions that have been made under the head of 'Sanitation' by the department under me. Already the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray and the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter have spoken on the necessity of the provision made by the Government under head 'Sanitation', and it is not my desire therefore to make a further defence of any provision under the head of 'Sanitation' generally, but to point out to the hon'ble mover of this resolution that when he made those remarks about the provision which we have made under the head 'Sanitation', he evidently did not take the trouble to study the question carefully. I think pages 75, 76 and 83 of the amended draft Financial Statement make amply clear all the various important schemes that we have to take up and propose to take up in this connection, and hope to try and start within the year under Budget. I think his memory is particularly short regarding the discussion that took place in this Council in connection with river pollution, and it was because although I was not able to meet the requirements of the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur at the time that I promised on behalf of Government to go into the question of river pollution that this provision has been made. If we turn to the figure for the amount provided for enquiry into the hookworm disease, the survey regarding the havoc played by kala-azar and other matters connected with the prevention of disease in Bengal, it will be seen that in view of the well-established fact that these different diseases are playing such havoc on the public health of Bengal that the provisions really are very modest.

He perhaps might attack us on the question of the establishment of the Publicity Bureau. Here again, what I have to bring forward is that in every country, in every civilised country, it has been thought necessary to educate the public mind through such a medium and we are only following the lead given in other countries in a matter of this nature. Therefore here again if we look at the provision and if we look at column 9 of the remarks on page 76 where this provision occurs, we will find that the provision is really a very modest one. I do not think, Sir, that any very strong case has been made out by the hon'ble mover of this resolution. He brings it in first of all with a pleading for the famine-stricken people of Bankura with whom I am personally concerned. Then he attacks the co-operative movement with which I have no concern directly, but regarding the question of sanitation all I can say is that the amount that we have provided under the different heads is the minimum amount that we could possibly have provided and that it would not be possible to reduce it further, and I therefore strongly oppose any amount being taken from the head of Sanitation for the purposes which the Hon'ble Member has in view."

The Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookerjee said :—

"My Lord, I have listened to the debate with great attention. There is one important point which I think has not been touched upon, viz., the direct effect of the improvement of sanitation on the economic condition of the masses. It is amazing to me that our political leaders, who either in this Council room or on outside platforms always advocate the improvement of the condition of the masses and the development of industry should take up such a position and ask for a curtailment in the expenditure on sanitation. It is true that Indian labour is apparently very cheap, but it is also true that we cannot compete with foreign labour. The reason is that Indian labour is generally inefficient owing to their bad health. Your Excellency has very prominently brought to the notice of the public the bad effect of the hookworm disease on our labour. It has been satisfactorily proved in the investigation by the Industrial Commission that hookworm disease renders our labour inefficient. Although we generally pay only four to eight annas a day per head as compared with two to three shillings a day in Europe, still the quality and quantity of work of our cheap labour is from $\frac{1}{4}$ th to $\frac{1}{8}$ th to that of foreign labour. The reason for this is the inefficiency of our labour chiefly owing to bad health from hookworm disease. It is indeed amazing to me that a member like my friend Mr. Haq who takes so much interest in the general welfare of the country should come forward and ask for a reduction of grant under the head of 'Sanitation' and to divert it to Famine Relief Fund. The object of my friend's resolution is undoubtedly very noble, but we know from past experience that whenever there has been a famine, Government has always come forward to save the lives of the people and we therefore need not and should not ask Government to reduce expenditure on sanitation to save money for famine relief."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"My Lord, I do not accuse the hon'ble mover of the resolution of opposing the Government for the sake of opposing them, as my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter has done. In fact, I have the greatest regard for him as our political leader, and a more unselfish and devoted patriot is hard to get in the whole of the presidency of Bengal. But I must oppose the resolution. Perhaps my hon'ble friend, when he sent in notice of this resolution, did not know that a sum of Rs. 2,00,000 was to be spent on famine relief, but it is now a fact and so in a way, out of my hon'ble friend's demand for lakhs, 2 lakhs have already been allotted for famine relief and for the remaining 1 lakh he can certainly depend on the Government, and should a necessity arise the Government would not be so irresponsible and callous as not to come forward with the necessary contribution from the Unforeseen head. The hon'ble mover wants to curtail the expenditure on Co-operative Movement and also on Sanitation and in doing this he apparently overlooks the fact that it is by the diffusion of the principles of co-operation and proper sanitary arrangements that we hope to fight famines in future. It is therefore that every pie spent on co-operation and sanitation is an investment which would in times of real necessity repay hundredfold. My friend remarks that the work of auditing accounts is an easy job, but, my Lord, I think it otherwise. I am connected with two or three rural banks—of course they are not co-operative banks—and I know that it took two weeks for an auditor to audit their accounts and we had to pay Rs. 150 for each of them. I therefore object to any curtailment of the budgeted amounts on Co-operative Movement and Sanitation."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

" My Lord, I find from the discussion that if I carry this resolution to a division I will find very few supporters, but having been responsible for having made two suggestions at any rate, which have brought down on my devoted head remarks from the other side of this House, I do not think I can with justice to myself make a precipitous retreat without saying a word or two by way of personal explanation.

It has been remarked that I have been labouring under a misapprehension as regards this point, but I also beg respectfully to point out to Hon'ble Members who have accused me of carelessness, if nothing worse, that they have misunderstood not merely the purpose of the resolution but what I submitted for the consideration of this Council when I moved this resolution. It was never my intention, so far as the Co-operative Societies Department is concerned, that the expenditure should be curtailed below what experience has taught us to be the normal requirements of the department, but what I suggested was that the increased allotment that now figured in the Budget estimates should be deleted, and this money be utilised for a very exceptional purpose—a purpose not merely exceptional but of the utmost urgency, and regard for which should take precedence of our anxiety to help the administration in other matters. I simply suggested that the extra staff that it is proposed to place at the disposal of the Registrar is not necessary and therefore that expenditure might very profitably be postponed for one year more.

My hon'ble friend, Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray, has pointed out that I was not quite correct when I said that it required only a few minutes to audit the accounts of a society. Ordinarily my own experience is that it does not take more than a few minutes. If certain auditors took two weeks to audit the accounts of a rural society, they must have been very dull. I do not know who they were, but the society's accounts may also have been of abnormally large proportions. So far as my recollection goes it never took me or any of the officers who were working at that time more than half-an-hour to audit the accounts of the most complicated society that then existed. I know that the movement has made great progress, but at the same time what the department is doing is this :—It is splitting up large societies into smaller ones so that the increase in number is more illusory than real. However, I am not here to say anything as to the merits or demerits of the movement because I do not for the moment wish the Council to believe that I am not one of the greatest enthusiasts that can possibly be in favour of this movement. I have spent some of the best days of my life in whatever service I could render in popularizing the movement among my own countrymen, and I do not think that I would be recanting the many advantages that I derived from my life as an officer of that department were I at this moment to express anything but approbation of the work that is being done by this department.

My Lord, as regards 'Sanitation' I fully agree with the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray that this one of those departments as to which Government cannot be too generous in making allotments in the annual Budget, but this I pointed out as one of two items of expenditure which might not do much harm or injury if postponed for a year, and I even said that if no postponement was possible that the money requisite might be got from the lump-provision of about 13 lakhs under the head of 'Sanitation'. I know that the Sanitary Board is going to wage war against the hookworm; I do not propose to take sides either with them or with the bureaucrats; let them fight it out, but what I suggested was that if the money was absolutely necessary, the money could have been got from the unallotted lump-provision that was made under the head of 'Sanitation'.

Before I sit down, my Lord, I must say a word or two as regards the observations made by my friend, the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter. He has got the great privilege of being one of my friends ever since the time we entered the Presidency College together, and he can certainly draw upon that circumstance with as much liberty as he likes in making any remarks that he pleases, but I wish to point out that it never occurred to me that during my activities in this Council I posed always as an unrelenting antagonist of Government. I cannot see how a proposal to allot Rs. 3 lakhs could be called going against the Government. I think one ought to be credited with the best of intentions when one really comes forward with suggestions to fight famine, and if I have ventured to make a suggestion I have done so in response to a duty which I think Government equally like myself owe to the people of this country. It is difficult for men in the position of my hon'ble friend living in palatial buildings in Elgin Road and Theatre Road to conceive the appalling distress which prevails in mufassal districts when agricultural conditions become unfavourable—conditions which at the present moment are aggravated by the fact that the price of cloth and other commodities of life has taxed to the utmost the slender resources of the people of the land. My Lord, it was not in a spirit of opposition that I brought up this resolution before the Council. I do not know if I can be accused of being a perpetual antagonist of Government just as much as there are some persons in this Council who can be accused of going in favour of Government on every and any occasion whether Government take a reasonable attitude or not. There are people who always oppose the Government and there are people whose mission in life is always to support the Government, but I belong to neither category. When I put forward my suggestion it was with the best of intentions to suggest to Government ways and means for finding out necessary expenditure on famine relief operations. I placed before the Council my most earnest conviction that Rs. 2 lakhs will be absolutely insufficient to meet the needs of the situation. Two lakhs of rupees would not be sufficient to meet the funeral expenses of the dead, it would not be sufficient for the needs of the dead if there is a widespread famine. It is for this reason that I suggested that a larger allotment should be made. With Rs. 9 lakhs to be got from the Government of India it would make Rs. 10 or 12 lakhs which I wanted for this purpose. There has been tremendous opposition lest the co-operative fund be depleted or the funds of the Sanitary Board, but this is also a duty of your Excellency's Government, and it is for your Excellency's Government to decide what to do in this matter."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"Sir, I may be permitted to make two observations before this debate closes. The first is that I am sure there is really no difference of opinion about the propriety of making due provision for famine relief. If that general proposition is accepted, I must still protest against the abuse of the English language. The word 'famine' has a very definite signification. I have seen famine in the United Provinces; I have seen it in Bihar; but except for a certain period in Bankura there has not been in Bengal famine—as the word is really understood in the Famine Code—for almost twenty-five years.

In the second place I wish to observe that the total amount that has been allotted during the current year is not inconsiderable. Hon'ble Members should remember that considerable sums have been given for relief works for agricultural loans and for gratuitous relief. In the forthcoming year, the estimates of which we are discussing to day, the total amount allotted under different heads, apart from expenditure which the district boards may make, is 8½ lakhs; and as I have said before if, as time progresses, it is found necessary to spend more money in view of developing circumstances Government will be prepared duly to recognize and meet the new situation."

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 6.

The following resolution stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that the provision for gratuitous relief under the expenditure head "Miscellaneous" be raised from seventy-five thousand rupees to two lakhs of rupees; and
- (b) that a deduction of Rs. 1,25,000 be made from the provision for Police buildings to counterbalance the said increase.

He said :—

"My Lord, in view of the provision already made under the head 'Famine Relief' in the revised Financial Statement, I think that I should withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.

The Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that no expenditure be incurred next year for the Dacca University pending the action taken on the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission, and that the sum of Rs. 3 lakhs set free be spent for the spread of primary education.

He said :—

“ My Lord, before I say anything on this resolution I think I should make my ground clear in order to guard myself against any attack coming from any of my friends from the Eastern quarters interested in the establishment of the Dacca University. I know fully well that it is a decided proposition now and that it is sure to come into existence at no distant future. But I think the sum set apart in the next year's Budget could be spent for some more useful purpose for the present. Your Excellency's announcement, if I remember aright, at Dacca was that at least Rs. 15 lakhs would be spent next year for the furtherance of that scheme. It is mentioned in the Budget that Rs. 15 lakhs would have been spent, but for reasons known to the department at least Rs. 12 lakhs would be set back and only Rs. 3 lakhs would be spent. As far as I understand it is pending the consideration of the recommendation of the University Commission upon the report of which body the Government's policy will have to be considered, which will surely take some time. It may be, my Lord, that at the end of the year we would hear that money could not be spent. This year at least a very large sum could not be spent for reasons best known to the department, though we hear that out of the Rs. 18 lakhs shown to be unspent some amount had been spent for the construction of building and so forth. My idea therefore is that this paltry sum of Rs. 3 lakhs may not be provided in the next year's Budget. The establishment of the Dacca University would require a large sum and your Excellency's Government would be able to secure that amount out of the cash balance with the sanction of the Government of India which can be provided next year. No useful purpose will be served by an expenditure of Rs. 3 lakhs. As soon as my hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Ray's Primary Education Bill is passed into law, which, I hope, is sure to be passed on the 27th of this month, a large sum would have to be spent by Government to give it a fair start, encouraging the mufassal municipalities to come forward and take advantage of the provisions of the Bill : and it is for that purpose that I have put forward my proposal that the Rs. 3 lakhs set apart for the Dacca University be allotted for the spread of primary education. I know Government are very anxious to develop the village life, and the village self-government is also very likely to come into existence ; but in the village life the most important thing is the adequate arrangement for the primary education. So any sum that can be spent for primary education ought to be spent at any cost. I need not say much on the importance of the primary education, but whatever is done either for imparting improved knowledge in sanitation or any knowledge in agriculture or industrial knowledge, primary education is the basis. The sum set apart for primary education, to my mind, is very inadequate. I do not like to take much of the time of this Council by discussing this question and with these few words I beg to recommend the resolution for the acceptance of this Council.”

Babu S. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I have great pleasure in supporting this resolution. It appears that your Excellency's Government have already made some provision for the development of primary education in rural areas. I find in page 33 of the draft Financial Statement that there is a lump-grant of Rs. 5,50,000 for the development of primary education, but it appears that a large portion of this amount will be spent in rural areas. It appears that the following are some of the items :—

	Rs.
Increase in the pay of teachers of aided primary schools ...	80,000
Establishment of primary schools for girls in Panchayati unions ...	30,000 and so on. I find that out of this Rs. 5,26,000 only Rs. 78,000 or in round numbers about Rs. 80,000 may be said to be allocated to municipal areas, and one of them the following :—

Building for model primary schools for girls ...	Rs. 16,000
--	------------

Even if the whole amount be spent in municipalities, the grant to local bodies to enable them to raise the rate of stipends of untrained teachers in aided primary schools and mukhtabs for boys will be Rs. 60,000, provision for lower primary schools in municipal areas Rs. 2,664, making a total of Rs. 78,664, but as my friend has already suggested that if the Primary Education Bill be passed, a sum of at least 3 lakhs will be necessary for the development of primary education in municipal areas. I find from the opinions given on the Primary Education Bill one opinion given by Mr. Samman who was the Education Secretary to your Excellency's Government and he gives this opinion. He says : ‘ Municipalities already spend more than one lakh of rupees a year on education of all sorts. With a population of less than 2 millions only, four lakhs would be required for universal free education of boys between the ages noted. The difference of 3 lakhs represents an incidence of only 2½ annas a head of the municipal population of Bengal outside Calcutta.’

According to his estimate, and he was an authority on these matters, it will be necessary to have at least 3 lakhs of rupees for the development of primary education in municipalities. Of course I admit that we ought to levy an education cess for the development of primary education in mufassal municipalities, but if we depend entirely upon education cess for the development of primary education, then all I can say is that primary education will not be developed. We require some help from Government, and I find also from the last report of the progress of education in India a remark by the Education Secretary to the Government of India, Mr. Sharpe, that the Government ought to be prepared to meet some portion of the cost for the development of primary education and ought not to leave everything to local bodies. The other day when the Hon'ble Mr. Sarma asked for a grant of one crore and 80 lakhs for the development of education and sanitation of the country, the Finance Member said that these are local matters and ought to be tackled by the local Governments. So I think it is a matter which entirely rests with your Excellency's Government. I find that provision has been made for all and sundry requirements, but no provision has been made for the development of primary education in the mufassal municipalities. I am glad to see that a very good sum, I think about

The Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

5 lakhs of rupees, has been set apart in the Budget of the Calcutta Corporation for the development of primary education within the town of Calcutta and that without the imposition of an education cess. So it will be necessary to make some allocation of funds for the development of primary education in the mufassal municipalities.

Then as regards ways and means, I do not agree with my hon'ble friend it is for your Excellency's Government to find out ways and means."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, the resolution before us has been worded in the usual characteristic picturesque way of the Hon'ble Member, but I am not very much concerned with that. From the point of view of Government what I have to say is that it is quite impossible for the Government to divert the three lakhs of rupees from the scheme intended for the Dacca University. On the question of primary education generally, which has been brought forward not only by the hon'ble mover of this resolution, but by the gentleman who has followed him, I shall say a few words when I conclude. Meanwhile, I would like to point out to the hon'ble mover of the resolution that I confess I cannot follow the working of his mind regarding the Dacca University scheme. He does not want that the Dacca University scheme should not be proceeded with, but then he argued that because he thought all the money would hardly be spent, that it may be spent on something more useful. Well, of course primary education is undoubtedly a matter on which, as this Council knows very well, the Government is only too anxious to make a real start, but when it comes to taking that money from the Dacca University, I am afraid that that cannot be done. The hon'ble gentleman has himself said that we are pledged to the scheme; he has himself referred to the speech your Excellency made the other day when at Dacca in connection with making an early start with this scheme, and in spite of these two very important facts, he still wants to defer making any expenditure during the current year. He knows full well, if he had the time to read this morning's paper, that the report of the University Commission is likely to be sent in soon, and that the European members of that Commission are about to proceed to England after their work. What does all this mean? It means that before very long the Government may naturally expect to know what the Commission have recommended. I may say at once that in the matter of the Dacca University, the Government are bound to fulfil its pledges. What is more, we have been recently told by the Government of India that they consider it very important that no time should be lost in giving effect to such of the proposals of the Commission as may be approved after full consideration, that in view of this we must really begin the work during next year. I therefore do not see how we can possibly expect the large saving which the Hon'ble Member says we shall have in the provision we have made for the University requirements. It is a curious working of the mind, too, when we come to realise that when the question of primary education is perhaps more before the country than it is now, whether Hon'ble Members of this Council would propose that higher education is to suffer at the expense of primary education. On this large question I do not propose to go into at present.

I shall now turn to what has fallen, curiously enough, from the Hon'ble Member in charge of the Primary Education Bill which he thought would be passed into law at the last meeting of the Council. He has brought in a Bill for the introduction of a voluntary system of education for rural and urban areas, and to-day we find him not only stating facts which we know to be true, namely, that we cannot entirely depend on the levy of an education cess, but what is surprising is that he is supporting this resolution because he is jealous that we have provided Rs. 5½ lakhs for district boards and not for municipalities; well, that is a very narrow point of view to take, especially when he knows that ample opportunity will be given to municipalities when the new Bill becomes law to try and improve their requirements so far as the needs of primary education in these areas are concerned. My Lord, I regret that I cannot recommend to this Council the acceptance of the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri. I think that the Government have delayed long enough giving effect to the recommendations of the Dacca University Commission, and it was only because Government thought that as the Calcutta University Commission had been appointed that they stayed their hands for the time being so as to enable them to give effect to whatever changes in the Dacca University scheme the Commission might recommend. This Government did not for a moment think and do not think that the University Commission would in any way recommend the abandonment of the scheme or modify it in such a manner as would again mean further delay, and I therefore recommend that the resolution be opposed."

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I am opposed in this by the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, the Member in charge of Education. I am not really convinced that this paltry sum will be of any avail in giving a start to the establishment of the Dacca University. Of course, I saw from your Excellency's announcement at Dacca that at least Rs. 16 lakhs would be provided, and if that was so, I should have been the last to say anything about it. I think if it be necessary to give the Dacca University a start, Rs. 3 lakhs would be a very unsuitable sum to provide for it. What I mean, my Lord, is that if it is urgently necessary to start the college this year, then a large amount which is in the hands of Government may be made available. I have seen the detailed Budget and I have not heard any details of the Rs. 3 lakhs which it is proposed to provide in next year's Budget. The only thing which struck me is that the sum is a very paltry one and to give a start to the Dacca University that sum is quite inadequate. If it be necessary to do something for the satisfaction of the Dacca people, that a start is being made, that can be done in other ways. Without seeing the details of the Budget I am sorry I have not been convinced as to the necessity for keeping this sum especially reserved for the purpose and not spending anything out of it for any better purpose. Though there is some provision for the levy of an education cess, still if anything is to be done to give a fair start to the working of the Primary Education Act when it is passed into law, I think Government should be liberal enough to spend a decent sum for the help of the mufassal municipalities for the present. It is with this view that I brought this motion forward, and I would have been glad if anything came of it. I propose Rs. 3 lakhs; if Government think a lesser sum would be enough, I would accept it, but I am sorry, my Lord, that I am opposed entirely. It was far from my mind to doubt the utility of the establishment of the Dacca University. I did not bring forward this proposal with any idea that we should discourage the establishment of the Dacca University in any way. My idea was that to give a fair start to primary education, an adequate sum is necessary and that Government should come forward with some substantial help, and in that view I brought forward this proposal. I still hope that Government will see their way to accept the resolution."

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 8.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta the following resolution which stood in his name went by default:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that suitable provision be made in the next year's Budget to give effect to the scheme of water-works for the Chandpur Municipality; and
- (b) that the necessary amount be taken out of the provision of Rs. 1,25,000 in the Land Revenue Budget as a first instalment of the expenditure to be incurred on circle officers.

AFTER LUNCH.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—Item No. 9.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the sum of Rs. 1,620 allotted for the grant of personal allowance of clerks in the office of the Commissioner of Police, Calcutta, be added to the grant for the provision of primary scholarships.

He said :—

"My Lord, by moving this resolution I beg to bring two facts to the notice of your Excellency's Government. Firstly, it is proposed in the Financial Statement to grant personal allowances to five of the clerks in the office of the Commissioner of Police, and it appears from the statement that these clerks draw a salary of Rs. 100, Rs. 125, Rs. 150 and Rs. 200 and it is proposed to add to their remuneration by the grant of personal allowances, and the only reason that I find in the statement for the grant of these allowances is that they have had no increase of pay for 5 years. My Lord, I beg to submit that if an increment is to be granted in the pay of ministerial officers, the case of the clerks and assistants in the offices of District Magistrates and District Judges should receive prior consideration than that of those ministerial officers employed in Calcutta. The head assistants and superintendents as well as the senior assistants in a Magistrate-Collector's office and the sheristadars, nazirs and head clerks in the District Judge's office have to perform certainly more responsible duties than the assistants in the office of the Commissioner of Police and their work is certainly much harder than that of these clerks. I am afraid, my Lord, that in the case of the presidency police the Government have to concede generally the proposals made by the authorities of the police, and in making these allotments the cases of other officers of Government are not properly considered. I suggest that this sum may be added to the funds allotted for the provision of primary scholarships and I make this suggestion because I think the amount allotted for these scholarships which is a little over Rs. 2,000 is not sufficient for the purpose. I beg to submit, my Lord, that this grant of personal allowance is to my mind a little bit of extravagance and should not be granted, and that the money can be better utilized either by increasing the grant for primary scholarships or in even other better purposes than this. With these words, my Lord, I beg to commend the resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

Mr. O'Malley : Maulvi Abul Kasem : Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“ My Lord, the hon'ble mover is under a misapprehension in stating that only Rs. 2,000 has been allotted for scholarships. If he will turn to page 140 of the Civil Budget Estimates, he will see that altogether Rs. 14,500 are allotted for upper primary scholarships and Rs. 1,500 for lower primary scholarships ; the total provision for primary scholarships in the Budget therefore comes to Rs. 16,000 and this figure is based on actual requirements. It represents the sum which Government provides for primary scholarships, and in addition to them scholarships are also provided by local bodies. The resolution starts with the assumption that the sum of only Rs. 2,000 is allotted for primary scholarships, and that it is necessary to increase it by Rs. 1,620 to bring it up to the total of Rs. 4,000 ; and I think therefore that when a total of Rs. 16,000 has already been provided, it will be realised that the object of the mover is met. I submit also that it would not be fair to dock the clerks of the office of the Commissioner of Police of their allowances. The sum of Rs. 1,620 would not go far in providing scholarships throughout the province, but its loss would mean a great deal of difference to clerks living in Calcutta in these days of high prices, who receive these allowances only in cases of hardship and long service on the same pay. For these reasons, I am unable to recommend the resolution to the acceptance of the Council.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“ My Lord, when I gave notice of this resolution I never intended to press it to a division, but I only wanted to bring to your Excellency's notice and that of your Excellency's Government the fact that the money was wanted for primary scholarships and also the fact that it is not fair to grant personal allowances to clerks in the office of the Commissioner of Police whose office is situated at Government headquarters. The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley has said that it will not be fair to deprive them of these personal allowances in these hard times, but I submit, my Lord, that in these days the work of the clerks and ministerial officers in mufassal stations is much harder than that of the ministerial officers at headquarters. What I wanted to do was to submit for your Excellency's consideration and that of Government the fact that the first party who deserves consideration at the hands of the Government in the matter of personal allowance were the ministerial officers employed in mufassal offices, but if Government think otherwise I must submit to it and I must withdraw the resolution.”

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the increase in fee receipts and the savings, if any, for each of the Government colleges be spent for the improvement and development of that institution by bettering the prospects of the teaching staff and meeting other requirements of the college, and that necessary changes be made in the Budget accordingly.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

He said :—

“My Lord, recently about a year ago, increment has been made in fee rates for the Krishnagore, Hooghly, Chittagong and the Rajshahi Colleges and last year I brought forward a resolution—that fee rates should not be increased—for the benefit of the poorer section of the student community. Unfortunately I was not successful. The reply of Government was that a uniformity of rate should be observed. I expected not only a uniformity in fees but a uniformity in other advantages, that uniform educational facilities would be provided and the money would be utilized for that purpose. I do not know what has been done about the other colleges—I mean the Krishnagore, Hooghly and the Chittagong Colleges—but I know something of the Rajshahi College. The number of students in Rajshahi College is about 800, next to Dacca I believe, where the number is about 900, only a difference of about 100 students, and in other colleges, namely, Krishnagore, Hooghly and Chittagong Colleges, the number does not exceed 250. The fee rate in the Rajshahi College has been raised from Rs. 4 to Rs. 6, thus effecting a monthly gain of about Rs. 1,500 with 800 students which comes to about Rs. 18,000 annually. If this increment be utilized for providing facilities in educational matters and other requirements of the college, the institution will no doubt be much benefited, but unfortunately this is not done, inasmuch as there is not a single officer of the Indian Educational Service in that college. I noticed from the last quinquennial report that there are about 11 officers of the Indian Educational Service in the Dacca College and even in the Krishnagore, Hooghly and Chittagong Colleges there is one such officer in each of these institutions, though their number of students does not exceed 250. On account of the absence of an officer of the Indian Educational Service in the Rajshahi College the senior officers in that college do not get the benefit of officiating vacancies, while in other colleges the junior professors do benefit by acting allowance, and the result has been that some of the best professors have left the institution for better prospects and some are trying to go elsewhere. That is a thing, my Lord, which I think that Government should not consider reasonable, and it is for this reason that I have brought forward this resolution to draw the attention of your Excellency's Government to it. If the students are to have the benefit of getting lessons from the best professors in the department the prospects should be made attractive to draw the best men to the service. In this year's Budget there is a provision of Rs. 120 a month for the appointment of a lecturer in Mathematics. I think a man standing high in Mathematics cannot be satisfied with Rs. 120 for any length of time. One may be very anxious to get the appointment, but after a year or so he will be dissatisfied and will go elsewhere. As far as I know there is no adequate arrangement for the library in the Rajshahi College. There are lots of other requirements. Then there is the question of the erection of a hostel for the construction of which only Rs. 50,000 has been allotted, though there has been such a large increase in the recurring income, while the cost of a decent hostel cannot be anything under 2 or 3 lakhs. It is more for drawing the attention of your Excellency's Government to this inequality of advantage in the Rajshahi College that I bring forward this resolution. My proposal is that if an uniformity of rate is to be observed the uniformity of advantages for imparting education in all these colleges should also be considered. Then there is the case of the Professor of Mathematics who is serving for the last 30 years with credit and that of the Principal of the institution who, at a time when Government was anxious to abolish the institution, saved the situation, and it is now one of the most efficient Colleges in the mufassal, still nothing has been done for them, and I hear that they are discontented with their present appointments. I therefore venture to think that arrangements should be made for giving two or three officers of the Indian Educational Service to this college, and if the professors who are serving there for a long time are thought competent may be promoted or transferred elsewhere, they being replaced by men of superior merits. Such an arrangement will benefit the students also considerably.”

Mr. O'Malley.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“My Lord, the hon'ble mover refers in this resolution to certain orders of Government which were passed nearly two years ago which raised the fees in four Government colleges from Rs. 4 and Rs. 5 to Rs. 6 a month. My hon'ble friend now wishes that the additional income obtained from fees in these colleges should be spent on their improvement and development. He has fortified his case by referring solely to the Rajshahi College in which he himself is keenly interested, and as I have told him before I am myself interested as having been at one time President of the Governing Body. As regards his reference to savings, I presume he means the excess of fee receipts over the cost of maintenance. I can assure him that in none of these schools are there any savings at all. After allowing for the receipts from fees and endowments, the last of which are comparatively small—the amount is only Rs. 17,000 a year—there is a deficit every year in every Government college, which has to be made good by Government. So far, therefore, from the increased fees to which I have referred having resulted in savings, there is still a heavy deficit. I will quote some figures.

The Krishnagore College costs Rs. 56,000 a year, of which only Rs. 15,000 is obtained from fees. In the Sanskrit College, another college in which fees were increased, the fees after the increase accounted for Rs. 11,000, and there is a difference of Rs. 17,000 which is made up by Government. The cost of the Chittagong College is Rs. 49,600, of which only Rs. 26,000 comes from fees. The expenditure on the Rajshahi College is Rs. 89,000 and fees and endowments account for Rs. 65,000, leaving Rs. 24,000 a year to be found by Government. There is no surplus to be spent on the improvement and development on these colleges; they have to depend on the grants made from our general revenues. The increase in fees has undoubtedly increased the income which Government derive from the colleges, but they are far from being paying concerns; and as I shall mention shortly, Government has incurred considerable additional expenditure since the fees were increased and will shortly incur more. In any case it is out of the question for Government to treat each college as a separate entity in this way. Government is anxious to improve the colleges in which fees have been increased; but it is also equally anxious to improve colleges in which fees have not been raised. The claims of all the different colleges have to be considered and money allotted for their requirements according to the relative urgency of the reforms which have to be introduced. Apart from this, it would be out of the question to spend extra receipts in bettering the prospects of the teaching staff in four out of our eight Government arts colleges. The hon'ble mover has drawn rather a moving picture of the poor prospects of the professors and lecturers of the Rajshahi College, but I may remind him that the teachers and professors belong to graded services and they must receive the pay and promotion common to those services. It would be impossible to give them preferential treatment while they are at a particular college, say, the Rajshahi College, and to give them extra pay temporarily as a special concession merely because the fees in that college had been raised two years ago. If this were done, the teachers of other colleges would be clamorous for transfer to the Rajshahi College, simply in order to get the extra pay, and the teachers left in the other colleges would have good cause for complaint.

I would remind the hon'ble mover too that since the fees were increased Government has done a great deal for these colleges. My hon'ble friend has referred to the proposal to entertain an extra lecturer in Mathematics at the Rajshahi College. There is an increasing number of students taking Mathematics up to the B. A. and B. Sc. standards and the work has proved to be too much for the existing staff, and it is therefore sought to relieve the staff by appointing an extra lecturer. Then again, Government has provided the sum of Rs. 50,000 for a new hostel. Here I think the hon'ble member is under some misapprehension. He assumes that that is all that Government intend to give for the hostel. He says that the hostel will cost 2 or 3 lakhs. I think his estimate is somewhat excessive—it may have been raised since I last saw the plans—but I think it is under two lakhs. The half-lakh now budgetted for is merely the first instalment of the cost of that scheme. The whole amount has not been provided for in one year because the building will not be built in one year; the requisite amount sufficient to carry out the scheme will be provided in subsequent years. He has neglected the case of other colleges like Krishnagore for which Government is doing a great deal. It is important that these mufassal colleges should be developed, especially in regard to the selection of subjects taught, because in the mufassal colleges, unless there is a considerable variety of subjects, students will flock to Calcutta and the mufassal colleges will not attract them. The Krishnagore College up to 1917 had only limited affiliation. It was affiliated in Political Economy, Political Philosophy and Persian up to the B. A. Pass standard, and the only affiliation up to the B. A. Honours standard was in Sanskrit, which does not appeal to a very large number of students. It was desired to extend the affiliation. In order to do that a number of additional appointments were made last year—a professor of English, a lecturer in English and a teacher of Mathematics and a professor of Philosophy. The college has consequently been able to obtain affiliation in English up to the B. A. Honours standard, in Philosophy up to the B. A. Pass standard, and in Mathematics up to the B.A. and B.Sc. Honours standards. Additions to the building and equipment of the college as well as to its library have also been made, and Government is now considering the question of appointing a Professor of Political Economy and Political Philosophy. The efficiency and popularity of the college have been greatly increased by these measures since the fees were raised. To take the case of Chittagong, another college in which the fees were raised, only last year Government appointed a lecturer in English, a lecturer in Logic and a professor in Economics so as to allow of affiliation in English up to the B.A. Honours standard and in Economics up to the B. A. Pass standard, and in Logic up to the Intermediate standard. The Hon'ble Member has also referred to the case of the Hooghly College. He is under a misapprehension in thinking that the fees were raised in that college. Before 1917 the fees stood at Rs. 6 and they have remained at that figure. I may however tell him that in that college an additional Professor of English was appointed last year. It is also proposed to extend the subjects taught at this college and to obtain affiliation in Philosophy and Economics up to the B. A. Pass standard from the commencement of the next session. It is on this account that Rs. 5,500 has been provided in the Budget for a Professor in Economics and a Professor in Philosophy as shown at page 71 of the Financial Statement.

I am afraid, my Lord, that I cannot recommend the resolution for the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I am glad that attention is being given to the reforms of these colleges, but what I complain of is this :—I know that Government is spending a good deal on these colleges, but what I mean is that there is no uniformity of expenditure in these colleges. A large sum is spent for Rajshahi, but the expenditure per head would not be more than Rs. 50 or Rs. 52—it ought to be Rs. 150 per head. In the Presidency College it is of course very high; in Dacca it is over Rs. 200. Government in introducing a uniform fee rate should see that there is uniformity of advantages allowed to the students as well as to the teachers. I explained in detail the difficulties of the professors in the Rajshahi College. I understand that Chittagong and Hooghly are going to be affiliated in Economics and by that arrangement they are going to have professors of the Indian Educational Service for Economics. In the Rajshahi College in the last 6 or 7 years, they have been teaching Economics—it is only affiliated in Pass standard—and a man in charge of Economics is a lecturer on Rs. 100 or Rs. 150 a month—and the result is that the man is anxious to leave and is trying to secure an appointment either in the Hooghly or Chittagong College. If there is a new affiliation the man who is doing good work for the last 6 or 7 years ought to be given some preference, but that has not been done and in other colleges where there is new affiliation, men in superior service are going to be appointed. In the case of the Rajshahi College, the present incumbent is anxious to leave. My point is that if there is some increment in fee rates—I do not mean to say Government is going to be relieved of the entire charge for the college—that increment should be utilised in the improvement of the college. The per head expenditure in the Rajshahi College was previously about Rs. 50 or Rs. 52; it is now come down below Rs. 30; that should not be the case. It is to bring these inequalities to your Excellency's notice that I brought forward this resolution. I do not press for any decision at once. With these remarks I beg to withdraw my resolution."

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that provision be made for additional medical schools either in Calcutta or in suitable mufassal districts other than Burdwan, as may be recommended by a special committee appointed for the purpose; and
- (b) that the same be met from the allotment of Rs. 1,25,000 provided for the appointment of circle officers.

He said :—

"My Lord, the arrangements for medical help in the mufassal are very inadequate. I know that in my thana, though there are over 80 villages, with a population of 2 lakhs, there are only two or three qualified civil hospital assistants under the service of the district board, and there is no other qualified doctor there. This is the case in the interior of Rajshahi. I believe that this is the case almost everywhere in the mufassal in this Presidency. The other day my hon'ble friend, Mr. P. C. Mitter, was giving me details of the state of medical aid in the mufassal, and he has made a special study of this, and I hope in this resolution he will see his way to say something about the state of medical help in the mufassal. There are some arrangements for municipal town headquarters of each district where there is a supply of medical practitioners, but the state of things in the mufassal is very deplorable. Your Excellency's Government are anxious to develop the resources of village life, and the proposed Act of Village Self-Government that is going to be passed very soon is an instance. The Act will no doubt develop the resources of the village and will see to the needs of sanitation and agriculture and so forth, but anyone having means will naturally be anxious to leave the village for the safety of his life and for the sake of his health, owing to the fact that there is no adequate arrangement for medical help in the mufassal. In this state of things, my Lord, it is urgently necessary that some more medical schools should be started. I am glad arrangements have been made for opening a medical school at Burdwan and that enquiries had been made for starting a school elsewhere, but the difficulty of want of suitable hospitals stood in the way. But in Calcutta there are several hospitals, such as the Mayo Hospital, the Sambhu Nath Pundit Hospital and other institutions where a medical school on the lines of the Campbell Medical School can be started. Recently there is a great demand for medical education, and most of the students applying for admission in medical schools are being disappointed. On the one side there is great demand and on the other side there is great anxiety for it. In the mufassal, I think some quacks supply the need or some homeopathic doctors are doing something, but that is not enough, and that is no real help. In this state of things my proposal is that some more money should be spent on medical schools. I see that there is an allotment of Rs. 1,25,000 provided for the appointment of circle officers who are to educate the people in the better management of local institutions to be started under the new Act, I mean the Village Self-Government Act. As far as I have been able to follow, I think the final arrangement is that the local boards are not going to be abolished as was the first proposal. The officers under the district boards and local boards for the present may be sufficient for the purpose of additional supervision. The people should live first and then they should have political education or political training. So these circle officers I do not think will be of very great utility to the villages. When the Act comes into operation there will be many other officers who will be able to educate the people in respect of political education and training, and the appointment of circle officers may be postponed for the present. The present need of medical aid may be considered and the appointment of circle officers postponed for the present."

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"As the Hon'ble Member has invited me to speak I should like to indicate that I am strongly in favour of clause (a) of the resolution, but I am sorry I cannot support clause (b) of the resolution. The question referred to in clause (a) of his resolution is what I consider to be one of utmost importance for Bengal and for rural Bengal specially. At the present moment we have 3,000 registered medical practitioners for the whole of Bengal, of whom about 2,000 practise in municipal areas where 3 out of our 45 millions live. So that in rural areas we have less than 1,000, or in other words we have one qualified medical man to every 12,000 of inhabitants. It is apparent that this is very inadequate. In England I believe there are about 1,200 or 1,250 inhabitants to one medical man. I speak subject to correction, as I speak from memory. I think the average in Europe is 1 to 1,500. Although our country is poorer in the rural areas of Bengal medical men can make a living by earning fees which are comparatively smaller than what medical men in Europe require. Bengal however is so insanitary that there is greater necessity of having more medical men in rural areas. I venture to think, my Lord, that if we have 10,000 or 12,000 more medical men in rural areas it will mean about 3,000 or 3,500 men to one medical man. Therefore these medical men will not only be able to make a living for themselves, but they will be filling up a great necessity of society and society will be very greatly benefited by them. At the same time these medical men will relieve congestion in clerical appointments and other professions. For this reason I am strongly in favour of clause (a) of my hon'ble friend's resolution.

As regards clause (b) I for one venture to think that if we are to take away the allotment made for circle officers then the line on which the future development of rural areas and the village union committees are contemplated by Government would be seriously interfered with. I do not think that the question of the future programme of medical education is a question which can be properly considered and adequately given effect to in a discussion on the Budget by suggesting that a sum be taken away from this particular item or that particular item. I would therefore appeal to my hon'ble friend to withdraw his resolution and at the same time I would appeal to Government to take this matter into their consideration and formulate something definite next year by which Government can provide for more medical men. There are many hospitals where with comparatively small expenditure provision for medical education can be arranged for. My friend has referred to the Mayo Hospital, Sambhu Nath Pundit Hospital and various other hospitals where at a comparatively small expense medical education can be provided for. But it is a problem which must first of all be considered by the Government in consultation with its own officers. For these reasons I strongly ask my hon'ble friend to withdraw his resolution."

Babu S. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I wish to say a few words with reference to this resolution. The need of more medical institutions in this country is admitted on all hands and I think it is in contemplation of Government to establish more medical institutions. It appears that the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has also given notice of a resolution to have a medical institution in Comilla and Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari has also given similar notice to raise the status of the Medical School at Dacca to that of a college. All these resolutions point to the fact that people feel the need of more medical men in the country. I think it was in the year 1913 that the public came to know that more than 500 boys apply every year to the Calcutta Medical College for admission, but only about one-fourth of the number got their admission. That is in the Calcutta Medical College. In the Campbell Medical School I think a larger number of boys used to apply and they were refused, and the reason given is that there is not sufficient laboratory arrangements for all these boys. The best solution of the difficulty would be, I think, to have more medical institutions outside Calcutta, but to have more medical institutions outside Calcutta it is necessary that there should be proper hospital arrangements in mufassal towns, and unless there are proper hospitals it is useless to have medical schools. I think about two years ago Dr. M. N. Banerjee moved a resolution in the Supreme Council to impart medical education in vernacular and to have a number of such institutions all over the country. That resolution was accepted on behalf of Government by the then Surgeon-General Sir Pardey Lukis, but since then it appears that nothing has been done. In answer to my question at the last meeting of the Council as to whether anything has been done towards this direction, the answer given was in the negative. Though that resolution was accepted by the Imperial Council it appears that nothing has been done by the local Governments, at least by your Excellency's Government. Then as regards the ways and means, I quite agree with my Hon'ble friend, Mr. Mitter, that this item of Rs. 1,25,000, which has been allotted for the appointment of circle officers, ought not to be diverted to any other purpose. If the Village Self-Government Bill be passed into law, as we hope it will be in April next, it will be necessary to appoint these circle officers in order to give the union boards a good start, and I think not only Rs. 1,25,000 but more money will be needed if we want a very large number of union boards all over the country. So in these circumstances I think this allotment of Rs. 1,25,000 should not be diverted from the purpose for which it has been made. I need hardly say that Government will be able to see their way to provide funds for this purpose from another allotment."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ My Lord, this resolution is one of three which deal in varying aspects with the same subject, and it may possibly shorten the discussion hereafter, and enable a more comprehensive consideration of the whole question, if I now make remarks which are more or less applicable to them all. The first resolution is that which has just been moved and which recommends the opening of additional medical schools at places to be determined by a committee. The second is to open a medical school at Comilla, and the third, so far as I am now concerned with it, is to open a medical school either at Mymensingh or Chittagong. Therefore they all have the same object in view, namely, an increase in the number of medical schools, though two of them are more specific than the present one as to where they want the schools to be located.

With the desirability of offering additional facilities for medical education in Bengal the local Government are in agreement, but I would venture to utter a word of warning against our being carried away by the appreciation of the medical needs of the country (a striking demonstration of which was afforded by the recent influenza epidemic) into thinking that we should embark headlong on an indiscriminate policy of placing a medical school at any district headquarters which in any way could be imagined to lend itself to it. We must proceed with caution. We have got to consider the facilities of the particular centre we are choosing, the opportunities it offers for supervision and hospital practice, and the area from which it is likely to draw both patients and pupils, as well as other incidental factors. But, Sir, we admit the need of increasing the number of these schools, and in our present Budget we have taken a step in that direction by making provision for a school at Burdwan. That is a beginning of a forward policy, and for the present I submit that we would do well to complete this scheme, and see how it works before we proceed to rather indiscriminate expansion. The provision of one lakh is not sufficient even to complete the Burdwan scheme. The total capital expenditure involved is Rs. 1,57,000, while if we add another desirable feature, a hostel, it would cost another one and-a-half lakh. So we may reasonably finish what we have begun before embarking on anything new.

I would also like to explain to the Council the circumstances in which we chose Burdwan, especially as one of the suggestions of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri is that we should send round a peripatetic committee to discover other centres. Most of the facts which are relevant in this connection are already known to us, and when we selected Burdwan, we had regard to what the alternatives were. First of all, there were certain alternatives in Calcutta. There was a possibility in connection with the National Medical School of Dr. Mullick, which was examined very carefully by a special committee, but which, after full consideration, did not appear to afford a thoroughly satisfactory solution. The financial position was in no sense assured; the aid which might have been expected from private sources was vague and ill-defined; the buildings could never have been made entirely satisfactory for the purpose; the facilities for clinical teaching would have been inconvenient, and, at best, it would have meant opening another medical institution in Calcutta, thus adding to the congestion of students which already exists in this city. On the educational side we are always talking of the evils of that congestion, and we have to spend large sums on hostels, etc., in order to try to remedy them. Therefore it is only reasonable that we should exercise caution before embarking on a policy which can only add to the present number of such students. Another alternative was to start a medical school at Howrah. We have there a very fair hospital, thanks largely to the energies of Colonel Waters and the liberality of the local mill-owners, but there again, it would have been a repetition, in only a slightly less degree, of the objections of adding to the number of metropolitan students, while again it would have involved the acquisition of a site amid very expensive surroundings. I have given instances this morning of the Medical College, where every addition and every improvement which has been made or has to be made hereafter, runs into lakhs of rupees for land before even building operations are commenced. Therefore we discarded that idea. Mention has been made of the possibility of utilising the Mayo Hospital or the Sambhu Nath Pundit, but I believe the Belgachia authorities are rather anxious to obtain facilities for training their students at the former hospital, which, if that scheme went through, would not be available. No definite plan has yet been formulated, but the possibility was mentioned to me by Surgeon-General Robinson before he left.

Going outside Calcutta, we then looked round for other possible centres. We did not consider the particular case of Comilla, which the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta has indicated in his resolution because, I think, he must have been moved more by local patriotism than by arguments justifying any such expenditure. I have visited the hospital at Comilla. It is one of the worst mufassal hospitals I have ever seen, and only contains 28 beds, and it is impossible to start a school there.

Next we considered the case of Chittagong, which primâ facie offered various advantages. It is in an out-of-the-way corner of the province, which is apt to be neglected; it is a large railway centre and a port. However, we found that the local hospital, though it is a very fairly well-run institution, did not lend itself to teaching; it was inconveniently placed, and the wards were too narrow; the proposition, as put before us by the Civil Surgeon and the local officers, was that we should build an entirely new hospital on a better site. That obviously would have increased very largely the cost of the total project. Then we thought of Mymensingh, where the hospital has been rebuilt in recent times; a little while ago it was in financial difficulties, and last year in addition to sums that we had already given, we made a further grant, but just recently, I am glad to say, the leading zemindars of the district seem to have come forward and subscribed with commendable generosity, which, I hope, will enable the hospital to be placed on a satisfactory footing. But for the present it is rather in the making, and one objection to choosing Mymensingh was that it would be rather next-door to Dacca (at any rate it is not very far away), where we already have a flourishing school.

For these reasons we turned to Western Bengal, and chose Burdwan because there is a good hospital there and facilities which held out good expectations of the success of the school, not the least being the co-operation which was generously promised to us by the Maharajahdhiraja Bahadur. For these reasons we settled upon Burdwan, and I mention these facts merely in order to explain to the Council that while we have sought for other places, there are in this matter factors to which weight has to be given. It is very easy to say—'Here is a district headquarters, let us place a medical school here,' but it does not follow that a suitable scheme would be achieved. I would further again remind the Council that in addition to this new school, we have given additional facilities by raising the number of admissions substantially both at the Campbell and the Dacca schools.

I would merely add a few words as regards the resources from which it is suggested that this new expenditure may be met.

Taking the three resolutions, the suggestions which cover the finding of the money are, firstly, that we should take it from the provision for circle officers. I may have more to say about that when the Village Bill comes up, and I will only remark briefly here that circle officers, to my mind, are an integral part of any scheme for the furtherance of village government in

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

Bengal, and the cutting away from the complaint, which is so often advanced against the provincial administration, that we do through the police so many things which in other provinces are done through the subordinate revenue establishments. Things have been done through the police in Bengal because there has been nobody else to do them, and the scheme of circle officers helps to remedy that defect by supplying a local agency which will be in constant touch with the villagers, and will enable them by encouragement and advice to foster the growth of small village organisations. It has been correctly remarked by one Hon'ble Member that the provision of Rs. 1,25,000 is only a portion of what will be required, if, as is hoped, there is a general development of village government and a gradual extension of it throughout the province.

The next resolution proposes to take the money from the nurses' quarters at the Medical College Hospital, but that would entirely frustrate progress in the improvement of that institution—progress which, it has been argued this morning, is already too slow.

The third resolution, in addition to mentioning public works, with which Mr. Cumming has already dealt, refers to the expenditure on the traffic police in Calcutta, and on the improvement of the prospects of European sergeants and inspectors. The traffic police is already working in this city, and the reasons for its employment can be demonstrated to anybody who cares to take a walk along the streets. The improvement of the prospects of European sergeants has been forced upon us in order to get men to fill these posts. At present there are 58 vacant posts, and some 35 which should be held by a better class of men, and we see no prospect of getting better men unless we offer better prospects. There is, therefore, no very satisfactory head amongst those which have been enumerated which lends itself to economy, and from which we can find sums for carrying out any alternative proposal.

For the reasons I have given I would represent to the Council that, in doing what we have done in making a beginning with this new school at Burdwan, we are taking a reasonable step towards the advancement of medical education, and a step which we had better complete before we look round for fresh ground to break."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I am glad that there is no difference of opinion as regards the necessity of the spread of medical education and I am glad that it is engaging the serious attention of Government and that Government is going to open a school at Burdwan. That is no doubt very desirable, but we should see how the circumstances stand. I am also glad to learn that arrangements have been made for taking more students at the Medical College as well as at the Campbell Medical School. I did not mean that a committee should be appointed and that it should go from place to place—a sort of peripatetic committee. Of course in view of the enquiries that have been made by Government, I do not think it is necessary to make any further enquiries. These enquiries may be taken as a guide when further provision is made for medical education either in Calcutta or the mufassal. As the matter is already engaging the attention of Government, I am not particularly anxious for a decision at once. As regards ways and means, there is some difference of opinion. As regards the utility of Circle officers, we should not anticipate the decision on a Bill which will come up for consideration very soon. If it is considered that there is need for further medical education and supply of more medical men, I am fully convinced that the Government has been and is doing their best. In that view I do not think I would press this resolution and beg leave to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The President : Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The President said :—

“ No. 12 is already covered, so is No. 13(a) (ii). but I understand the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter will move 13(a) (i).”

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, in the absence of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that provision be made in the Budget for a non-recurring expenditure of two lakhs and a recurring expenditure of Rs. 74,540 for—
 - (i) the purpose of raising the Dacca Medical School to the status of a Medical College ;

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

(b) that the necessary funds—

- (i) for the non-recurring expenditure be obtained by reducing the expenditure under the head 45—Civil Works, in charge of the Public Works Department, by two lakhs; and
- (ii) for the recurring expenditure be obtained by omitting the items of Rs. 50,000 for the improvement of pay and prospects of European Inspectors and Sergeants and the reorganization and extension of the Indian Traffic Police, Rs. 24,550.

He said :—

" After what has fallen from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler I propose to be very brief as regards the resolution which stands in the name of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, so far as item (a) (i) is concerned. My Lord, the question of the condition and the number of medical men generally in this province is a question which has great bearing on the question of the establishment of a medical college at Dacca. While I admit that Government has taken, if I may say so, a step in the right direction by establishing a medical school at Burdwan, the needs of the province are such that there is much scope for extension of medical education, whether it be in medical colleges or medical schools. My Lord, we are going to have a University at Dacca, and if we have a medical college at Dacca even on a modest scale, say, a college with about 50 students, it will be, I venture to submit, of great assistance to the University when it is actually established. My Lord, I hope in the residential University of Dacca the troubles and difficulties which we had in our University in Calcutta will not be repeated. I hope that the bulk of our students will not be forced to drift into law colleges for want of any better vocation in life. I hope, my Lord, that the establishment of this college will divert our youths from striving after Government appointments. When the needs of society require training of our educated men in the medical profession rather than in literary walks of life, we cannot blame those young men if they drift to law and Government service if the Government or the University does not provide for suitable education in other walks of life. I think it would be helpful if your Excellency's Government, which is so anxious to make the Dacca University a success, will do a little spade-work and start a medical college there in advance. My Lord, we know that medical education takes a fairly long time. It is generally divisible into three stages. The first is the stage of preliminary scientific training when the student is taught chemistry, physics, botany and zoology. In the second stage he is taught anatomy, materia medica, physiology and organic chemistry. In the third stage he is taught medicine, midwifery, biology, hygiene and medical jurisprudence. I believe it takes about six years. If your Lordship's Government is pleased to make a beginning now, the immediate expense will not be very much, but ultimately I think the expense estimated by my hon'ble friend Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari, namely, a recurring expenditure of Rs. 74,540, would prove to be too little, but the question of ultimate expense is involved in the question of the total expense of the Dacca University as a whole. For the first year it will be the preliminary scientific course with which we shall be concerned. Of course we should not start a medical college unless your Excellency's Government is prepared to have a medical college there as soon as the Dacca University is started. But as I think your Excellency's Government will be so prepared, I venture to think that this is an additional reason why a beginning should be made as early as possible for starting a medical college at Dacca. The general aspects have already been discussed, and I do not propose to take up the time of the Council long, but I would like to say this, my Lord, that after the last speech of the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, I do not think I would press for this resolution, if the Government would be pleased to accept the general idea of starting a college at Dacca. I leave it to the Government to find out whether money would be arranged from the grant for the Dacca University."

Sir Nilratan Sarkar.

The Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar said :—

"My Lord, I have looked at the matter from the point of view of the future university of Dacca whether the University of Dacca would be complete without a medical college—I believe it will not be complete without a medical faculty. Such a defect would be extremely prejudicial to the interests of the University. In the first place such a defect would materially restrict the scope of the activity of the workers whose duty it would be to build up the fabric of the University. Many of the professors will miss the opportunity of making research work in connection with many of the sciences concerned in the study of medicine. Such a defect would also restrict the number of the careers open to the graduates of the University—careers which we need so much in Bengal, careers other than law. Sir, such a defect would deprive young men of the opportunity of growing under the constructive, creative and original influence of the training in the sciences of life. I have no doubt that very soon the defect of such a training would be found out in the new University if it were started without a faculty of medicine. Another effect of such a defect would deprive the University of the sympathy of future benefactors who would not come forward with endowments. No University in these days can depend upon grants from Government alone. The public must come forward with help and endowments, and it is not likely that the University without a medical faculty would enlist the sympathy or the enthusiasm of the public in this connection. It would be like a fungus baby with one of its most important limbs mutilated—not exactly a case of mutilation—but with one of the limbs stifled because already that limb is in a nascent state. Any medical school can be developed with a little effort into a well-grown college.

My Lord, there is the other side of the question—the question of indefinitely multiplying the number of medical men with higher training, but I submit that in our colleges the training given to medical students is not exactly what is called higher training in medicine. In Great Britain there is one standard of training prevailing in all the colleges and schools. In this country having regard to the circumstances prevailing here at present, there are two standards of training prevailing in different schools and colleges. In the colleges there is a higher standard than that prevailing in schools, but I submit that the standard that is prevailing in these schools will disappear in the course of time and that the time is not so very distant, and in the near future it will be quite possible that all our schools will be raised to the standard of existing colleges, and I believe that one advantage of the addition of one college in Bengal will be an acquisition to the people of Bengal generally and not to the people of Dacca only. As regards the practicability my hon'ble friend has already spoken, and I will not repeat it. I am concerned in showing that there is necessity from the point of view of the authorities and from the point of view of the professors and of the students. It would be a boon to the people of Eastern Bengal. It is a practicable scheme and the expense is not very high. Under the circumstances I submit that Government would kindly consider the desirability of establishing a medical college in the Dacca University from the very start."

Sir Henry Wheeler; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

“ My Lord, apart from such considerations as I have already represented and which more or less are relevant in this connection also, my chief objection to the acceptance of the resolution is that, as matters stand, it is somewhat premature. It has been recognised by both the Hon'ble Members who have spoken that the scheme is closely wrapped up with the project of the Dacca university. I find that when the details of a university at Dacca were first under consideration by a committee, it was proposed that medical students should be taught at Dacca up to the level of the first M. B. Examination, leaving them to come to Calcutta to complete their course. That was the definite proposal of the first committee. The total outlay involved under their proposals was, as probably we all know, very large, and in the hope of getting something done a call was made by the Government of India for what was known as the ‘minimum scheme’; that was meant to cover the essential features of a university, which it might be possible to finance immediately and so make a beginning. In preparing the ‘minimum scheme’ this idea of medical education was jettisoned in order to lighten the ship, but even the ‘minimum scheme’ did not go through as the whole matter then became involved in the investigations of the Calcutta University Commission, the result of which we are still awaiting. Therefore, obviously, when we get the report of the Calcutta University Commission, and see, as we hope we shall see, their recommendations in connection with the initiation of a university at Dacca, we shall have to consider what remarks, if any, they have made on the subject of medical education, and we shall then have to decide what we can do. But at present I find it difficult to give any assurance beyond that. The idea of a new medical college at Dacca has obvious attractions, as Sir Nilratan Sarkar has said, and a medical faculty is a desirable part of any complete university. We want to see the Dacca university a success, and we would willingly see it provided with these facilities, quite apart from any wish to enhance the status and reputation of the ancient city of Dacca. In all these ways, the scheme, as I say, is attractive. Again, Dacca has already a hospital which is considerably above the mufassal standard, and although there may be reasons for caution, I am prepared to investigate the facilities at Dacca for running a medical college. Of course Calcutta is an ideal centre for such an enterprise, largely because of its size, which gives ample material for clinical training, and because of the prospects which it offers of private practice, hospital experience, and general enhancement of medical reputation, which attract the pick of the service from Northern India as professors. Obviously in these respects Dacca will fall short of Calcutta, and that aspect of the question will have to be considered. I would ask the Hon'ble Members who have spoken to be content to leave it at that, that when we get the report of the Calcutta University Commission the question will receive our careful consideration.”

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

“ My Lord, it cannot be doubted that there is need for extension of medical education and it cannot be doubted that wherever facilities for giving further medical education exist full advantage should be taken of such facilities. The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler has been pleased to indicate that Government will take the matter up, although for certain reasons given by the Hon'ble Member Government is not prepared at the present moment to move quickly. I am sure that apart from the reasons given by the Hon'ble Member in charge, your Excellency's Government agree with our view. The difference between us is more a difference of one of ways and means than anything else. But when the time ultimately comes for consideration of the question perhaps it will be helpful for your Excellency's Government to know what the views of the Indian representatives in the Council are, and from that point of view especially I would press the resolution."

The question being put the Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray asked for a division. A division was then taken with the following result :—

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

14. The following resolution stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DUTTA :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

(a) that suitable provision be made in the next year's budget for establishing a Medical College at Dacca ; and

(b) that the necessary amount be taken out of—

(i) the provision of Rs. 4,30,000 for the acquisition of land for the New Nurses' Quarters for the Medical College Hospital ; and

(ii) the provision of Rs. 2,00,000 for the Nurses' Quarters, Medical College Hospital.

The President said : “ Item No. 14 is covered by the decision at which the Council has just arrived.”

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 15.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

(a) that a lump provision of Rs. 4 lakhs be made for the relief of distress in the country consequent on the high prices of cloth ; and

(b) that the requisite money be found by curtailing expenditure under the following sub-heads :—

	Rs.
(i) Agricultural Education ...	1,00,000
(ii) Experimental Farms ...	1,57,000
(iii) Agricultural Experiments ...	1,52,500
(iv) Divisional Seed Stores ...	30,000
(v) Sericulture ...	1,54,000

He said :—

“ My Lord, I do not think I need take up the time of this Council by saying very many words as to the acute distress that is prevailing in this country in consequence of the high price of cloth. The complaint about this high price of cloth has been going on in this country for nearly two years, and although efforts have been made to bring some relief to the people, so far as can be said at the present moment, all these efforts have hitherto proved futile. I believe everyone who knows anything at all about the situation is most anxious that some relief should be afforded to the people, and the only question is one of ways and means. It has struck me in glancing through the various budget allotments that some money might profitably be set apart this year to relieve the distress from which the people are suffering. Coming to the suggestion that I have made I feel that I have suggested the curtailment of expenditure with regard to another department which appeals very largely to the imagination of the people and as to which also I might be accused of something like want of sympathy for a movement which is apparently of immense good to the agricultural population of the Presidency. I confess that in theory the department of agriculture is all that can be desired, but so far as my own personal experience goes, I do not think the achievements of this department in improving the methods of agriculture have been such as to justify the large outlay which Government proposes to set apart with references to the activities of this department. I have suggested that the Rs. 4 lakhs be taken from the following sub-heads : (1) Agricultural education for which Rs. 1 lakh has been budgetted for. I do not quite understand what this agricultural education means. It is very good in theory, but I do not think the officers of the Agricultural Department have been so far successful in imparting any kind of education to the agriculturists either towards teaching them to improve their methods of agriculture or enabling them by the education that has been imparted by the department to make even one single blade of grass grow than they grew before. Whatever that may be, even conceding that some money should be set apart for agricultural education, I think Rs. 1 lakh is a little too much and some portion of it might be set apart for the purpose which I have in view in the first portion of my resolution. Then there comes the item Experimental Farms, under which there is a provision for miscellaneous expenditure to the extent of Rs. 81,000. I do not understand what this miscellaneous expenditure means, and unless I find something definite to prove that the department is going to undertake work of a substantial character, I am disposed to think that this Rs. 81,000 represents more or less a wasteful expenditure. Then the next item is Agricultural Experiments, and under this sub-head I find a provision of Rs. 1 lakh for the distribution of seeds. The distribution of seeds is not so urgently needed at the present moment, and even if some money is required I again consider that the provision that has been made is extremely liberal, at any rate not what the department could claim in view of their achievements in the past. Then there is the item of Divisional Seed Store, and under the head Seeds and Implements I find there is a provision of Rs. 32,000. Here again I consider this expenditure to be not justified by the work which the department will have in hand ; and lastly there comes the item Sericulture, under which there is an allotment under the head miscellaneous of Rs. 60,000. I again confess I cannot understand what this miscellaneous expenditure is going to be. This seems to be an extravagance and having regard to the fact that we have not been given any explanations as to how this miscellaneous expenditure is going to be met, I will submit that this expenditure ought not to be sanctioned. If we add up the allotments that have been made under these various sub-heads I find that Rs. 4 lakhs can easily be budgetted out of these amounts which can be more usefully employed in relieving the distress owing to the high price of cloth than in carrying on experiments with the officers of the Agricultural Department—experiments which are more or less of a doubtful utility. I submit, therefore, for the consideration of this Council the resolution which stands in my name, and I hope it will be accepted by your Excellency's Government."

Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray.

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"My Lord, I rise again to oppose my esteemed friend. I admit that just at present there is an acute distress prevailing in the country owing to the abnormal rise in the price of cloth, but I also believe that we have somehow managed to get over the worst. In view of the probable increased output of cloth in England and transport facilities, I am sure that the prices would soon come down, and, moreover, we expect a good price for our jute this year. Thus, it would seem that much of the prevailing distress would soon cease to exist. I am, therefore, led to believe that my friend's resolution comes a bit too late to be of any real service to my countrymen. But what my chief objection to my friend's resolution is that he wants to curtail the expenditure on agriculture and allied subjects, and I beg to remind my friend that the Agricultural Department has been long neglected by the Government

Sir Henry Wheeler.

It was my friend himself who on several occasions in the past brought this fact to the notice of the Government. Now that the Government have come forward to our help, I do not think it would be quite judicious on our part to ask them to curtail their expenses in this direction. In our country much depends on how the Government take to a subject. Because the Government neglected agriculture, we also found it hard to take to it. The whole thing appeared so vast and beset with difficulties that we became rather pessimistic and left it to the State to do what they could. Now, because the Government are enthusiastic about it, we too are considerably encouraged, and I am sure my community, I mean the landlords, would not fail to notice that the Government are showing active sympathy and would heartily co-operate with them. There is another matter, my Lord—some of the items under this head, as, for example, Sericulture, form part of a settled programme. Much has already been spent on them. If we now stop the work it would only mean a total loss of what has already been spent on them and, along with the monetary loss, it will mean a waste of much useful work. I would, therefore, request my Hon'ble friend not to press his resolution, and even if he does, I would appeal to him to leave the Department of Agriculture alone and cast his eye on some other really extravagant departments of the Government. Perhaps my Hon'ble friend thinks that the Agricultural Department is not properly worked. Well, if this is so, then it is our duty to watch the working of the department and not to give it up as hopeless."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, I trust I may be excused from speaking at length on this resolution, firstly, because it was only a few days ago that we discussed at length this problem of cloth supply in Bengal, and secondly, because the Hon'ble Mover, as in another resolution which he has fathered to-day, has been little concerned with the actual proposal on which he desires to incur further expenditure, but has chiefly directed his criticisms to the working of a department from which he hopes to abstract some of its present allotments. I am particularly concerned with the cloth problem, and as regards that one finds it difficult to answer the resolution, as the Hon'ble Mover has told us so little as to what he wants to do with this large sum of Rs. 4 lakhs which he wishes us to put in the budget. He expressed a vague hope that, in some way undefined, we may relieve the distress consequent on the high price of cloth, but before we could consent to setting aside this very substantial sum, we may reasonably ask for something more definite. One can best consider the question in respect of those areas in which actual distress may prevail during the year—distress necessitating relief by Government measures in the ordinary sense. As regards the areas in which distress does not exist to that extent, but in which people are pinched, as they have been pinched all over the world, Government can hardly do anything. But as regards the first category, I said on the occasion of our debate about cloth the other day that if it seemed desirable, as a matter of relief, that facilities should be given for bringing in cheaper cloth into these areas, Government would consider that course as part of the machinery of assistance of distress, and if as a result of the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming's approaching visit to Bankura, Brahmanberia and elsewhere, we are told that it would help to give relief to the poor in those areas in which distress prevails in the matter of cheap cloth, we shall have to do our best to do so. But as regards the other areas, I cannot give the same assurance. The ordinary remedy which has been mooted since the price of cloth has risen is that of the manufacture of standard cloth and the placing of it upon the market. But the standard cloth scheme does not contemplate the incurring of expenditure by Government, so a provision of Rs. 4 lakhs is not necessary for the purpose. All that will be, and that is being, done in other provinces in the working of that scheme is to arrange for the supply of cloth at a particular price by special arrangements with the Bombay mills, to bring it to the local market, and to sell it at a price which covers the original cost and the transit expenses. There is little need to make a provision of Rs. 4 lakhs for this purpose, but, as I explained the other day, we have not hitherto thought it desirable to embark upon that enterprise. If we do not work the standard cloth plan in the usually accepted sense, what does this resolution really want us to do? If it desires us to exercise indiscriminate charity in the sense of buying cloth, whether it be standard or any other cloth, and placing it on the market at less than cost price, accepting the difference as a legitimate charge against the general tax-payer, then I am afraid we must say we cannot contemplate such action. I am talking of areas in which distress does not prevail in the sense that Government has undertaken measures and recognized the necessity of relief. There is no doubt that people would be more happy if times were more normal, but in such areas we cannot contemplate a general pauperization of the people in the sense that we should buy a certain amount of cloth at a high price and retail it at less. Therefore, Sir, on the merits of the proposal I submit that a case has not been made out.

As regards the sources from which the Hon'ble Member would find the money, I scarcely think that to-day he has been as happy as usual in his proposals for retrenchment. He enumerates five heads which altogether cover approximately Rs. 6 lakhs, and he says that we can easily find Rs. 4 lakhs out of them. If we can easily find Rs. 4 lakhs, all I can say is that it reflects most seriously on the reckless carelessness with which Mr. Donald has passed the departmental budget, and I have no reason for thinking that Mr. Donald has shown any such extravagance. Therefore, practically, to take Rs. 4 lakhs out of Rs. 6 lakhs, obviously means breaking up the work of the Agricultural Department, which, as the Kumar Shib Shekhawar Ray has said, is carrying out work of benefit and utility. Therefore, on neither ground can I advise the Council to accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"My Lord, I have very little to add to what I have already said in respect of the recommendation contained in this resolution. It is true I have not been able to formulate any definite proposals as to how the money would be spent for the purpose of relieving the distress. The reason is that it is very difficult to make definite proposals unless and until the materials necessary for coming to a decision on a question like this are at one's disposal. But I thought that if the money could be procured, Government might by some means or other find out suitable means of utilizing the amount in undertaking work which Government has as much at heart as myself or any other member of this Council. The question of getting Rs. 4 lakhs out of the allotments of Rs. 6 lakhs under the various sub-heads in the Department of Agriculture has given rise to a little adverse criticism from my esteemed friend Kumar Shib Shekhawar Ray. I did not for a moment belittle the importance of the Agricultural Department, but what I really meant is this—and the Kumar has already anticipated me there—that I do not think that the department is being properly worked, and I, therefore, feel that if this large money is placed at the disposal of the department it may not serve the very useful purpose which the Government has got in view. I do not wish to take up the time of this Council by going into details so far as this question is concerned, but I wish to point out to the Council one singular fact which will throw some light on the exact question which arises out of the proposals which I have made. We find in every year's budget provisions made of large sums of money for the distribution of seeds, for agricultural education and so forth. I know something of the condition prevailing in mufassal, but personally I have not yet come across any tangible results of the activities of this department within at any rate the last five or six years for which I have scrutinized the budget for the purpose of making suggestions for curtailing the expenditure of this department. When I say that the department is not being properly worked I mean in reality that they have already got more money than they can usefully dispose of, and I, therefore, see no merit in accumulating money for the purpose of the expansion of a department which has not yet shown its aptitude for taking up the work and spending the money as usefully as one would expect from a department like that of Agriculture. Then, as regards the question which has been discussed by Sir Henry Wheeler of purchasing cloth at a low price and distributing it in selected areas, that was not exactly what I meant when I gave notice of this resolution. As I have said I have no definite proposals to make and I have only suggested that the money should be set apart and if necessary expert advice should be taken in order that some definite scheme may be formulated for spending this money for the purpose which I recommend by means of this resolution. If Government thinks that the proposal cannot be accepted, of course there is an end of this matter; but I want once more to emphasize the fact that the distress prevailing in consequence of the high price of cloth is still a very acute one, and it is not quite correct to say that we have somehow managed to tide over the period of real difficulty. The distress is still real and very acute, and if not by the means I have suggested, some other means ought to be found for removing the acute distress that is now prevailing. I do not wish to waste the time of this Council and with these words I beg to recommend the resolution for the acceptance of this Council."

Babu B. C. Ray.

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 16.

The Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray moved the following resolution:—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that an allotment of Rs. 2 lakhs be provided as subvention to the District Boards and the mufassal municipalities for enabling them to make arrangements for the retail sale of food-grains and other necessities of life at cost price in selected areas; and
- (b) that a corresponding reduction be made in the provision for the nurses' quarters in connection with the Calcutta Medical College.

He said:—

"My Lord, it is obvious that scarcity does not prevail all over the country in the same degree just now, though prices of rice, and particularly pulses, run very high everywhere. Relief in its usual forms can be expected to be organized only in localities where definite famine conditions prevail. And even then, the middle classes—who are in one sense the worst sufferers—are not benefited thereby, because they prefer to starve in secret, as pointed out by Mr. Yas in his appeal in connection with Bankura famine.

My Lord, I do not desire to take up any more time of the Council in discussing my proposal in details. I believe the resolution carries with it its conviction. It is to be hoped that my suggestion, if accepted, will enable the district boards and municipalities to bring relief to the door of such people as are now beyond the reach of existing relief organizations, without, at the same time, doing violence to Government's policy of non-interference with trade.

Mr. Cumming; Babu B. C. Ray.

Now, to turn to the retrenchment suggested by me, I think that if once the contention put forward by me is accepted, there is hardly any item in the budget which ought not to submit itself to a process of shearing. If I have selected the new nurses' quarters at the Medical College it is because I agree with Sir Henry Wheeler that they are 'unfortunately expensive', and for the additional reason that this capital expenditure may with advantage, be spread over two years."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, in this matter I do not think that it is necessary to say anything further than what was stated by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler on the occasion of the debate at the previous meeting of this Council. It was then stated that in the areas in which scarcity exists special measures might be taken. The Hon'ble Member proposes that Rs. 2 lakhs should be given to local bodies to enable them to make arrangements for the retail sale of food grains and other necessities of life. He qualifies his proposal by saying that he does not wish to effect any interference with trade, but I would suggest to him—how can any such arrangement be effected without interference with trade? In fact, it is self-evident that it is not a business proposition that Government should take over the detailed distribution of these articles. As regards the particular items that might be considered, I may mention what has been done and what can be done. As regards salt, it is within the knowledge of all members present that the situation has been considerably improved by ensuring a sufficient supply and also by taking measures regarding the price. As regards kerosene oil, another practical essential to the life of the mulassal, it may be said that the measures taken under Sir Henry Wheeler's auspices in co-operation with the great importers of oil, have been successful in ensuring as far as possible a fair supply at a fair price, and also in preventing profiteering as far as possible. There remains the item of food grains itself. As has been stated earlier in to-day's proceedings, Government will take measures within areas in which scarcity exists and the normal procedure of relief will follow. As regards the particular class of persons whom the Hon'ble Member has mentioned, viz., the middle class community who are reluctant to come forward for public relief, in the areas in which such people have been found special measures have been taken; and Government have already given special grants which have been placed at the disposal of the local charitable relief committees who may distribute relief at their discretion. These being the facts, Sir, I do not think it is sound to ask for a subvention; and certainly a subvention of Rs. 2 lakhs for the whole province of Bengal would be of very little benefit. I, therefore, consider that the resolution in its present form should not be accepted.

As regards the second portion of the resolution, viz., that money should be taken from the provision for the nurses' quarters in the Calcutta Medical College, the matter has already been the subject of debate, and Sir Henry Wheeler has placed before the members of Council the reason why no further deduction should be made from this head."

The Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray said :—

"Knowing full well, my Lord, what the fate of my resolution will be, I do not wish to press it. Of course I am assured, and I have come to know that special arrangements have been made for the relief of the middle class people by giving money by charitable associations. I think it would be waste of time to press this resolution. I therefore beg leave to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Mr. Cumming.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 17.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that at least three model dairies be started at suitable centres in the mufassal with special arrangements for the improvement of the cattle breeding ; and
- (b) that the sum required be met from a portion of the sum provided for agricultural education.

He said :—

“ My Lord, Mr. Blackwood some time ago submitted his report in connection with the improvement of cattle in this province, and he suggested that cattle farms should be established here and there, and that would give a training to the people. It is in this connection that I bring forward this proposal. It is intimately connected with the improvement of agricultural education. What I say is this, that in these cases Government should show the way, and I suggest that three model dairies—whether three, two or one, it does not matter—may be started by Government. At least a beginning should be made. It will be a training-ground for the people in general, and it will serve the purpose of bull-rearing and improvement of cattle. People will learn by seeing the result of what is being done in the experimental agricultural farms, and they will see the utility of maintaining cattle, and what can be done for the supply of fodder, and how the supply of milk can be improved, and the benefits that can be derived. It is in this view that I have suggested the opening of a few model dairies, and I hope there will be no difficulty in accepting this resolution.”

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said:—

“ Sir, the request of the Hon'ble Member is to the effect that three model dairies should be started at suitable centres in the mufassal, special arrangements being made for the improvement of cattle breeding. It is somewhat difficult for Government to satisfy such contending requests as have been put forward to-day. On the one hand Government is accused of going too fast and too far in connection with agriculture and on the other hand of not going far enough or fast enough. The model dairy cannot be a commercial success if it is attached to a cattle farm. The main object is the improvement of cattle and not the sale of milk. We have already one such model dairy attached to the Rangpur farm, as regards which I made the following remarks at a recent meeting of this Council : ‘ Already there is an indication that the selection of the best cattle from acclimatized indigenous stock produces better results, both in the outturn of milk, and in bone and muscle. If this inference is supported, as time goes on, it will be desirable to create similar farms at many other places in the Presidency ; and this, I suggest, is the proper line of action for the improvement of cattle.’ At the present moment I cannot recommend to the Council the starting of other dairies, inasmuch as the data to be obtained before taking such a step can only be obtained by the slow, gradual process of time ; and we must see whether the data satisfy us that the selection of indigenous cattle is desirable. We shall, however, endeavour to open new farms with the ultimate object of improving the breed of the cattle and the milk supply in Bengal. But as the resolution stands at present I am afraid I must ask the Council not to accept it.”

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri ; The President ; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

“ My Lord, I have very little to add to what I have suggested. My idea is that it is intimately connected with agricultural education, and of any sum set apart for this purpose, a portion may be usefully utilized in starting these model dairies, which will have the effect of improving cattle-rearing, bull-rearing and other connected matters. Of course it is for Government to consider in what way it should be done, but it was recommended by Mr. Blackwood and in that connection I have brought forward this resolution. I beg permission to withdraw this resolution.”

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

The President said :—

“ The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is absent for the moment on public duty elsewhere. In these circumstances I have agreed to the postponement of the motions (items Nos. 18, 19 and 22) standing in his name until he is able to return.”

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 20.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a lump provision of Rs. 3 lakhs be made for hostels for Muhammadan students in Calcutta and the mufassal ; and
- (b) that the money be provided for by a grant of Rs. 2 lakhs from the budget provision for Calcutta hostels (Rs. 2,89,000) and the mufassal hostels and messes (Rs. 1,09,376), and Rs. 1 lakh by a lump deduction from the budget provisions for the Departments of Fisheries and Director of Industries (26-B).

He said :—

“ My Lord, I beg to move the resolution which stands in my name on the agenda paper. It will be in the recollection of this Council that this question has been pressed upon the attention of Government many times within the last few years, and if I have ventured to bring this question for discussion again to-day, it is in view of the fact that the question of hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students is becoming day by day one of increasing difficulty and also of urgency. I wish to place before the members of this Council for their consideration certain figures which I have collected and which will show how urgent and pressing is the necessity for providing hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students. To begin with, I wish to emphasize the fact that the need of the hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students is far more pressing than the necessity for such accommodation for non-Muhammadan students and for that purpose I will mention the following reasons amongst others. In the first place the existing hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students is insufficient as I would presently show ; secondly, if any private houses are hired and the students are to live there according to the rules and regulations of the University, there are very few Muhammadan landlords in Calcutta and the Hindu landlords are very reluctant to let Muhammadan students occupy their houses. I do not make this a point of complaint. It may be from their point of view the Hindu landlords are quite justified, but the result is that the Muhammadan students cannot, without much difficulty, hire a house belonging to a Hindu landlord. Then the Muhammadan students have, comparatively speaking, fewer relatives in Calcutta or in the headquarters stations in the mufassal with whom they can stay, and that again makes it very important that there should be hostel accommodation for them.

As regards my first point that the need for hostel accommodation is very pressing, I wish to submit for the consideration of your Excellency's Government the following figures. The total number of Muhammadan students in all the colleges in Bengal—I am speaking not merely of Calcutta but of the mufassal also—comes up to about 2,600. Of this number about 700 reside in hostels, about 350 with approved guardians, about 200 with their own guardians and about 150 in attached messes. And, therefore, it would appear that about 1,200 are living in very undesirable surroundings. Hostel accommodation is, therefore, needed for about 1,200 college students, not to speak of a large number of high school students. The need is greatest in Calcutta where the number of Muhammadan students—to be exact—is 1,483, of whom about 300 live in hostels, 110 in attached messes and about 510 reside in approved hostels as will appear from the following figures : in the Elliot hostel 45, in the Baker hostel 196, in the Tayler hostel 73 and in the Carmichael hostel 166. Therefore, it would appear that there are in Calcutta 575 students for whom there is no approved hostel accommodation. Now, my Lord, if there are 1,500 students in colleges and if we have only been able to find accommodation for about 950, it is high time that steps should be taken as early as possible to remedy a state of things which compel students to live not only in insanitary surroundings but also under conditions which are absolutely condemnable from all points of view.

I find that there are provisions in the budget for Calcutta hostels amounting to nearly Rs. 2,89,000 and for mufassal hostels amounting to Rs. 1,00,000. But I do not find anything in the budget to show what portion of the grants should be utilized, if at all, for hostels and messes for Muhammadan students. I think that out of this sum, a large portion should be set apart for the Muhammadan hostel, and if there is any residue left it might be got from the provision under the head Fisheries and Industries. Here again I touch upon controversial grounds. I am not denying the importance of the Departments of Fisheries and Industries, although I am not quite prepared to give a certificate of efficiency to the Department of Fisheries, but at the same time I think that out of the large allotments that have been made under these two heads some money might be found which could be set apart for Muhammadan hostels in Calcutta and mufassal. This is a matter about which there can be no difference of opinion, and it is a matter about which I know Government is extremely anxious, and, therefore, I need not take up the time of the Council by dwelling on this point at some length. Government themselves have acknowledged that as much money as could possibly be found should be spent on Muhammadan hostels and they have given their pledges on it from time to time. I have collected some figures—which I have reasons to believe are correct—to show that in Calcutta about 600 students and in Calcutta and mufassal together about 1,200 students cannot find any accommodation. Under these circumstances I think that more provision should be made under this head, and I do not know what stronger case I can make out for this need of the Muhammadan students and for more provision for it in the budget. With these words I commend the resolution for acceptance by your Excellency's Government."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq ; Abul Kasem ; Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the resolution which has been moved by my hon'ble friend Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq. In doing so I must in the first place acknowledge our gratitude to the Government of Bengal for the steps taken by them in providing hostel accommodation for Muhammadan boys in Calcutta and at certain mufassal towns, but what I submit, my Lord, is that the accommodation provided is as yet quite insufficient and further provision should be made. As has been said by my Hon'ble friend Government are only too anxious to provide such accommodation and to help the cause of advancement of Muhammadan education, and the only difficulty Government finds is that of ways and means. We, on our part, my Lord, have tried several measures in order to provide funds for the advancement of Muhammadan education, but we have failed in all directions, and naturally we have to fall back on public revenue. The need for Muhammadan hostels is specially necessary on account of the fact that the system of education now imparted in our collegiate schools is not well suited to the members of the Muhammadan community. We want to give some sort of home training and religious education ; that we cannot do unless we have special Muhammadan hostels. For that reason and also for the reason stated by the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq that the Muhammadan boys find it extremely difficult to find a place to live in during their student career, this makes our case strong enough for the favourable consideration of Government. As regards the amount to be secured by a deduction from the Department of Fisheries, I might remind this Council, my Lord, that a couple of years back I suggested the abolition of the department, and my proposal was criticized by the Hon'ble Member in charge as preposterous. For these few years, my Lord, I have tried to find out whether the Department of Fisheries has in any way helped either the cultivation of fish or has increased the supply in this province, but I fail to see any improvement at all. We have now a Director of Fisheries, and he has got a larger staff than he had formerly, on which much money is spent, but as yet we have had no tangible result of the work of the department beyond certain experiments which are as yet only of academic value and nothing more. I submit, my Lord, that the question of providing hostel accommodation for Muhammadan boys is a very important question and should receive early consideration at the hands of Government, and as soon as funds are available that provision should be made. I think that according to the relative importance of the Department of Fisheries and the provision of hostel accommodation for Muhammadan boys, preference should be given to the latter. With these remarks I beg to support the resolution of my Hon'ble friend."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

"My Lord, I would first say a word about the items that are proposed to be reduced. The first educational item is described as Rs. 2,89,000 for Calcutta hostels ; Rs. 1,89,000 of that is pledged to the University in continuation of schemes almost completed, and in view of the urgency of the case Rs. 1 lakh is pledged to the Civil Engineering College at Sibpur for certain improvements in their sanitation. The item Rs. 1,09,000 is not capable of reduction. This is an item of recurring expenditure and represents our proper recurring expenditure according to arrangements entered into with various hostels and colleges in the mufassal. I am informed that the budgets for the Departments of Fisheries and Director of Industries represent merely the actuals with the exception of Rs. $\frac{1}{2}$ lakh for development under the Director of Industries. This Rs. $\frac{1}{2}$ lakh itself is not capable of reduction because it is an instalment towards carrying out certain proposals made in the report of the Industrial Commission, and I am informed—although on this point I do not speak with authority—that a representation has already been made for an increase of the budget provision under this head.

Turning now to the constructive part of the resolution, I may remind the Council that the matter has been debated here several times, and that last year in particular it was discussed at some length. The Hon'ble Mover on that occasion after hearing the situation explained on behalf of Government, withdrew his resolution, and the language with which he withdrew it is this: 'I have taken the assurance of the Director of Public Instruction and beg to withdraw the resolution, especially as there is no help for it.' I trust, my Lord, that the assurance then given and now repeated will be accepted as equally satisfactory. If it was then agreed that the Department of Education had done its best to meet the needs of the Muhammadan community, I would venture to assure the Hon'ble Mover that there has been no relaxation of will and vigilance in the department since that time. For such purposes as are contemplated in this resolution we have as resources either Imperial grants or Provincial grants. The Imperial grants are distributed for such purposes and on such conditions as the Government of India may care to lay down. Provincial grants are distributed under the grant-in-aid system and the grants-in-aid system of the Government of Bengal is the contrivance for testing needs and differentiating them from mere wishes or aspirations. Judged by this test there are few needs in the Muhammadan community in the matter of accommodation in college hostels. We have a fairly elaborate machinery in the Education Department for finding out these needs. The University itself is always accessible and as a member of the Department of Education and of the University, I would say that very few needs have been brought to notice during the last year. It is rather a naive way of representing the situation to subtract the number of students in hostels from the total number in educational institutions and to assume that their number is a measure of the need. I am unable to accept that as a test of the situation; nor am I aware that the needs of the Muhammadan community in this respect are any greater than the needs of the Hindu community or of those classes that are known as backward classes. I would gladly see more provision made under this head if we were likely to spend it, but schemes mature slowly and, especially grants-in-aid schemes, depend on local contribution, and I am not acquainted with any scheme or needs or definite proposals that need pledge the department to greater expenditure during the next year than the expenditure already provided for. During the last three years we have spent practically Rs. 3 lakhs in capital expenditure for this purpose—I have not the figures for recurring expenditure immediately available. We have a number of schemes for hostels in Government institutions and non-Government institutions; the schemes for Government institutions come to about Rs. $1\frac{1}{2}$ lakh and those for private institutions to Rs. 1,30,000, and only one new scheme has recently been presented to us; this will cost about Rs. 12,000; it is receiving attention, and if it matures, will be financed without delay. I, therefore, consider, my Lord, that we have sufficient provision in our budget for probable needs under the appropriate head of grants-in-aid, and I would assure the Hon'ble Mover that if our expectations are not fulfilled, and if the demand proves greater than our expectations, we strain every nerve and make every effort to meet the just needs of the Muhammadan community."

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said:—

"My Lord, I have placed certain figures before this Council for the consideration of the members and I may say that I took some pains to ascertain the facts as correctly as I could possibly do, and the figures that I have placed before the Council are, I believe, substantially correct. The Director of Public Instruction has said that it is not a good test to subtract the number residing in hostels and messes from the total number of students in colleges and schools, and then inferring from the figures arrived at that the question of hostel accommodation is of any great urgency or necessity. There is one little matter which I would respectfully like to remind him of and it is this: There are hundreds of students every year who cannot pursue their studies in Calcutta for want of sufficient hostel accommodation and who cannot take admission in colleges simply because of the insufficient accommodation in Muhammadan hostels. Therefore, the number which we have got at present on the college rolls—I mean the number of Muhammadan students—is much less than what it would have been if we had sufficient hostel accommodation for them. The absence of sufficient hostel accommodation really reacts on the number that take admission in colleges, and I think it is a very safe guide to find out whether the necessity is urgent or not by finding out how many of the college students are without any kind of hostel accommodation. It is true that on the last occasion when I brought this question up before the Council, the Director of Public Instruction speaking on behalf of Government was pleased to give me the assurance that the matter would receive his anxious consideration and that he would, as he has promised this afternoon, strain every nerve in its accomplishment if we could make out that the case of hostel for the accommodation of Muhammadan students is one of urgent necessity. It is very difficult for us to go about seeking students who go away from Calcutta disappointed by not getting seats in colleges and hostels and bringing every such instance to the notice of the Director. But, if he wishes it, I can do so, though I warn him that it would greatly interfere with his departmental duties if he is going to be besieged by an army of Muhammadan students every day. It is true that assurances have been given from time to time, and although I greatly acknowledge the efforts that have been made for providing hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students from time to time, within the last 12 years in this very Council, very little tangible effect has been produced towards that direction. I find various budget allotments, under the head Education which the department has not been able to utilize. I wonder how, with the anxious solicitude on the part of Government, grants that have been made by the Imperial Government and other large sums of money were allowed to lapse simply for want of suitable schemes for spending the money on—the money at the disposal of the Provincial Government. I cannot understand why with such a pressing need before them—a need to which attention of the Government is drawn every year in the Council by discussions and resolutions—that money is allowed to lapse for want of definite schemes. I do not wish to say anything further on the subject, because I find that I have not been able to convince the Director of Public Instruction that the need for hostel accommodation for Muhammadan students is really as urgent as I have represented it to be. I wish to challenge only that portion of his statement wherein he says that the difficulty of Muhammadan students in getting hostel accommodation is not greater than non-Muhammadan students. I have already pointed out the special difficulties of the Muhammadan students. I need not go into details. These difficulties do not stand in the way of non-Muhammadan students, and I have not come across one non-Muhammadan leader who has not acknowledged his anxious solicitude for Muhammadan education even at the sacrifice of the interests of his own community. Whenever we have brought up the question of Muhammadan hostel accommodation and Muhammadan education we have received nothing but sympathy from the leaders of the non-Muhammadan communities. Because they appreciate our difficulties at the present moment they sympathize with us, and if I am to press this resolution to a division I am sure every one of them will vote for me. But I do not wish to take up the time of the Council. I brought up this matter for consideration and it rests with your Excellency's Government to accept it or not."

Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

Sir D. P. Sarbadhikari.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 21.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari the following resolution which stood in his name went by default :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a sum of Rs. 3 lakhs be provided in the budget for the improvement of private colleges ; and
- (b) that the necessary funds be obtained by a corresponding reduction in the provision for Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department.

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 23.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that provision be made for Rs. 5 lakhs for granting some allowance to all clerks drawing a monthly salary of one hundred rupees and less, employed under the Government of Bengal; and
- (b) that the expenditure be met out of the grant of Rs. 34,20,000 provided in the budget for New Works (including Minor Works) under the head 45—Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department.

He said :—

“My Lord, the resolution speaks for itself. I need not take much time of the Council in moving this resolution. It is well known to your Excellency's Government that the price of all food-stuffs such as rice, flour, ghee, mustard-oil, spices, etc., etc., and other necessities of life, e.g., cloth, medicine, etc., have risen abnormally high. The hard-worked clerks under your Excellency's Government drawing a monthly salary of Rs. 100 and below find it very difficult to make both ends meet and maintain the members of their family and dependents properly. It is no exaggeration to state that many have been obliged to take one meal a day. Respectable merchants have kindly increased the salary of their clerks and further granted them a war bonus. Persons employed in the printing department of the Government of India in Calcutta and also a large number of persons in the Postal and Telegraph Department clerks under the various provincial Government have been granted allowances as detailed below :—

Statement showing allowances sanctioned by different Local Governments and Imperial Departments.

Name of Local Government or Imperial Department.	Date from which the sanction has effect.	Rate of allowances sanctioned.
Post and Telegraphs	1st November 1917	Five per cent. of salary to all non-gazetted officers drawing pay up to Rs. 600 in addition to all other emoluments (i.e. , grain compensation allowances).
	1st November 1918	Additional 5 per cent. of salary to all non-gazetted officers drawing pay up to Rs. 70.
Controller of Printing, Stamps and Stationery.	1st April 1918 ...	Five per cent. of salary to all members of superior establishment up to Rs. 600. Clerks drawing under Rs. 25 to get Rs. 25. Inferior servants to receive allowance under the Bengal Government scheme. These allowances may be drawn in addition to grain compensation allowance.
	1st November 1918	Additional 5 per cent. of salary to all members of superior establishment drawing pay up to Rs. 70.

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

Name of Local Government or Imperial Department.	Date from which the sanction has effect.	Rate of allowances sanctioned.
Government of Madras.	1st January 1919	Rupees 4 when salary is Rs. 9 and under; Rs. 5 when salary exceeds Rs. 9 but not Rs. 16; Rs. 6 on salaries of Rs. 50 and under; men drawing over Rs. 50 but less than Rs. 56 should be given such sum as is necessary in each case to bring the pay to Rs. 56. Grain compensation allowance is not admissible in addition.
Mysore Presidency (Bangalore).	1st March 1918 ...	Five per cent. of salary to all public servants drawing Rs. 50 and less in addition to grain compensation allowance.
United Provinces of Agra and Oudh.	1st December 1918	Rs. 4 to all whole-time Government servants on pay exceeding Rs. 30 but not exceeding Rs. 50 till declaration of peace.
Punjab Government	1st October 1918	Five per cent. of salary to all public servants drawing Rs. 50 and less in addition to grain compensation allowance.
Government of Bombay.	1st January 1918	Thirty-three per cent. on salary from Rs. 20 to Rs. 30; 25 per cent. on salary above Rs. 30 to Rs. 70; minimum pay of all clerical appointments to be raised to Rs. 20 and war allowance paid on it; and Rs. 4 to other superior servants on pay less than Rs. 20. Rs. 4 to inferior servants. Grain compensation allowance is not admissible in addition. (It has also been decided that a substantial portion of this allowance is to be eventually consolidated in pay.) Those drawing between Rs. 30 and Rs. 32 to be brought by an allowance to Rs. 40 and those above Rs. 70 to be brought to Rs. 87-8.
Central Provinces...	1st October 1918	Rupees 3-8-0 to all whole-time Government servants drawing Rs. 16 and less; Rs. 6 to those drawing more than Rs. 16 but less than Rs. 50. (Grain compensation allowance is not admissible in addition.) Men drawing over Rs. 50 but less than Rs. 56 should be given such sum as is necessary in each case to bring the pay up to Rs. 56.

Building materials including bricks are very costly now. If the construction of buildings be postponed for a year, the charges will be less. I, therefore, move this resolution for the kind consideration of your Excellency's Council that provision be made for Rs. 5 lakhs for granting some allowance to the clerks and this expenditure be met from the grant of Rs. 34,20,000 provided in the budget for new works (including Minor Works) under the Head 45—Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department.

The question for consideration is whether the prices of food-stuffs and other necessities of life has risen abnormally high. On a previous occasion I brought to the notice of your Excellency's Council that this is a fact which cannot be denied and it is beyond dispute, and labouring under that idea I have ventured again now to bring forward the case of poor and hard-working clerks to your Excellency's notice. It is not necessary for me to plead their case, but I base my arguments entirely upon facts. I have brought the matter to your Excellency's Council, and it would be an act of justice to take their case into consideration and increase their pay as suggested by me. With these words, my Lord, I commend the resolution to your consideration."

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, this resolution is by way of being an echo of a resolution which was moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq at Dacca on the 19th August last, with this difference that while that resolution referred to public services in general, the present resolution refers only to clerks. Otherwise the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq made a somewhat similar proposal to that now put forward. I then opposed it on the general ground that in these days of economy we cannot always be as generous as we would like to be ; at that time grain prices were not high, which was a great relief to the poorer classes, and what we had done was mainly directed towards helping our menial establishments. With reference to them we had given relief involving an expenditure of Rs. 4 lakhs. out of a total scheme which would have entailed an outlay of some Rs. 17 lakhs. I said that, all things considered, that was about as far as we found that we could go. The proposal of last August is now practically repeated, but a general proposition of this kind should not be allowed to obscure the fact that in individual cases, according as they arise and according to their merits, we do give, and have given, relief even since August last to various lowly paid servants of Government. I have already referred to the fact that we have raised the pay of the menial servants in certain of the Calcutta hospitals. We have raised the pay of our press establishment on the lines of the action taken by the Government of India, which are included in the statement which the Hon'ble Member read out, and in the budget of this year we have a provision for helping the lowly paid clerks in the Registration Department. Therefore, it is not correct that we are unmindful of the needs of these low paid establishments, and in minor cases their grievances are constantly coming before us. That being so, the question is whether we should undertake a liability for this very large expenditure which the Hon'ble Mover estimates at Rs. 5 lakhs. I am not aware on what basis he has arrived at these figures, and bearing in mind that what we recently did for our menial staff involved us in an expenditure of Rs. 4 lakhs. I should think any measure of relief on the scale he has outlined must be a decidedly more expensive matter than he has mentioned. I do not think, Sir, that we should be justified even if we found the money, which it would be very difficult to do, in undertaking the liability suggested, and neither do the precedents that he has given us altogether make out a case for so doing. It is perfectly true that relief has been given to the Post and Telegraph Departments as well as to the Press and Railway establishments, but these are under the control of the Government of India and are more or less commercial departments which were subjected to a very heavy strain during the war, and I imagine that to that fact weight was attached. But apart from those instances, I cannot find in the statement a single province that has gone up in the way of relief to anything like those who are drawing Rs. 100 or under. Bombay seems to have gone up to those in receipt of Rs. 70, but the conditions of Bombay have been very special ever since the beginning of the war ; references to it have appeared in the papers, and I mentioned it in this Council, in particular, in the course of the Dacca debate. Otherwise other provinces do not seem to have admitted to help anyone drawing more than Rs. 50, and even such action has been taken only in Madras, the United Provinces, the Punjab and the Central Provinces, in all of which areas, I may remind the Council, famine conditions are prevailing, which is not the case with us here in Bengal. On the precedents, therefore, I do not think the Hon'ble Member has justified his claim that we should help everybody up to Rs. 100. and the most I can hold out any hope of doing is in connection with papers which have just been handed to me to-day in Council. I see that in connection with one of these complaints which are constantly coming up from various sections of our staffs, we have been trying to work out a proposal to extend grain compensation allowance, possibly, to the clerical establishments in receipt of Rs. 30 and under. Grain compensation allowance, as the Council is aware, is an allowance which has now been in force for some years, and in this province it is regulated by orders passed in 1912. Its general principle is that it is regulated by a standard price of grain; if grain rises above a certain price those in receipt of a pay of Rs. 12 and under automatically get certain additions to their pay. In these papers it is suggested that we might give a similar measure of relief to clerks who are in receipt of Rs. 30 and under, and for that there is some precedent, since this Rs. 30 rate was in force at one time in place of Rs. 12 which is now adopted. I am willing to examine this suggestion further, and if we can see our way to find the money and work out a practical scheme on these lines, I will prepare a case and put it before your Excellency and my Hon'ble colleagues. There is some justification for doing so, as in my remarks at Dacca in August last I claimed that food prices were low; that, unfortunately, is no longer correct, although the prices are even now not as high as they have been in past years. However, they are not now low, and I think it is arguable that we should try and do something on these lines. I cannot be more explicit as I have not had time to examine the figures and work out details, but as a general measure of relief it looks as if something of this kind might be feasible. It does not go as far as the Hon'ble Member represents, but as I have explained, the conditions here are not the same as in other provinces, and we cannot go as far as he would wish. It is not unfair that we should relieve those drawing Rs. 30 and under, because it is those on the lowest rates of pay who have the first claim on our sympathy. I cannot accept the resolution, but I offer this possible solution to the Hon'ble Member for what he may consider it to be worth."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I rise to support the motion of my Hon'ble friend the mover of the resolution, and in doing so I may say that I have listened with very great attention, as far as I could hear, the observations of the Hon'ble Member who spoke on behalf of Government. My Lord, I acknowledge with gratitude that relief has been given in individual cases in the case of menial servants in hospitals, in the case of the press establishment and in the case of some low-paid clerks in the Registration Department. But, my Lord, the members of your Excellency's Government and the experienced members of the Indian Civil Service who are Government members here are well aware of the fact that the poorer bhadralog classes have been much impoverished in recent times. They are, generally speaking, people of very moderate means, earning Rs. 2 or Rs. 3 a day. They belong generally to the smaller trading community and also to the subordinate clerical establishment of Government. And, although, I observed a note of sympathy in the observations that have fallen from the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler that he is prepared to grant some grain compensation allowance to clerks drawing up to Rs. 30 a month, I would ask him and your Excellency to consider this fact that in these days a man earning Rs. 2 a day cannot maintain a family of 10 or 12 heads, and such persons have consequently to starve on one meal a day or run into debt. I am not exaggerating, and I feel bound to give expression what is already prevailing in Bengal. I would respectfully ask your Excellency and specially the members of your Excellency's Executive Council to consider how it is possible for a bhadralog earning Rs. 2 or Rs. 3 a day to maintain a family of 10 or 12 persons in these days of high prices of food-stuffs and cloth and everything else. There is lamentation throughout the country. Of course, I know it is so all over the world. But in those countries Government is prepared to help the people under their charge, and if I may be permitted to make a suggestion, your Excellency's Government may be pleased to raise the Rs. 30 standard to a maximum of Rs. 60. It will then to some extent relieve the distress of the poorer bhadralog classes who are very hard pressed in these times of high prices. They are a mute class and they do not shout forth their grievances from public platforms or send lengthy memorials to Government. But all the same they are a long-suffering class and, therefore, if the Government can see their way to raise the maximum to Rs. 60 it will be received with as much gratitude as the announcement of the exemption from income-tax of incomes below Rs. 2,000 a year. If the Government of India can show that generosity I think your Excellency's Government can also extend their generosity by granting a grain compensation allowance to persons getting Rs. 60 a month or under. Mention has been made of the Post and Telegraph men who, it has been said, have been granted allowances because they worked very hard during war time. No doubt they have worked hard, but they surely got extra remuneration. Besides, the Posts and Telegraphs men are comparatively better paid than the class I am speaking of who are getting Rs. 60 and under and towards whom, I hope, the same concession will be shown. In Bombay, it has been stated, allowances are given to those who are drawing Rs. 70 or under—I do not know whether I have heard the Hon'ble Member right—but if that is so, I think it will be no extravagance if we extend the allowance to men drawing Rs. 60 or under. I hope this question will be sympathetically considered and that something will be done to give relief to the poorer bhadralog classes."

Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have listened to the speech delivered by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler. I consider it a very important subject, because, when I put to the Council the condition of those clerks who are suffering much, I think I should also appeal to the generosity of your Excellency's Government. The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has said that they are suffering much; they are toiling much from day to night; no one to take care of them and no one to plead for them. Now, that, my Lord, is the position of these clerks. It is very gratifying to hear from what the Hon'ble Member of Government has said that Government will consider the case of those who are drawing Rs. 30 or so. My proposal is to the effect that the case of those who are drawing monthly Rs. 100 or below should be considered. The state of things if described properly to the Council is that every person who knows the conditions of life of these poor clerks will sympathize with me when I put forward the resolution. I repeat once more that your Excellency's Government ought to take notice of these poor clerks. I did not formulate the amount which is to be fixed as increased pay over the amounts which these men are drawing. The reason is simply because I left the matter entirely to Government officers to settle. It is not for me to formulate or to put forward an ipse dixit on the point, but I left the case to the Government and the consideration of the Council."

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 24.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari the following resolution which stood in his name went by default :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

(a) that a sum of Rs. 5 lakhs be provided in the budget for—

- (i) providing counter-attractions against drink and drug habits in Calcutta and selected district towns ;
- (ii) improving the pay and prospects of the Excise service ; and
- (iii) facilitating temperance teaching in educational institutions ; and

(b) that the necessary funds for the purpose be obtained by reducing to the necessary extent the charges for Civil Works in charge of the Public Works Department.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 25.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council :—

- (a) that a sum of Rs. 75,000 be provided in the budget of 1919-20 for the construction of the proposed record-room at Faridpur for the custody of the District Settlement records ; and
- (b) that this sum be met—
 - (i) by curtailment of the provision for “ Criminal Investigation Department ” under head 20—Police ; or
 - (ii) from the provision made for “ Sub-Deputy Collectors as Circle Officers ” under head General Establishment.

He said :

“ My Lord, the subject matter of this resolution is one of purely local interest, and I cannot expect to attract much sympathy from the non-official members of this Council, so I shall mainly appeal to the official members of the Council. I think, at the very outset I ought frankly to confess that I do not pretend to be altogether so very disinterested in this matter as the wording of this resolution might apparently indicate. Your Excellency is aware that a college has recently been established at Faridpur mainly through your Excellency's generous considerations, and I take this opportunity of giving public expression to the debt of gratitude which the Faridpur people owe to your Excellency personally in this connection. It was your Excellency who as Governor of the Presidency granted the land required for the college without which the project would have been nipped in the bud, and again, it was your Excellency who, as Rector of the University, obtained the affiliation of the college under circumstances of no ordinary difficulty. My Lord, the humble individual who is now addressing you will always remember with gratitude and respect the generous considerations which your Excellency has from time to time shown for the accomplishment of this project. Now, my

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

Lord, the land granted by the Government for this college contains an old building which the College Council has purchased from the municipality, but it is occupied at the present time with the settlement records of the district. In granting this land your Excellency's Government insisted upon two conditions, namely, that the college building, in whatever shape and form it might be started at the beginning must be constructed independently of, and perfectly detached from, this old building, and the other condition was that this old building though purchased from the municipality would not be given to the college authorities until Government were in a position to remove these valuable records somewhere else. The College Council has loyally submitted to both these conditions and the college building which is now nearing completion is being constructed entirely on one side of this old building and perfectly detached from it. The college has fortunately proved a success much beyond our expectation, and there seems to be a great future before it. Although we have in constructing this new building provided for nearly 500 students I believe as the run for admission in the college seems to be so great that probably even with this building the accommodation will be found insufficient, so that the College Council will shortly have to look to this old building for further expansion of the college. This old building which is now occupied by the settlement records cannot be availed of until Government constructs a record-room of its own. It may be remembered that an estimate was prepared soon after the completion of the settlement in the district of Faridpur for the custody of the settlement records—a portion of the materials was also collected and they are still lying on the ground where the building is to be constructed, but soon after the project was started the war broke out and the matter was allowed to drop. This has involved some loss also to Government, as in keeping the settlement records in this old building Government have to maintain a separate establishment of not only record-keepers and copyists but also a number of guards, and besides it has to pay a rent of Rs. 720 a year to the municipality for the use and occupation of this building. With all this, my Lord, the supervision of the Collector over this building is very imperfect for the reason that this building stands on an isolated ground far remote from the other buildings of the Collectorate. The valuable records are kept in this building in huge masses. My esteemed friend, the hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth, who went to inspect the locality at the very inception of our project knows very well how heavily it is stuffed from floor to ceiling with these records with scarcely two feet of space between each two racks for a man to pass through and then these records are being subjected to ravages of cock-roaches and whiteants: so that the sooner the Government construct the record-room which was already in contemplation in 1914 the better for Government as also for the college, because in that case the college authorities will be in a position to utilize this building and expand the college further.

In placing this resolution before your Excellency's Council I have referred to two sources from which money might be drawn—first, from the allotment made for the Criminal Investigation Department under head 20—Police. My Lord, from the Financial Statement it will be seen that ever since 1915-16 the provision under this head has steadily gone on increasing. I think we live in much calmer times at the present moment. Whatever the situation might have been in 1916-17 I think we have passed the breakwater-line and are now sailing on a much smoother water. Consequently I think it will not be too much for me to expect that the provision for the Criminal Investigation Department, however necessary it may be, is susceptible of some reduction when affairs are so much changed for the better. The second source to which I have referred is the allotment for 'Sub-Deputy Collectors as Circle Officers'. I would be the last man to ask for any curtailment from the allotment for the expansion of village self-government, but I do not know if I am labouring under a mistake. It seems to me that the Village Self-Government Bill, as amended by the Select Committee, does away with circle boards which was the original intention of the Bill, and if the circle boards are eliminated I doubt if the Circle officers should not go with it. In this view I have referred to this source also. I do not know, my Lord, if I am quite happy in my suggestions about the sources, but whatever that may be if I have made out a good case for the construction of a room for settlement records I believe Government will be able to find money—not a very large sum—in order to complete the record-room at Faridpur and thereby not only preserve the records in a much better form and condition but also provide expansion for a college for which the Government has done so much. With these observations I commend the resolution to your Excellency's Council."

Mr. Cumming; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :

"My Lord, as the Hon'ble Member has stated, this resolution is one of purely local interest, but even so I am glad to be in a position to meet the Hon'ble Member, although not perhaps to the extent as stated in his resolution. The project to which he has referred, viz., the construction of a record-room at Faridpur is mutually advantageous both to Government and to the Faridpur Rajendra College, the construction of which is so near to his heart. On the one hand, this project has been an important one for which Government have been desirous of supplying funds for several years. It was administratively approved five years ago. As the Hon'ble Member has explained, the existing arrangements are by no means suitable and owing to the difficulties which have arisen on account of the war it was not possible to obtain the materials which were required; and so the project has been allowed to remain in a state of suspension. It is now hoped that it will be possible to make a start with the building in the present year. On the other hand the proposal is primarily in the interest of the college for which Government have given a grant of land of over 5 acres in the immediate vicinity of this building; and my last visit to Faridpur has confirmed me as to the suitability of the proposed arrangement whereby the existing record-room should be given up for the purposes of the college as soon as possible. On these two grounds, Sir, that it is advantageous to Government and advantageous to the new college, an endeavour will be made to erect the building during the ensuing year. The Hon'ble Member, however, has entered a sum of Rs. 75,000 and has made a suggestion that it should be met from two heads. Government, however, think it more appropriate that the money should be supplied from another head regarding the diversion of which there can be no dispute. We have a sum of Rs. 40,000 under the heading of General Administration which is immediately available for diversion; and, if the Hon'ble Member would be prepared to substitute Rs. 40,000 for Rs. 75,000 in the substantive part of his resolution and will cancel clause (b), he may rely on Government that the financing of the building will be started and carried out in due course. So far as this resolution goes, Government will accept it if the Hon'ble Member accepts the changes to be made which I have indicated."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :

"My Lord, after the very kind assurance which has been given by the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming I do not think I need press for a division in this case. I am glad that something is being done in this direction, whether it be Rs. 75,000 or Rs. 40,000 it will not matter much. As the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has said, I know that if Government once takes it up it will be able to complete this building within a much shorter time than we can possibly expect. I again thank Government and the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming for the suggestion he has made and with your Excellency's permission I would beg leave to say that instead of Rs. 75,000 it may be reduced to Rs. 40,000 to suit the convenience of the department, and that it may be taken from the General Administration head."

Sir Henry Wheeler; The President; Babu A. C. Mazumdar; Babu A. C. Datta.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :

"My Lord, I would like to say just a word to elaborate what the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has said about the source from which this allotment is to be taken. I do not wish Hon'ble Members to think that there are odd sums of Rs. 40,000 lying about in the budget which can without inconvenience be diverted to other purposes. The head to which Mr. Cumming refers is the provision for the Press Censorship. There is money available under that head because when the budget was under preparation we made a provision on the same scale as in the previous year, but, as Hon'ble Members may have seen, we have recently closed down the Press Censor's establishment, and therefore the full sum will no longer be required. This change of policy was adopted after the estimates were framed.

The President said :

"The position is this. Government are prepared to accept the Hon'ble Member's resolution subject to certain modifications. The first modification is the substitution of the figures '40,000' for the figures '75,000' and the second modification is the substitution for part (b) of the following: 'from the lump provision for the Press Censor and his establishment under head 18—General Administration'. If the Hon'ble Member is prepared to move his resolution in that form, Government will accept it."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambica Charan Mazumdar said :

"I thankfully accept both the amendments."

The resolution was then put in the following modified form and agreed to :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a sum of Rs. 40,000 be provided in the budget of 1919-20 for the construction of the proposed record-room at Faridpur for the custody of the district settlement records; and
- (b) that this sum be met from the lump provision for the Press Censor and his establishment under head 18—General Administration.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 26.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta, the following resolution which stood in his name went by default :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a sum of Rs. 20,000, or some other suitable sum, be provided in the next year's budget for the improvement of the Comilla Civil Court's compound and the buildings thereof; and
- (b) that this amount be taken out of—
 - (i) the provision of Rs. 2,00,000 for the improvement of the Duars Road in Jalpaiguri; or
 - (ii) the provision of Rs. 1,00,000 for laying the Maidan roads in Calcutta with tar macadam metalling.

Babu A. C. Datta ; Maulvi A. Kasem.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 27.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta the following resolution which stood in his name went by default :—

That this Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that suitable provision be made in the budget for 1919-20 for a project for mitigating the effects of flood in the country in the district of Tippera ; and
- (b) that the necessary amount be taken out of the provision of Rs. 4,54,000 for widening the Madaripur Bil route.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 28.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the sum of Rs. 40,000 allotted for the construction of a steam-launch be allotted for the purpose of mitigating the effects of the floods of the Adjai in the Ausgram, Mungulkot and Ketugram thanas of the Burdwan district.

He said :

“ My Lord, I would be failing in my duty if in moving this resolution, I do not on behalf of my countrymen acknowledge with thanks the sympathetic attitude taken by your Excellency's Government and the Public Works Department towards the mitigation of the effects of the floods in the Burdwan Division. Even this year in the Financial Budget, provision has been made for the mitigation of the floods both on the side of the Damodar as well as Adjai, and last year also some provision was made under this head, but up till now as far as the Adjai floods are concerned, the attention of the department has been directed entirely to the scheduled embankments up to Sagarputul and no further, and my grievance is that the people lower down the river in the whole of the Kutwa subdivision are suffering and their crops are destroyed every year, but that has not drawn much attention because it has been the normal state of affairs for the last 30 years. I do not ask for any embankment. I myself have tried in this Council on various occasions by several resolutions to draw the attention of Government and I understand that a survey has been made of the whole tract of land, but no scheme has yet matured and no funds provided for the purpose. But I hope, my Lord, this matter will receive the attention of the Government and as I had to suggest the amount to be found somewhere, I thought that the provision of a steam-launch to replace the ‘Sir John Lambert’ was the proper thing to do, because, I believe, that not much necessity has been shown for the construction of this launch. However, that is a minor matter, and I am less anxious for the non-replacement of this steam-launch than that some provision should be made for mitigating the effects of the floods in the area mentioned in the resolution. The situation is very grave, and I might say that in several villages in this area many people have had to leave their homes on account of the distress caused by these floods. I do not mean abnormal floods like the great floods of 1913 and 1916 and 1917, but I mean the ordinary rise of the river on account of large breaches on the banks of the Adjai, the whole tract of the land lying on the right side and some portion of the left side up to Kaughiri are practically desolated because the crops are destroyed every year and sand is laid on arable land making it unfit for further cultivation, and as enquiries have already been made into the matter by the Public Works Department, I hope this question will be taken up without further delay. I appeal to the officers of the Department as well as to your Excellency's Government to give this matter consideration. With these words I commend the resolution for acceptance.”

Mr. Cumming, Maulvi A. Kasem.

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :

"In this case also, my Lord, I am speaking from personal experience. I visited the area in question with the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley. It was decided that in addition to the improvement of the embankments under the control of Government which are known as schedule D embankments, there should also be expenditure for the purpose of mitigating the floods lower down in the areas to which the Hon'ble Member has drawn attention. He complains that no money has been set aside for the purpose. It is true that the money that has been set aside is now borne in the grand total under the head of Minor Irrigation ; but it is not Rs. 40,000 but Rs. 1 lakh which has been set aside for the purpose of constructing a scheme which will prevent anything but the super-excessive floods from deluging the country, and will permit the overflow in the case of ordinary floods to be kept within bounds. In view of these facts, Sir, that far from there being no provision of outlay there is a provision of Rs. 1 lakh and that the money provided will be sufficient not only for the initiation of the scheme, but for its completion within the present year, I hope the Hon'ble Member will see his way to withdraw his resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :

"My Lord, as I began by saying that I cordially acknowledge that some provision was made for Safarpulat escapement, but my point was that that escapement will no doubt mitigate the effects of the floods in the western area in certain portions of the Sadar subdivision, my point is that no escapement has been provided in the Kutwa subdivision. Owing to breaches on the banks of the Adjai the country is inundated every year on account of the river bed being much higher than the land on the opposite side. There are breaches even this year, all the water passing through the river instead of passing through the canal escapement from these breaches into the whole area. Therefore, I wanted to draw the attention of Government to this matter, but as I have done so I do not think any good will come in pressing this resolution, therefore I beg to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 29.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the sum of Rs. 32,207 allotted for raising the strength of the Dacca Military Police Battalion be allotted for the purpose of increasing the pay of teachers in primary schools in rural areas.

He said :

"My Lord, there is a provision made in this year's budget for increasing the pay of teachers in primary schools in rural areas by Re. 1 a month, but I submit, my Lord, that this is very inadequate. Government spend a fairly good amount of money in guru-training schools where teachers in these primary schools are supposed to be trained, but the difficulty is that when these teachers are trained they cannot find any employment because the pay and the remuneration of the teachers in these primary schools in the rural areas is much less than the ministerial officers in Government offices and so they can better employ their time in other vocations than in teaching little boys in rural areas, and I think it is the duty of Government to see that proper qualified teachers and that a sufficient number of teachers are attracted to their work by at least a living allowance and for this reason, my Lord, I beg to move this resolution, and in doing so I might only add that at the present moment there is not much necessity for adding any other battalion to the Dacca military police. It might be said that the necessity has been felt and that it will certainly improve the police administration at Dacca, but I submit that the relative necessity and importance of the two questions should be considered, and in my opinion I think the teachers of rural schools have better claims than the strengthening of the military police, and if we go through the budget for the last three or four years we find that the expenditure on the police and the strengthening of the police force has gone on increasing in a rather high proportion, and I submit, my Lord, that it is time now to curtail it or an attempt be made to curtail it. With these words I submit this resolution to the Council for acceptance."

Mr. Wordsworth; Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :

"My Lord, the improvement of the condition of teachers in our rural primary schools has long exercised us and is likely long to exercise us. The difficulties are, as the Hon'ble Maulvi has pointed out, difficulties relating to resources, but there are also difficulties relating to the esteem or rather the want of esteem in which primary school-teachers and primary school work is held even by those sections of the community who profit most by it. We have devoted of late generous resources, using the word generous in a comparative sense, towards the improvement of the position of these teachers. So far as I remember the figures there was spent last year directly on primary education something over Rs. 7 lakhs from district board funds, about Rs. 16 lakhs from Government funds contributed by the Government of India and about Rs. 2 lakhs from provincial revenues. This Government was amongst other things able to increase the aid which was given to trained teachers in primary schools by a figure of Rs. 6 a month and to untrained teachers, that is, teachers who have no qualifications at all for the work, up to Rs. 2 a month. We would gladly welcome any additional resources, but the additional resources which the Hon'ble Member proposes would enable us to increase the pay of teachers in rural areas by something between half and three-fourths of an anna a month. I presume that the item which it is proposed to reduce has been framed in accordance with strict necessity, but even if that were not so, I doubt whether I should be able to recommend the Council to accept the resolution, seeing that it would have very little influence upon the welfare of the class whom it is intended to serve."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :

"My Lord, I would like just to say a word as to the source from which the Hon'ble Member wishes to take the money as he seems to be under the impression that this is some unnecessary provision for the improvement of the local Dacca police. That is not so. As the Council is aware, in this province (apart from Darjeeling) we have practically no troops outside the city of Calcutta. If, therefore, there were disturbances necessitating the intervention of other than the ordinary police, we should either have to bring troops from Calcutta or look to the only other force which we have, namely, the military police, which happens to have its headquarters at Dacca. That force at present consists of six companies, four of which are supposed to be concentrated at Dacca, one at Hooghly, to control the large mill population employed on the banks of the river, and the other at Buxa in connection with frontier precautions. Experience has shown that we cannot ordinarily move either the company at Hooghly or that at Buxa.

Maulvi A. Kasem.

The four companies at Dacca number 448 men; our object is to provide a moveable column of 150 men which can be sent rapidly to any place at which disturbances may take place. Far from the cases being few in which such a need has arisen, there have been 65 occasions since April 1912 on which we had to utilize the military police at Dacca. But the miscellaneous duties which this small detachment at Dacca is called upon to perform take away so many men that we cannot in the event of an emergency count with certainty upon even the small column of 150 which our scheme contemplates. It is therefore proposed, and it has been approved by the Government of India, to add another reserve company to the Dacca military police, and only last year we would have very much welcomed the presence of such a reserve in connection with hât looting. Owing to its not being available, we had to ask Assam for assistance, which they were unable to give owing to their own frontier troubles, and we had to warn the Government of India that we might have to ask them for help. It is that contingency which this scheme is intended to meet."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :

"My Lord, I beg leave to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 30.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a sum of Rs. 10,000 be allotted for the grant of special scholarships for Muhammedan boys in rural areas; and
- (b) that the amount be met from the lump sum of Rs. 23,158 unallotted.

He said :

"My Lord, I need hardly submit to your Excellency's Government or to this Council the necessity for granting scholarships to Muhammadan boys. It is well known that the members of my community are very poor and the greatest block to the advancement of education among Muhammadans in this province, at any rate, is due to the want of means on the part of Muhammadan parents to educate their boys. The number of scholarships reserved for Moslem boys in primary and also secondary schools are very few, and I think the time has come when that number should be increased and the poor boys in rural areas, who prove themselves intelligent and industrious, should receive encouragement to prosecute their studies further. In this connection, my Lord, I beg to submit, and this I do with some amount of diffidence, that the attention of the department and of Government have of late been directed towards the Muhammadans of Eastern Bengal districts more favourably than the Muhammadans in the Burdwan and Presidency Divisions. The distribution of scholarships both for higher schools and colleges, as well as for primary schools, among the Muhammadans of Eastern and Western Bengal is in my humble opinion neither fair nor just, and that distribution has been made, I believe, on the strength of the Muhammadan population in Eastern Bengal which is very large. That may be so, but I think that the Moslems of the western districts of this Presidency have also by their past record proved themselves deserving of special consideration, and as this amount is suggested to be drawn from the unallotted balances, I hope, my Lord, that this resolution will be accepted by your Excellency's Council."

Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :

"My Lord, the case of additional scholarships for Muhammadan boys has been receiving consideration for the last year. It was recommended by the last Muhammadan Conference that more scholarships should be reserved for Muhammadan boys in lower primary schools, and Government has accepted that resolution among others as a basis for further consideration of the question. It has long been part of the policy of Government to reserve special scholarships for Muhammadans, while at the same time allowing them full opportunity of competing for all other scholarships available. The principle has been accepted and the proposal now under consideration is merely one of degree and not of principle. It was pointed out by that Muhammadan Conference that of the scholarships in lower primary schools, which are given by district boards and not by Government, only some 10 out of a number of 700 were specially reserved for Muhammadans. We have been in correspondence with district boards for the last year endeavouring to secure accurate facts and to arrive at the basis of proposals for the consideration of Government. Progress has been slow mainly owing to the difficulty that district boards appear to have found in giving us facts, but I think the end is in sight and our proposals will soon be submitted to Government. It must, however, be remembered that these proposals were not based on any inequality in opportunities of education as between Muhammadans and any other class. The recommendation of the Committee was simply this: 'The results of the scholarship examinations for the past few years show that the ratio of the number of scholarships gained by Moslem boys to the number gained by Hindu boys is much less than the ratio of the number of Moslem school boys to the number of Hindu school boys. We think that this may be due to the method of selecting candidates from the various schools. Government has already accepted the principle of reserving scholarships for Moslem boys, but we consider that the number reserved is totally inadequate.' The problem therefore before us is to consider whether we should by any administrative regulations provide that Muhammadan boys should receive that proportion of the total number of scholarships available which their number would appear to justify. That is the question under consideration. It might be advisable if I explain to the Council the position of Muhammadan boys in regard to scholarships and the number of scholarships reserved for Muhammadan students. This number is not so small as the Hon'ble Member would suggest. In upper primary schools 24 are reserved out of 210, in middle schools 55 out of 210; of junior scholarships in the first two years of college, including scholarships paid for by Mohsin endowments, the Muhammadans have 163 reserved out of 279, and of senior scholarships for the last two years of college the Muhammadans have 59 reserved out of 103. This does not mean that the other communities have the balance. The Muhammadans have their own preserve, and have also equal opportunities with all other classes in relation to other scholarships. There are no scholarships reserved for Hindus with the exception of one or two trust scholarships which we administer, and of a few for those classes which we call the backward classes. It is not clear, therefore, that the Muhammadans are at present at any great disadvantage in this matter although Government will be shortly addressed on the question of increasing the number of scholarships to be reserved for Muhammadans by district boards. These scholarships are not proposed by the Muhammadan Conference with a view to redress any inequality of numbers between the members of the various communities in schools. My last figures are that in primary schools Muhammadan pupils are 50 per cent. of the whole ; in middle schools 33 per cent. and in high schools 20 per cent. The Hon'ble Member has stated but has given no arguments in proof of his position that the distribution of these special privileges for Muhammadans as between Eastern and Western Bengal has not been fair to the Muhammadans of Western Bengal. As I am not aware of his arguments or his evidence, I am taken at a disadvantage. I can only say that I have never had this brought to my notice before and that I shall give it my careful attention at once. There is nothing in our scholarship rules, nothing in our distribution of scholarships under these rules, to suggest such an inference, and I think that so far as privileges in high schools are concerned I believe we have been careful to equalize opportunities of special scholarship as between Eastern and Western Bengal so far as lies in our power. The sources which it is proposed to use for this purpose consists of the sum of a number of small balances left from Imperial grants. These Imperial grants are large recurring grants given to us for specific purposes. We have worked out various schemes and the Rs. 23,000 merely means that our schemes have not worked up to the full allotment ; e.g., for female education we have Rs. 2,000 a year left, for technical education we have Rs. 4,000 a year left. These small sums will enable us to finance any small needs in connection with the expansion of those schemes as they may arise."

Maulvi A. Kasem.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :

"My Lord, I have to thank the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth for the hope held out to us that the question of granting more scholarships to Muhammadan boys is now engaging the attention of his Department and that he will move Government in the matter at an early date. I have only to say in reply to his statement that in moving this resolution I never meant to say or to suggest that there was an unequal treatment between Hindu boys or Muhammadan boys or the Muhammadan boys as such were not receiving the same facilities which are open to the Hindu boys. I know that no scholarships are reserved for Hindu boys except the few mentioned by him, but my grievance is, and on which I base my claim, the fact that Muhammadans are comparatively very poor and they have up till now been backward in education. A time will come, and I hope it will come very soon, when there will neither be an occasion or reason for asking for special facilities for Muhammadan boys. We do it to-day because we want that the Muhammadan boys should come up to the standard of the Hindu boys and that they may compete with each other on equal terms in the open field. The Director of Public Instruction has said that the number of Muhammadan students in primary schools is 50 per cent., that is, about the proportion of the population of this Presidency, that in middle schools it is 33 and that in the high schools it is 20 per cent. and I believe if we come up to the college classes, we will find the proportion reduced further, and I may tell him that the reason why this proportion goes down is mainly, if not solely, due to the fact that the Muhammadan boys find the want of means to prosecute their studies further after the primary stage, and for this reason I move this resolution and submit to your Excellency's Government the need for further additional scholarships for Muhammadan boys. As an assurance has been given by the Director of Public Instruction, I beg to withdraw this resolution. But as regards the fact that the division between Western and Eastern Bengal is not fair, I submit that according to the population the number may be fair, but if I may say so, that of the Muhammadan scholarships the larger number go to the eastern districts and the smaller number go to the western districts. This is a matter which I hope the Director of Public Instruction will look into and I need not trouble the Council or your Excellency's Government with any remarks on it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Maulvi A. Kasem : Mr. Crum.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 31.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that the sum of Rs. 50,000 allotted for the improvement of the pay and prospects of European Inspectors and Sergeants be added to the sum of Rs. 80,000 allotted for the extension of Panchayati Union Schools for boys.

He said :

"My Lord, in moving this resolution I have only to submit that in my opinion, and I believe that my opinion is shared by a good many of my Indian colleagues on this side of the house, that the pay of the European inspectors and sergeants is already sufficiently attractive and that they get better and more pay than officers of equal rank who have to perform similar duties. I have to add that these inspectors and sergeants in addition to their pay also get accommodation free, and the accommodation which is provided for them is very good and comfortable and much higher rent is paid for their houses than many of the judicial officers have to pay for their houses in mufassal towns, and considering all this, to add to it will be rather an extravagance. I, therefore, submit that the Government will not be justified in increasing the pay of these inspectors and that the money might be better utilized by the extension of primary schools in this province. With these few words I commend this resolution to the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. Crum said :

"My Lord, I think the hon'ble mover must be under a misapprehension as to what the European sergeants at present draw and as to the present cost of living. At the present moment there are two grades of European sergeants, as I understand. In the first, the appointment is on Rs. 100 rising by Rs. 2-8 a year to Rs. 125 a month and the second is on Rs. 130 rising by Rs. 5 to Rs. 150 a month. They also, as the hon'ble mover says, get quarters, that is to say, the married sergeants get quarters and the rest live in barracks. About the quarters of the married sergeants, which are not very satisfactory, the Finance Committee was, I may say, very much pressed by the Police for their improvement. But the Committee have decided that nothing could be done now but that they will have to take up the question in the near future. There are now considerable difficulties in getting an improved class of sergeants. I have been a member of the Bengal branch of the Employment and Labour Board and one of our duties is to recommend to the military authorities the releasing of soldiers. Long before this question of Police came up, we had discussed very fully the rate of pay at which men of the status of sergeants in the British army could live on in Calcutta. The rate of pay proposed for the sergeants was considerably higher than what the Police sergeants get at present, but it was also higher than what is proposed to be given to them now, that is, Rs. 125 rising by Rs. 5 a year to Rs. 175 a month. The present position is this : I understand the Police require 70 new sergeants and they have applied to the Employment and Labour Board for the releasing through that Board of all the policemen required from the army. But even with the improved pay the Employment and Labour Board are exceedingly doubtful as to whether they will recommend the military authorities to release these men for service. It comes to this : Unless this Council are prepared to pay a reasonably living wage to the European sergeants in Calcutta, there won't be any European sergeant left here. And I may say that as long as Government is entrusted with the looking after of law and order I hope this will not be the case. I hope the Hon'ble Member will therefore withdraw his resolution."

Mr. O'Malley; Maulvi A. Kasem; Babu A. C. Datta.

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :

"My Lord, Mr. Crum has pointed out that the Hon'ble Member is under some misapprehension as to the pay and prospects of European inspectors and sergeants. It is now my duty to point out that he is also under a misapprehension regarding the provision which has been made in the budget for the extension of punchayati union schools. If he will refer to page 33 of either the revised or amended financial statement, he will find that the allotment for the extension of punchayati union schools for boys is Rs. 1,20,000 and not as stated in his resolution Rs. 80,000. He has proposed a diversion of Rs. 50,000 in order to make a total allotment of Rs. 1,70,000, but Rs. 1,20,000 has already been provided, only Rs. 10,000 less than the total provision which he wishes to make. I think that he will scarcely quarrel about this small difference. The term 'extension of punchayati union schools' is a somewhat cryptic phrase, and I may therefore explain briefly to the Council that this is a scheme to which Government attaches considerable importance. The idea is to make provision so that boys in each locality shall have some chance of proper primary education. The object is to provide in each punchayati union for at least one decent school staffed by teachers drawing a reasonable salary instead of the poor pittance drawn by many gurus in pathshalas. It is not altogether a new scheme; it was started some years ago and carried on till about 5,000 unions had been provided with union schools. It is now proposed to revive this scheme, thanks to the grant of Rs. 5½ lakhs which has been given by the Government of India, and the sum of Rs. 1,20,000 has consequently been allotted. This will enable 120 new schools to be started. The grant will be recurring; each year more schools will be started and at the same time provision will be made for the maintenance of those schools previously established. I trust that the Hon'ble Member will accept this assurance and I suggest that in the circumstances it is scarcely necessary for him to proceed with his resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :

"My Lord, when I said that the pay of the European sergeants and inspectors was sufficient, what I meant was this: when the Government pays sub-inspectors of the Calcutta police who are in charge of thanas or outposts, whatever you may call them, they get only a salary of Rs. 125. I thought that the pay of the sergeants was sufficiently attractive, but from the statement made by the Hon'ble Mr. Crum and the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley, I have to withdraw this resolution, and I have only to point out that when I gave notice of the resolution, it was only by mistake that I put the figure 80,000 instead of 1,20,000. I got the figure from that very page which is just above that allotment. I am glad that the question is engaging attention, and I think no useful purpose will be served by pressing this resolution and I therefore beg leave to withdraw it."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 32.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta the following resolution which stood in his name went by default :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that suitable provision be made in the next year's budget for a grant to the Comilla Municipality for the introduction of water-works; and

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

(b) that the necessary amount be taken out of—

(i) the provision of Rs. 1,00,000 in the budget for laying the Maidan roads in Calcutta with tar macadam metalling; or

(ii) the provision of Rs. 4,30,000 for acquisition of land for the new nurses' quarters for the Medical College Hospital.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 33.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that the salary of the lecturers of first grade colleges be raised to a minimum of Rs. 200 a month; and
- (b) that a corresponding reduction be made in the provision for miscellaneous charges under 32—Miscellaneous.

He said :

“My Lord, yesterday my friend the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur made a very pathetic appeal for some of those hard-pressed clerks and to-day I rise to make an appeal of a similar nature on behalf of the lecturers engaged in the first grade Government colleges. My resolution is that the salary of the lecturers of first grade colleges be raised to a minimum of Rs. 200 a month, and that a corresponding reduction be made in the provision for miscellaneous charges under 32—Miscellaneous. These officers are now included in the Subordinate Educational Service, and I am sure the case of these members of the Subordinate Educational Service will come up for the consideration of Government very soon, but what I mean to say is this—that the case of these lecturers may be considered specially. These officers are engaged in the performance of important duties. It is not only for the benefit of those lecturers but also for the benefit of the students committed to their charge that I make this appeal. These officers were appointed some on Rs. 100 or Rs. 125 and they are now drawing a pay of Rs. 150 or so at most or it may be Rs. 175. They are engaged not for teaching school students for which no work at home is necessary. If they are to make their lectures interesting, if they are to look to the interest of the students committed to their charge and examine papers and point out deficiencies and make suggestions to their pupils in what way they are to improve their lessons, I beg to submit, my Lord, that all this work requires at least a considerable time to be devoted at home to it, so that the work may be quite up to the mark. But now-a-days it is very difficult for any man of ordinary means, specially of Indian habits, who are generally beset with a number of dependants upon them to manage with a pay of Rs. 100, Rs. 125 or Rs. 150 and they naturally look to other sources of income either by literary work or by doing some work as a private tutor to some pupils. It is not possible for them to be self-supporting without looking to other sources of income, and it is impossible for them to devote their whole time to college work. It is for this reason and for the fact that they have become very hard pressed owing to the fact that the necessities of life have become very costly, that I have ventured to make this appeal on their behalf to your Excellency's Government and I hope your Excellency's Government will do something as early as possible for the relief of these members of the Subordinate Educational Service. Of course I have suggested that a corresponding reduction be made in the provision for miscellaneous charges under 32—Miscellaneous, but this is a mere suggestion. If your Excellency's Government are convinced that something ought to be done, money may be found anywhere. All I can say is that something ought to be done to relieve these officers. With these words I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :

" My Lord, the Hon'ble Member has spoken in generous terms on behalf of the lecturers in our Government colleges, but has spoken in such general terms that I find it difficult to reply. At one moment his arguments appeared to be based entirely on the economical ground that the cost of living is such as to make their salary insufficient. If this is so, the same conditions apply to head masters of Government schools and to other officers in the Subordinate Educational Service. At another moment he appeared to base his arguments upon the consideration that lecturers work harder than masters in schools. That, Sir, is not my experience. I believe that the work of the head masters and other masters in our schools is more arduous, and head masters certainly have larger responsibilities. The Hon'ble Member moved the same resolution last year. On behalf of Government I then replied at considerable length, and, I thought at the time, with considerable illumination. I do not appear to have convinced the Hon'ble Member and I can only repeat briefly now what I then said at greater length. Our Government colleges are manned by two classes of officers—professors and lecturers. Professors are either Englishmen brought out from England in the Indian Educational Service or Indian gentlemen recruited locally in the Provincial Educational Service. They are assisted in their work by a class of junior officers whom we call lecturers and who are supposed to do less responsible and less arduous work, and are placed in the subordinate service. They are usually appointed on Rs. 125 a month and rise by degrees to a maximum of Rs. 250 a month. It has been frequently pointed out—I believe it was pointed out by the Hon'ble Member last year—that the academic and other qualifications of the lecturers are fully equal to those of Indian gentlemen in the Provincial Educational Service. I admit this in many cases. I must question it in many cases. But the position from the administrative standpoint is that when they applied for lecturers' appointments they were prepared and even anxious to get those posts and they knew that the posts carried with them an assurance but not a certainty of appointment as professors in the higher service when opportunities arrived. Appointments to colleges are made in fact by the governing bodies who are expected to consider, and it is their practice to consider, the claims of all lecturers already in Government service whenever they make appointments. A man who is already serving in a Government college has certain claims to consideration. He has certain advantages in his favour in all competition for posts in the higher service. But it depends partly upon the fortunes of life whether he succeeds in obtaining a higher post or not. For those who are acquainted with colleges in England I may instance a similar arrangement whereby we have assistant lecturers to professors. Those assistant lecturers are usually paid at a much lower rate than professors. They are often equally qualified with their professors in an academic sense and they hope to become professors some day. We have full sympathy with those of our lecturers who do not succeed in obtaining entrance to the higher service but we can scarcely be called upon to redress the inequalities of fortune by administrative action especially as that administrative action would mean a considerable additional burden to the Indian taxpayer and would mean very little, if any, addition of efficiency to the work of our colleges. We have nearly 50 such lecturers. The proposal is to give them an initial salary of Rs. 200 a month, that is to say, to include them in the Provincial Educational Service. This will mean roughly a recurring charge of Rs. 90,000 a year and the proposal is to meet this recurring charge out of a head which is non-recurring. It may be that some other member will speak on that point, but the meaning of this item which it is proposed to reduce—Miscellaneous item—is set out in the pages of the Financial Statement, and I think it is clear that what is budgetted for is nearly actual expenditure. These lecturers are in pay practically on the same basis as our head masters, but while the head masters of our schools who have more arduous and more responsible duties to perform and who carry them out at least with equal efficiency and loyalty, are seldom appointed head masters until they have done many years' service as assistant masters on small pay ; these lecturers who may be equally qualified with more highly paid officials or who may not be better qualified than many of our school masters commence at a much younger age on a salary of Rs. 125 a month. Therefore, as compared with our head masters, they are many years ahead in advantage. For these reasons I am unable to recommend to the Council the acceptance of this resolution."

Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri ; Babu A. C. Datta.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :

"My Lord, I have been trying no doubt for some time past to effect an improvement in the pay and prospects of the poorly-paid professors. I stated on some other occasion that we must arrange to attract better qualified men to these posts. It is no answer to say—'why they accept a post on so low pay and very soon begin to clamour for higher pay'. When one is in need of some employment he must be anxious to get any whether it be on small pay or high pay. But some consideration ought to be shown to him for the special nature of work in which he is engaged. Even in the reforms Scheme the pay and prospects of the civilians are under consideration. It is true that the head masters are also engaged in doing important work and that they also get a very small pay, and if it is necessary to do something for them I have no objection, but my point is that something should be done for these lecturers also so that there may not be any demoralizing effect upon their zeal and devotion to work. It is hardly necessary for me to point out that the amount allowed to them is hardly sufficient to maintain them with decency. Considering the nature of work in which they are engaged—which I have already explained to your Excellency—I think their case deserves separate and special consideration, and it is with this view that I have brought forward this resolution. I am sorry for the reply that has been given to me and I would have been glad even if some hope had been held out that something would be done for them in the near future. If something is done for them then the present incumbents of the posts of lecturers would not be anxious to go elsewhere whenever they get an opportunity. I would say that either at once or as early as possible something ought to be done and have nothing more to add."

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 34.

In the absence of the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta the following resolution which stood in his name went by default :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that suitable provision be made in the budget for 1919-20 for giving effect to the scheme for raising the Comilla Faizennessa Girls' School to the standard of a High English School ;
- and

Rai R. U. Pal Bahadur ; the President

(b) that the necessary amount be taken out of—

- (i) the provision of Rs. 1,24,000 for the construction of buildings for guru-training schools ; or
- (ii) the provision of Rs. 1,00,000 for a capital grant to the Calcutta Girls' High School ; or
- (iii) the provision of Rs. 50,000 for the extension of the Dow Hill Girls' School, Kurseong.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :

" My Lord, I have a personal appeal to make to your Excellency. I am grateful to your Excellency for having allowed my resolutions to stand over during my temporary absence yesterday. I was late in coming to-day, but I was under the impression that my resolutions will be taken up last. And if your Excellency will kindly allow me to move my resolutions, I shall be glad to move them now."

The President said :

" The Hon'ble Member yesterday asked me to postpone his resolutions on the ground that he had to be absent in connection with public work elsewhere and I regarded that as sufficient reason for acceding to his request for postponing his resolutions. When I called upon him this morning he was not present. I understand he now says that he thought that I intended to postpone his resolutions until the end of the Agenda paper. If that is so, I am prepared to grant the Hon'ble Member permission to move his resolutions."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :

" My Lord, I beg to express my gratitude to your Excellency in giving me permission to move my resolutions."

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that Rs. 5 lakhs be provided for the extension of primary education within the municipal limits of Calcutta ; and
- (b) that the amount be met by a corresponding reduction in—
 - (i) the provision of Rs. 6,30,000 for building nurses' quarters at the Medical College Hospital ; and
 - (ii) the grant-in-aid for education amounting to Rs. 26,43,000.

He said :

" My Lord, it is an old question and it has been raised for years past in this Council. I am myself one of them who have for the last two or three years moved in the matter and tried to divert some money for the promotion of primary education in Calcutta. The history of the subject is this : Mr. Hornell, the then Director of Public Instruction, finding the keen interest taken by the people of Calcutta in the matter of primary education delivered an interesting lecture on educational organization in Calcutta under the auspices, I believe, of the Social Study Society. In the course of his admirable address he observed that the condition of primary schools in

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Calcutta was simply disgraceful. This attracted the attention of the Calcutta Corporation who, under the guidance of the late Sir Charles Allen, submitted to Government that they were prepared to take charge of the primary education in Calcutta if the Government would favour them with sufficient grants for the purpose. The matter was further inquired into by the Corporation and it was found by Sir Archdale Earle, the then Chairman, and who was sometime the Director of Public Instruction, that the minimum cost would be not less than Rs. 6 lakhs to start with. The cost seemed to be prohibitive and a representation was made by the Corporation to the Government to the effect that they would be prepared to confer with Government in this matter if the Government would furnish them with a practical scheme on the subject. The question was then further considered by Mr. Hornell who said that if the Corporation were prepared to capitalize the present grants-in-aid contributed towards primary schools to defray the cost of building houses for these schools in Calcutta the Government might consider the question of maintaining these schools. The Corporation without definitely committing themselves stated that they were prepared to consider Mr. Hornell's proposals and that they were also prepared to pay a contribution from the capital loan fund extending over a certain number of years to meet the cost of building several suitable houses for primary schools in Calcutta. At a rough estimate it was found that the whole thing would cost Rs. 10 lakhs, but that if it were spread over a number of years the Corporation was prepared to finance it from the loan fund. This matter was raised in this Council and during the budget debate of 1915-16 the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell stated that it was a very complicated and difficult subject and that nothing could be done without a proper survey. In reply to my motion he said :—

... the Corporation of Calcutta appointed a Committee to consider the question of school arrangements for Calcutta. The Committee decided that they could do nothing until they had ascertained what Government proposed to do. I was consulted in June last, and I advised Government that they would not be able to move in the matter until they knew more of what the problem of school provision in Calcutta really is, both as regards boys and as regards girls. I urged that the next step should be the carrying out of an educational survey of the whole municipal area, and, as a result, Mr. K. C. De was placed on special duty with specific instructions for the drawing up of the survey. When the war broke out, Mr. De's services were requisitioned for other activities, but he decided, in addition to his other labours, to do what he could to carry on the survey which he had begun with considerable vigour, and I understand though he has not completed his work which he would have done if he had not been called upon to do other work in connection with the war, he is well on with it, and that before very long the survey will be submitted. ... Besides, we do not really know what the problem in Calcutta is, and until we do know this, I do not see how we can inaugurate a scheme of improvement even if we had the money, which we have not.

My Lord, that was in 1915-16. That report, however, could not be finished by Mr. De as he was soon after placed on certain special duty and Mr. J. N. Roy was asked to take up the work. He finished his work and the report was submitted to Government on the 15th November, 1915. The account that is given in the report of the conditions of primary schools in Calcutta was enough to make not only the residents of Calcutta but also the Corporation and the Government feel ashamed. The majority of them were badly equipped and the staff was insufficient. The houses were ill-lighted and the ventilation was bad. I need not quote anything further from Mr. Roy's report. But that was the condition of the primary schools in Calcutta. Mr. Roy suggested in his report that there was urgent need for model primary schools in Calcutta and that they should be started at once. He also suggested that strict rules should be laid down for all middle English and primary schools as to the condition of buildings and the adequacy of sanitation and the distance of one school from another. As regards Muhammadan schools he suggested that the Moslem schools attached to mosques were very neat and tidy but that they should be developed and that they should have well-paid teachers on their staffs. These are the recommendations that were made. In subsequent years I again moved in the matter and to my great disappointment I was told again that although the report had been received another report was awaited and that maps must be prepared to show the location of the existing schools so that they might determine where the model schools should be constructed. In reply to my resolution the Hon'ble Mr. Hornell said :—'The Inspector of Schools in the Presidency Division is now having maps prepared of the whole of the Calcutta municipal area showing what schools there are, both primary and secondary, and indicating on this map with reference to the population, what primary schools should be erected, when funds are available'. That was in the year 1917-18. A copy of the report is now in my hands, but I have not got the plan although this report says that the plan accompanies the report of Mr. Dunn who was Inspector of Schools, Presidency Division, in 1918 when he wrote the report just one year ago. He says that in addition to the informations contained in that communication there were certain maps compiled by the Survey of India Office showing the location, etc., of these schools. It will be seen that this second report was prepared by Mr. Dunn and submitted to Government last year with the map. Mr. Hornell assured us that he was arranging for a survey showing the different places in which the schools are situated. The Government seemed to be anxious to take up the matter in right earnest as soon as informations were forthcoming. All informations were collected last year. But unfortunately nothing has practically emerged from the Government assurance. I do not know when something practical will be done. And, therefore, I have returned to my subject this year and whatever may be the fate of this resolution—we all know what fate awaits it—I still think it my duty to press the resolution to the attention of Government. But before doing so, I will also place certain other facts before them. Here in Calcutta we have got a population of 896,000. Out of that, 15 per cent., that is, about 135,000 are of school-going age. Forty-eight per cent. of the latter are at present receiving their education in Calcutta. And I am glad that Mr. Dunn mentions in his report that the credit of giving education to these boys is due to private enterprise of public-spirited individuals. When a responsible officer of Government states that it is entirely due to private efforts and private enterprise then I think the people of Calcutta might take some credit and ask the Government for more help. How far can the public proceed? I find the Government grant is only Rs. 32,600, and the Corporation grant is Rs. 66,000 besides remission of rates to school premises. It will, therefore, be seen that the Government grant is deplorably inadequate. Turning to the report again I find some very interesting statements. Mr. Dunn has found that there is a laudable demand for education by the people of Calcutta—by the lower class population. The report says that the working class people are very anxious to get some sort of elementary education and that is a very hopeful feature. Mr. Dunn also states that out of 521 primary schools in Calcutta 169 are maktabs or primary schools for Muhammadans and that the Muhammadans are also very anxious to extend primary education. These schools although aided by Government depend on subscriptions from local people. These schools are without control although Government grants Rs. 32,000 for their aid and the fees realized by them amount to Rs. 70,000. There is a Sub-Inspector for these schools but he visits them once a year only and the ward Commissioner reports once a year how they are conducted before the Corporation grants their aid. These schools are started in a perfunctory way by pandits here and there and they are never conducted in an efficient manner. As regards teachers, out of 711 teachers 586 are untrained and I find from Messrs. De and Roy's report that they get even lower salaries than menial servants, only Rs. 7 or 8 a month and they can give lessons only in বর্ণপরিচয় etc. There is hardly any other training in these schools. Another difficulty is this. Out of 135,000 boys only 65,000 receive some sort of education in some schools; 69,000 go without any education. And if my hon'ble friend Babu Surendra Nath Roy's Bill becomes law and its provisions are extended to Calcutta then these boys must receive compulsory training. Therefore it will be seen that there is an urgent need for provision by Government. Of the boys who receive education I find that about 36,000 only are comparatively better instructed in secondary schools where there are more efficient primary classes, as in the Metropolitan College, City College and other institutions where there are better qualified teachers. The remaining 29,000 receive only a sort of nam ka wasté education which is very unsatisfactory. Mr. Dunn says in his report that the condition of these schools for 29,000 boys requires immediate improvement and this is a matter of great urgency. He also suggests the creation of new schools for those who are not receiving any education at all. It will be thus seen that the question of providing funds for the improvement of primary education in Calcutta can no longer be deferred. It may be said and it has often been said that the Corporation should take up this task. As Sir Charles Allen observed and as has been observed in the Corporation debates that although the Corporation have recently agreed to share in this task, it is not part of their duty to do so. The Calcutta Municipal Act lays down certain statutory obligations on the Corporation. But this does not come under these obligatory duties. There is what is called a discretionary clause under which the Corporation can, if funds permit after meeting the obligatory duties, devote surplus funds towards objects of public utility. When this provision was being discussed in Council I think no less an authority than Sir Alfred Croft laid down that the duty of contributing towards education did not come within the purview of the Corporation. I think Sir Gurudas Banerjee moved a motion to the effect that as the suburban municipalities which were going to be incorporated with the Calcutta Municipality, paid Rs. 3,000 to some patshalas, that sum should now be paid by the Calcutta Corporation towards education in the suburban areas. The Council after some discussion agreed to the proposal. That sum of Rs. 3,000 has become Rs. 1 lakh at the present day. The case of Bombay is cited. But in comparison with Bombay our case is quite different. Bombay maintains well conducted primary schools and spends Rs. 6,93,000 towards education, but my Lord, Bombay, in addition to rates and taxes, has got an extra revenue which Calcutta has not. From town duties alone Bombay gets Rs. 20 lakhs. Then there are the Excise duties from which they get Rs. 1,11,000 and from other duties Rs. 3,71,000. It will therefore be seen that while Bombay gets about Rs. 26 lakhs over and above their income on rates and taxes, Calcutta gets nothing. If we are to spend anything outside our statutory obligations we must in the absence of an extra revenue impose additional rates. That will not be fair to the population of Calcutta. The Government should contribute substantially towards this object or surrender some revenue and that was also the opinion of an eminent member of the Civil Service who, if he were alive to-day, would have occupied a seat on your Excellency's right—I mean the late Sir Charles Allen. The Corporation is prepared to share the burden with Government, but the Government should make substantial contribution at least—”

[The Hon'ble Member having exceeded his time limit, resumed his seat.]

The Hon'ble Mr. Carter said :

“My Lord, I am not quite sure that the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur is justified in making the suggestion contained in the second part of his resolution which is that the provision of Rs. 6,30,000 for building nurses' quarters at the Medical College Hospital should be taken away for the purpose of giving effect to the suggestion made in the first part of his resolution. The position as regards house accommodation for the nurses at the Medical College Hospital has already been explained fully by the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, but I notice that the Hon'ble Member still wants, from the wording of his resolution, to cut down the sums allotted for this purpose. No less than five resolutions at this meeting aim at reducing this grant. I do not know that I am very much surprised at this as for some time now the non-official Indians of this city have never taken any great interest in this most deserving Institution—the Calcutta Hospital Nurses' Institution. Subscriptions towards this fund from my Indian friends are far below those contributed by the Europeans and yet the whole group of hospitals at the Medical College are for the relief of dying and suffering amongst the Indians. I can assure my hon'ble friend that the accommodation is really needed and I should like to say that there are now in the nurses' quarters exclusive of dhais 125 nurses and the quarters are so crowded that many of the smaller rooms contain two beds. In addition to overcrowding the quarters have not a sufficient number of bathrooms and other sanitary accommodation. It is not possible to find accommodation for a single extra nurse in the present quarters, and it is proposed shortly to construct a new Eye Hospital containing 175 beds as also to extend the Eden Hospital which is at present very greatly overcrowded. In addition to these there are the new Tubercular Wards which are shortly to be constructed. The new Tubercular Wards, the Eye Hospital and the extended Eden Hospital cannot be got into use until quarters have been built for more nurses. The nurses' duties are highly arduous and laborious and the work they are expected to perform in a tropical climate like this will entitle them to double pay elsewhere. Perhaps the Hon'ble Member has never visited the nurses' quarters at the Medical College to see the misery there with his own eyes. Had he done so I am pretty sure that no attempt would have been made on his part to reduce the sum budgetted for the building of their quarters. No arrangement to make the nurses willing to stay on should be questioned by anyone, least of all by those who from lack of professional knowledge are unable to appreciate their priceless services. I hope in the next budget Government will see their way to set aside a sum to improve the nurses' quarters at the Presidency General Hospital which also badly requires reconstruction."

Sir R. N. Mookerjee.

The Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookerjee said :

"My Lord, I beg to oppose the motion not that I am opposed to the extension of primary education not only to Calcutta but to every corner of Bengal. I am an advocate of primary education and I think that it is essential to extend primary education throughout Bengal in such a manner as to enable us to keep pace with the progress of the world. I object to the method which my hon'ble friend suggests to adopt to find money—I mean the sources from which he wants to draw the money. My Lord, I do not belong to the medical profession and therefore I am not an authority to say anything on the necessity of these nurses. My hon'ble friend, Mr. Carter, who is the President of the Calcutta Hospital Nurses' Institution, of which I am also a Member, has told the Council how necessary it is to provide accommodation for these nurses, but in my opinion a patient is more competent to give his opinion as to the best means of alleviating human suffering in the sick bed. It is universally admitted by the medical profession and by the outside public that since the introduction of this nursing system that human suffering or at any rate the mortality has been reduced to almost an irreducible minimum. Now-a-days a physician finds himself helpless to attend a typhoid or pneumonia case if there is no nurse to attend the patient. A surgeon also refuses to make a major operation if he does not find a nurse ready to help him. In these circumstances I am surprised that my friend has come forward with a proposition interfering with the provision of quarters for nurses who obviously mitigate human suffering. Calcutta has been very meagre in its supply of nurses to all the hospitals. Owing to the war Government I believe could not make sufficient provision for the construction of nurses' quarters for the last four years, and when Government have provided a good sum for completing these quarters, I am really amazed that a man of the standing of my hon'ble friend, who takes such interest in the mitigation of the distress of the poor, should come forward and ask Government to postpone the construction of the nurses' quarters. Secondly, I am also opposed to his proposal of taking money from one item and devoting it to another. He must be aware as a Member of the Finance Committee that after great deliberation the Finance Department have allotted certain amounts of money to certain heads and to come forward at the eleventh hour asking for diversion of money is simply, to say the least, to bring the machinery to a standstill. Finally, my Lord, I think it is time that our countrymen should recognize that if we want to extend our primary education we must nationalize it. It will never make any progress or headway if we are dependent only on the doles of Government. The Calcutta Corporation, the Corporation of the premier city of India, should first take the lead and set an example of nationalizing the primary education system. It is nothing for the Calcutta Corporation to provide Rs. 6 lakhs and I would say that the poorer municipalities have a stronger claim on Government in these matters than the Calcutta Corporation which is rich enough to maintain their own schools."

Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :

"My Lord, I should take a different position from that taken up by Sir Rajendra Mookerjee. I think I ought to support the motion of my hon'ble colleague Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur—not that I deprecate the idea of constructing the nurses' quarters, but as a rule the non-official members have to indicate the source from which the funds required have to be taken and I think my hon'ble friend Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur found no other alternative than to fall on this allotment of Rs. 6 lakhs, which is rather an expensive grant. But having regard to the fact that there had been no appeals in this Council for the construction of such quarters and that there had been repeated appeals in this Council for the extension of primary education, it is somewhat extraordinary that Government find their way to allot the whole sum necessary for the complete construction and equipment of the nurses' quarters and are not content to make an allotment for a partial construction of these quarters this year, leaving the completion of it to the succeeding year. I am a little familiar with the working of the Hospital Nurses' Institution, and therefore I am not one who is wanting in appreciation of the benefits arising from the labours of the nurses belonging to that institution. A remark has been made by the Hon'ble Mr. Carter about the want of support by the Indian community to this institution. The remark is quite true that the Indian community as a whole have not actually supported this institution, and the reason for it is clear. The Hospital Nurses' Institution has to bring its efforts to the knowledge of the people of the Indian community who ordinarily do not avail themselves of medical aid in hospitals. Our people from the lowest to the highest refuse to go to the hospital, and that being so they cannot imagine what benefits the nurses can give to the patients in hospitals. The efforts of this institution would have been brought to the knowledge of the Indian community if calls for attendance on sick patients at their homes had been responded to. But I can say that the nurses of this institution do not go for attendance at the residences of members of the Indian community. There might be some social difficulties or other difficulties and I can quite understand why they are not sent out by the authorities, but there remains the fact that such nurses are not sent out to the residences of members of the Indian community, and that being so, the complaint of the Hon'ble Mr. Carter loses much of its force. What I suggest, my Lord, is this—that half the amount which has been budgetted for the Hospital Nurses' Institution this year may be allotted for the actual construction of the building and the rest next year. We know that the cost of a building this year would be much more than the cost of a building next year, owing to the present abnormal rise in the price of all sorts of building materials. It would certainly be an economy if you do not spend the whole of this Rs. 6 lakhs this year, and therefore I would pray to your lordship that a certain portion of this money, say a sum of Rs. 1 lakh or Rs. 2 lakhs, and a certain sum from the grant-in-aid for education might be devoted for the purpose of starting primary schools in the town of Calcutta. If the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mookerjee had honoured the Corporation with his presence he would have probably seen that the Corporation are not wanting in their duty and that they have certainly been doing their best unaided for the last 10 years, and that although Sir Charles Allen and his successors tried to do something in this direction, I may mention that only this year during the Chairmanship of the Hon'ble Mr. Payne a sum of Rs. 5 lakhs has been ear-marked in the budget for the promotion of primary education in Calcutta. The true difficulty is this—there is a certain want of earnestness on the part of Government in this matter of promotion of primary education. We have read and heard that elsewhere very lately. Whenever there has been any question about primary education, the reply has been 'that unless there are trained teachers you cannot have primary schools and that this is a matter for the Provincial Government and not for the Imperial Government'. When we come to the Provincial Government we are told that there are no funds : there are funds for every possible thing but there are no funds for this thing, and we are told on the eve of the constitutional reforms by one party that you cannot enlarge the franchise because there is no mass education. I appeal to your Excellency whether my hon'ble friend, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, has been failing in his duty in bringing this question to your Lordship's consideration or whether he has been trying to do his duty. Nothing has been said as yet by any Hon'ble Member as to why we should not get in the matter of promotion of primary education in the city of Calcutta a certain decent sum from the sum of Rs. 33.86 lakhs for works in progress as we find in the budget. That being so, I think that Government will feel some difficulty in not allotting a sum equal to what the Corporation has ear-marked, that is, a sum of Rs. 5 lakhs for the promotion of primary education in the city of Calcutta. The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth who wants that the purse strings of Government should be held very tight has found to his satisfaction that a sum of over Rs. 18 lakhs has remained unexpended when the year came to a close. I think better consideration of the educational needs of the province would have enabled him to expend the whole of this balance, and I think that if he will place himself in the position of an inhabitant of this place he, instead of counting his days for pension and retirement, would have sympathized with us and would have done something better than what he has done."

The President ; Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The President said :

"I think it would be a convenience to the Muhammadan members if we take the adjournment now."

AFTER LUNCH.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :

My Lord, the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur has brought to the notice of the Government the question of the extension of primary education in Municipal Calcutta, and he has given a history of the activities of the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Corporation and its Chairman and members from time to time drawing the attention of Government on the subject. If I have caught him aright, he begins by saying that an early speech of Mr. Hornell really drew the serious attention of the Calcutta Corporation to the subject. Then he refers to certain matters which the late Sir Charles Allen, Sir Archdale Earle and others had expressed on the subject in the Corporation. I think that so far as his case regarding the proposal that Government should make a grant of Rs. 5 lakhs is concerned, I do not think that at the present moment he has been able to make out a strong one at all. On the other hand, of course, he is justified to a certain extent in complaining that he is not aware what action has been taken on the subject of Mr. Dunn's report on an exhaustive survey of the question of primary and technical education in the city of Calcutta. First of all, I shall take the point about Mr. Dunn's report. I regret that there has been a good deal of delay in the department concerned regarding the taking up of this report. It is quite true that the date of the report is February 1918, and that practically a year has elapsed since the report was submitted, but there have been certain circumstances over which the Education Department had no control and, further, there has been this general question of primary education receiving the attention of Government which has, I may say to a large extent, been responsible for no departmental action having been as yet taken on Mr. Dunn's report excepting the fact that the Director of Public Instruction has informed the Chairman of the Corporation of the report and has also intimated the Government of it. The Government is awaiting the opinion and proposals of the Director of Public Instruction on Mr. Dunn's report. The hon'ble mover will admit that although there has been delay, Government must now await the report from the Director on the subject and send it on to the Corporation and stay action until the proposals of the Corporation are received.

I shall now deal with the question of the proposed provision of Rs. 5 lakhs on the part of Government. The Hon'ble Member himself knows that although the Calcutta Corporation, according to a subsequent speaker, Rai Bahadur Debender Chunder Ghose, has earmarked Rs. 5 lakhs for the purpose of the extension of primary education—and that information is no doubt gratifying to Government—there are no schemes ready at present. I think therefore that before Government could be expected to provide any funds in the budget it must have from the Corporation the information as to whether or how far they are willing to accept Mr. Dunn's proposals and on those proposals what they themselves propose to do for the extension of primary education in the city, because it may be quite possible that when they have considered Mr. Dunn's report they may find that the sum which they have earmarked may be quite inadequate or that revised figures will be required. All these matters have got to be taken into consideration before one could expect Government to put in any figure in the budget. But on this point I may say that if during the current year the Corporation after hearing from Government officially on Mr. Dunn's report and after going into the thing thoroughly they bring forward before the Government a crystallized scheme for consideration, that later on we might possibly be able to give it a start say, by next year, and Government would then consider favourably the question as to whether or not it would be possible for Government to make a grant from the savings from the grants-in-aid, but at the present moment it is quite impossible for Government to hold out any promise or to put into the budget any definite figure. Moreover, I think the Hon'ble Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur must realize that we are about to go into the whole question of primary education on a voluntary basis if the Bill of Babu Surendra Nath Ray is passed into law which contemplates the provision of an adequate system of voluntary education; and that being so, I may say that Government is bound, in making any programme for the extension of primary education, to look into the claims of municipalities and district boards first. I do not say for a moment that Government does not propose to consider favourably the question of primary education in this city, but as Sir R. N. Mookerjee has very rightly pointed out, the poorer municipalities and urban areas should, I think, have prior claim in this matter. As I have already said, when Mr. Dunn's report has been sent on officially to the Corporation and the Corporation has considered the proposals carefully, I am quite prepared to look into the matter and see if it be possible, say this time next year, to contribute something towards it. But as things are at present, while I regret the delay on the part of the department concerned in going into the merits of Mr. Dunn's report and proposals, there being no proposals of the Corporation before Government, Government would not be justified in making any provision in the budget, and I think also that the Bill of Babu Surendra Nath Ray and the effect it has on municipalities at large should be watched. For these reasons I trust that the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur will not press for his resolution. All that I can say is that Government are fully alive to the requirements of the City of Calcutta and it is for that very reason that they appointed Mr. Dunn to go into the question: It is to be regretted that the consideration of the report has been delayed, but there is no reason why it should not be gone into in the present year and that a crystallized scheme might be possible to work upon from the very next year. For these reasons, my Lord, I cannot recommend the Government to accept the proposal made by the Hon'ble Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

My Lord, I have listened to some of the criticisms on my resolution and the most courteous way in which the Hon'ble Mr. Carter has opposed my motion with special reference to my proposal to appropriate some of the money in connection with the nurses' institution deserves a courteous reply. I quite recognize the importance of the provision of quarters for nurses in connection with the Medical College. I was in the Finance Committee when this matter came up, and I may say, if I am permitted to observe, there was some suggestion that the whole sum may not possibly be spent this year. This Rs. 6,30,000 comprises Rs. 4,30,000 for acquisition of land and Rs. 2,00,000 for building. From our experience in other public bodies with which I am connected, I may state that the acquisition of land cannot be done in the twinkling of an eye. It goes through a certain process and there is inevitable delay and I do not know whether it would be possible to acquire the land and construct the buildings, that is to say, to spend the whole sum of Rs. 6,50,000 during the next twelve months. I made this suggestion not with a view to curtail the expenditure but with a view to utilize the probable savings. This is my explanation. The proposal was not made in an unsympathetic spirit or in a spirit to deprive the nurses of the quarters which they well deserve, and I hope this explanation will be accepted by my hon'ble friend. As regards the observations of Sir R. N. Mookerjee I must say that I do not know what reply I should give. As regards the nurses I have submitted my explanation which covers also his observation with reference to my proposal. I suggested that a certain sum of money from the grant-in-aid for education be given towards primary education and Sir Mookerjee said that Government after considering all the needs had prepared the budget. As far as I have been able to follow him, he does not think that a responsible member of this Council should propose any reduction of the allotment which Government have thought fit to make from the budget and suggest utilization in another way. My Lord, I have been for two generations associated with the public affairs of the city and I do not know whether any responsible member would be doing his duty if he shrinks from making a suggestion in moving a resolution that a certain sum of money may be appropriated from a particular head because Government have thought fit to allot that sum of money on that head.

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan : Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

It may be that the proposal as regards the appropriation from this particular head is not quite possible or feasible, but we non-official members are outside the Government machinery and if we do not suggest possible items from which appropriation may be made our resolutions will not be admitted, and if we are not to say anything on any item and to sit quiet and say "Sallam Sir, we pass the budget" then what is the good of holding these Council meetings. I do not think, my Lord, that is the experience of public life whether in your country or mine.

I am quite grateful to the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja of Burdwan for the sympathetic way in which he has received the proposal and as your Excellency must be well aware during your short stay in this country that we Indians are very grateful for a little sympathy, whether it may prove substantial or not and, therefore, I am rather grateful to the Hon'ble Member for the assurance he has given. But, my Lord, I may be permitted to state that to a certain extent I have been justified in my observation that there has been such a long delay in this matter that one cannot help drawing the attention of Government to the urgency of the matter. I forgot to mention that the Corporation has earmarked Rs. 5 lakhs in anticipation of any scheme that may be prepared, but there is one thing in the speech of the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan. He says that the Corporation should prepare the scheme, but I find from Mr. Dunn's report that the Education Department will prepare the scheme, because they are in a better position to do so, and then the scheme will come up to the Corporation for consideration. That was the proposal, and I do not know whether it is now to be left to the Corporation to prepare the scheme.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

May I explain? What I meant was this, that when the Government sends to the Corporation the proposals made by Mr. Dunn it will no doubt at the same time outline the scheme which Government thinks should be considered by the Corporation and that I think is what the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Radha Charan Pal is aiming at. No doubt the scheme will be outlined by Government itself and not by the Corporation and it will then be for the Corporation to consider the proposals they receive from Government.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur then continued :—

Now I quite follow it. I understand that the report will be forwarded with the proposals of the Director of Public Instruction to the Corporation. I hope, my Lord, that will be soon done, and then, I think, that during the next twelve months perhaps some progress will be made, and having regard to the present state of primary schools in Calcutta, I think, if some provision is made in the budget, there will be a possible chance of expediting the work or rather the education department would be compelled to bring the subject to a practical shape. This is another aspect of my proposal. Further, the Corporation has earmarked Rs. 5 lakhs without any scheme before them, and the amount of Rs. 5 lakhs which I have proposed is only an equivalent sum and nothing more, and if this sum is also set apart for the promotion of primary education in Calcutta, I do not think that will be spent at once, but possibly a certain sum of money will be available for a workable scheme within the next 6 months. It may be said—why should we so earmark Rs. 5 lakhs when the scheme is not before us? But, there is such a thing as transfer from one head to another or savings and utilization of savings. I do not think Government will be hampered in any way. If the amount of Rs. 5 lakhs is set apart and if the whole sum is not spent together with the Corporation money, I think Government will be in a position to transfer the savings to another item they may think fit. This is important and it will have the effect of urging the Education Department to go on more expeditiously than they have hitherto gone in connection with this matter and that some practical results will ensue within a reasonable time during the next twelve months. I do not know whether I should press this motion, because I quite see the fate of this motion, but I am quite content to leave the matter in the hands of Government. I have done something, that is, I have drawn the attention of the Government and I hope this subject will not be allowed to lie pigeon-holed anywhere. I may be pardoned if I say that Government may be charged with the same charge that the Corporation was charged some years ago—it is, of course, ancient history. Towards the end of seventies a very clever Secretary to Government who was always opposed to the Corporation—I refer to Sir Alexander Mackenzie—in this Council said, “the Corporation is an arsenal of delays and manufactory of speeches.” May I not also say that the Government department is an arsenal of delays and manufactory of red-tape. I hope that now that this matter has been brought prominently to your Excellency’s notice speedy progress will be made.

Sir Henry Wheeler.

The Hon’ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

My Lord, there are two points on which there appears to be a misapprehension which I should like to clear up at the close of the debate. The first is with reference to the remarks which have just fallen from the Hon’ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, that there will be no harm in reducing the allotment which has been made for the acquisition of land for the nurses’ quarters, in so far, as I understand, that land acquisition proceedings ordinarily take time and therefore money to this large extent is not likely to be spent during the ensuing year. I think the Hon’ble Member forgets the fact, which as a member of the Improvement Trust he might have remembered, that we are taking up this land on the frontage of the avenue which has already been acquired by the Trust, and we can pay the Trust for it in one lump-sum by a cheque, a process that should not take an undue time, even in a red-tape Government office.

The second point has reference rather to an incidental issue, and I mention it, especially in the absence of the Hon’ble Mr. Carter, who, if he had been here, would probably have desired to challenge the implication made. I have not the slightest intention of going into the merits or demerits of the comparative subscriptions respectively made by the European or Indian community to the Calcutta Hospital Nurses’ Institution, but I gather from the speech of the Hon’ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur that he argues in extenuation of the allegation that adequate Indian help is not forthcoming, that the institution is rather designed to supply private aid to Europeans which is denied to Indians. The facts are not so, and I think it should be made clear that they are not. I have here the report of the Calcutta Hospital Nurses’ Institution for the year 1917, and I find that the institution was founded in 1859 chiefly owing to the influence of Lady Canning, wife of the first Viceroy of India. The main object of the Fund is to train and provide nurses free of charge in the leading Calcutta hospitals, although it is true that the Lady Canning Home nurses are supplied at moderate charges for private cases. A few dhais are also maintained at the Eden Hospital for private work among Indian families. It is hospital nursing which is the main object of the scheme. When we turn to details, we find that in the Presidency General Hospital, as against the hospital staff which numbers 67, there are only 6 Canning Home nurses. Even as regards them it is mentioned in the report that these out-nurses nursed only 110 cases, and that many had to be refused especially in October and November when Canning nurses had to be employed on ward and night superintending duties owing to shortage of the hospital staff from illness and nurses leaving. When we come to the expenditure on the Canning Home nurses we find 3 items totalling Rs. 7,817, against which we have fees from out-cases amounting to Rs. 8,541. Thus it will be seen that these out-nurses are apparently self-supporting. When we come to the Medical College, we find in the Medical College Hospital, Prince of Wales Hospital and Eden Hospital altogether 90 nurses, and no out-nursing staff except dhais who are employed in Indian homes. I think, my Lord, it is desirable to correct the misapprehension that the work of the Institution is primarily concerned with private European out-nursing instead of with the hospitals, in which European and Indian patients are nursed alike.

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 19.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a provision of Re. 1 lakh be made for water-supply and for the general sanitary improvement of the riparian municipalities in the vicinity of Calcutta; and
- (b) that the expenditure be met from the allotment of Rs. 33,80,000 for works in progress.

He said :—

My Lord, in moving this motion I have to make one preliminary observation to make it clear. It is a very modest sum of Re. 1 lakh that I have asked for and my object is that that sum may be given to the riparian municipalities by way of subvention for the improvement of water-supply and drainage for those municipalities. Looking to the history of the water-supply to the riparian municipalities I find, my Lord, that the long-thought-of scheme of a combined water-supply has been before the Government for the last twenty years. I do not know where that scheme may be lying now—rather what has become of that scheme. This scheme was brought forward, as far as my memory goes, some twenty years before to enable the riparian municipalities in the vicinity of Calcutta to introduce water-supply in their area. I think it was estimated to cost about Rs. 30 lakhs. But very little attention has been shown to it in this Council. The Hon'ble Sir Syed Shamsul Huda, in the budget debate of 1916-17, in reply to the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Banerjee, who referred to the scheme of water-supply to the riparian municipalities and who said that the municipalities concerned knew nothing whatever as to what was going on, declared that nothing would be done without consulting the municipalities concerned. Again, in the budget debate of 1916-17, we were told that there was a large scheme, known as the riparian water-supply scheme, and that details of that scheme were being worked out and that the report of the Sanitary Board was being awaited. The Bihar and Orissa Government have already established a water-board at Jherria. But here this scheme is being considered and reconsidered over and over again and it has not yet taken any practical shape or effect. I think, my Lord, that something should be done in view of there being so much delay in maturing that scheme to help these neighbouring municipalities to improve their water-supply and drainage and also in view of the fact that the surplus population of Calcutta is moving in that direction. The operations of the Rai M. C. Mitra Bahadur ; Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

Improvement Trust and the operations of the Calcutta Municipality are displacing a large number of people. Having regard to this fact and also to the fact that there is a pressing necessity of improving the water-supply and drainage of the suburban area, I have moved the resolution.

The Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur said :—

My Lord, I wish to make a few observations in this connection. It is a known fact that the supply of filtered water to the riparian municipalities is a great advantage to them who have to reside there. Malaria, cholera, etc., have now been stamped out by the introduction of water-works. If your Excellency refers to municipalities on this side of the river in the vicinity of Calcutta your Excellency will find a desire for filtered water prevailing to a great extent among the people. The matter was brought to the notice of the Government several times and the Sanitary Engineer, I am told, has prepared schemes for a water-supply. But these schemes have not been operated upon and nothing has yet been done. My submission is that early steps should be taken to give effect to these schemes. The hon'ble mover of the resolution has asked for a grant of Re. 1 lakh. I submit it is a very small amount. But whether small or great the question before the Council is that the riparian municipalities should be provided with a supply of filtered water. The question, as my hon'ble friend pointed out, was proposed twenty years ago. Even before that the scheme was considered but nothing definite was done. Some riparian municipalities who have independent means have been able to provide water-supply without the help of Government, but others have been left in the dark. As the question has now come before the Council I think Government should lose no time in giving effect to the scheme. If the scheme is not a general one I submit to your Excellency's Government that they will take the matter up in right earnest. All that I can say from the weight of my limited experience is that if the scheme is to be in operation many diseases will be stamped out and even malaria would cease to exist. My Lord, I think there ought to be a scheme for the supply of filtered water within the jurisdiction of district boards. I myself thought out a plan in this connection and, if the scheme which is now under the consideration of Government, I am sure that the days are not distant when all the villages and towns in Bengal will be supplied with filtered water, and if this is done I am sure that malaria and other diseases will go away for ever. With these words I beg to support the resolution.

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

My Lord, I will not take up much of the time of the Council and that for one reason. I have no exact knowledge of affairs of the riparian municipalities except in the 24-Parganas. I would, therefore, confine myself to one particular point. If these riparian municipalities were to get a supply of filtered water it will not only be of help to the people in those localities, but also a great relief to the residents of Calcutta. At the present moment we have to sell a good portion of our water to these municipalities. It is not a case of voluntary sale, but we are commanded by the Government to do so. Of course we get a price, but it is also a fact that we do not sell the water of our own accord. We have got a great need for water ourselves. My hon'ble friend, Mr. Phelps, may not feel the want of it as he lives in the southern portion of the town, but those who live in the northern division feel the insufficiency of water-supply. That has been a grievance with our people, but I am glad to say that the Chairman of the Corporation and many of the Commissioners are alive to it. It stands to reason that these riparian municipalities on the river Hooghly, or very close to it, should have their own machinery for the supply of filtered water and they should discontinue having filtered water from the

Babu S. N. Ray.

Calcutta Corporation. I do not know whether the grant of Re. 1 lakh will be a substantial help in forwarding this project. Probably the Hon'ble Member has mentioned this sum for the consideration of this Council, showing the necessity of getting the riparian municipalities to combine to have their own water-supply. I beg to support the resolution.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

My Lord, I should like to say a few words with reference to this resolution. My hon'ble friend, Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur, is probably under a misapprehension when he said that there has been a scheme—a matured scheme—for the last twenty years. A scheme was prepared only about four years ago, and that scheme was matured through the kind exertions of the President of the Sanitary Board—the Hon'ble Mr. Stevenson-Moore; and by that scheme we wanted to supply all the municipalities from Cossipur-Chitpur up to Kanchrapara—there are about 13 to 14 municipalities—and the original cost of that scheme was estimated to be at least Rs. 35 lakhs, and now it is estimated to cost about Rs. 43 to Rs. 44 lakhs. There was a conference of mill-owners on the east of the river Hooghly as well as some of the leading municipal Commissioners and Chairmen of municipalities and some of the members of the Sanitary Board under the Presidentship of the Commissioner of the Division, Mr. Lang. At first the mill-owners wanted to co-operate with the Government in this riparian scheme, but on account of the war nothing happened. In the meantime the number of mills increased and the mill-owners installed their own machinery; and in Garulia, Jagadal, Baatpara and in Naihati, the mill-owners set up their own machinery and supplied the people of the locality with their own water. So the original scheme which would have cost about Rs. 35 to Rs. 40 lakhs cannot be given effect to. It is only in municipalities from Cossipur-Chitpur up to Barrackpore that we can give effect to a portion of the scheme. So it is no doubt a fact that we wanted to bring the scheme as early as practicable to the notice of Government, and in fact a draft Bill was ready, but on account of the war nothing could be done. But now it would be impossible to give effect to the original scheme, having regard to the attitude of the mill-owners. Probably it is not a fact known to my friend that most of the municipalities from Garulia up to Naihati are managed by mill-owners, and it is the mill-owners who supply filtered water in many places not only to their own workmen but also to the people of those localities. Even if the scheme be revised and a new scheme be prepared, designed to supply filtered water to the municipalities from Cossipur-Chitpur up to Barrackpore, that scheme would, I think, cost no less than Rs. 35 lakhs, and the grant of Re. 1 lakh to these riparian municipalities would mean a drop in the ocean. Of course, it will be for the Sanitary Board to approach Government with this modified scheme, and now that the war is over it is probable that Government will also be able to help us with some money, and then it will be necessary for us to find out the ways and means. The Calcutta Corporation has always been a very conservative body—at least that has been my experience of the institution. My hon'ble friend told us an ancient history. I have also some ancient history to tell. It is about eighteen years ago that I was Vice-Chairman of the Garden Reach Municipality and a Commissioner of the Calcutta Corporation. The Garden Reach Municipality wanted filtered water very badly. I moved a resolution in the Calcutta Corporation to supply the Garden Reach Municipality with filtered water. But the attitude of the Commissioners was anything but friendly and it was only through the help of the then Chairman, Mr. Bright, that the Garden Reach Municipality was supplied with filtered water, and then a clause was inserted in the Bill of 1899 that some of the municipalities in the neighbourhood of Calcutta would get a supply of filtered water from the Calcutta Corporation—I think it is section 278 of the Calcutta

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

Municipal Act. That gave power to the Government to order the supply of filtered water to the neighbouring municipalities. Some of the municipalities have already been supplied with filtered water by the Corporation; and they are the South Suburban, Tollygunge and Cossipur-Chitpur municipalities, because these municipalities agreed to take a certain quantity of water. But now on account of filtered water being appreciated by other municipalities, the demand on the Calcutta Corporation is daily increasing, and what is the result? The result is that instead of charging four annas per thousand gallons as they used to charge before, the Calcutta Corporation is now charging six annas, not only for the excess quantity but also for the agreed quantity; I do not suppose that the supply of water of the Calcutta Corporation is unlimited, but still they have got to supply the neighbouring municipalities with water. Therefore, I think, that the Government might consider the desirability of supplying the Calcutta Corporation with new pipes so that these neighbouring municipalities might be supplied with a larger quantity of water and the charge which the Calcutta Corporation is now making be reduced to four annas per thousand gallons as before.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

My Lord, the Rai Bahadur at first sight appeared to be approaching this subject with a very charitable intention towards these riparian municipalities, but now that he has let the cat out of the bag I gather that the real object is that the Calcutta Corporation should be relieved of the amount of water they have to supply to these riparian municipalities. Hence this resolution. Government have not been idle over this matter. I do not know of any old scheme which perhaps the Rai Bahadur who generally has a weakness for looking up old reports might have come across; we only know of the scheme that was prepared a few years ago by Mr. Williams and regarding which reference has been made by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. That matter has been before the Sanitary Board and, I believe, it is still before them, and has to be taken up again. The question is this: There are quite a number of these municipalities, regarding which Government have prepared a large water-supply scheme, the cost of which comes up roughly to about Rs. 36 lakhs, and of this, the share of the municipalities concerned is estimated at a little over Rs. 9 lakhs. Of these municipalities two have declined to join—one municipality has said that it cannot afford to take advantage of the scheme. Then, we come to the mill areas to which some reference has already been made by the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray. We find that a number of these mills have got their own arrangements for water-supply and are therefore strongly opposed, because they fear that water-tax will be levied on them in spite of their having their own water-supply. We have thoroughly gone into the question, but so far have been unable to meet the mill-owners so we have again referred the matter to the Sanitary Board whose views are awaited. That being the case, I think it must be apparent to the Hon'ble Members present here that to ask to provide Re. 1 lakh, when there is no definite scheme before us and when no particular municipality has been specified, would be not only futile, but, if I may say so, absurd. That being so, my Lord, I do not think that any case has been made out for which the Government should make a provision of Re. 1 lakh for the improvement of water-supply to the riparian municipalities, and I cannot, therefore, recommend to Government the acceptance of this resolution.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

My Lord, I have listened to the observations made by the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan. He thinks that the cat is out of the bag because the Corporation wanted to be relieved of the obligation for the supply of water to the neighbouring municipalities. I think, my Lord, that was not letting the cat out of the bag, because it is well known that the Corporation desire to be relieved of the obligation and that, although they are willing so far as practicable to help the neighbouring municipalities with their limited resources, they think that we must press the Government to bring the scheme to a head. Of course I do not want to quarrel about the age of the scheme. I would not care how many schemes have been superseded or not. The question is one of combining these municipalities into one for the purpose of promoting a water-supply scheme as was proposed in 1878. If my hon'ble friend would look into the proceedings of the Legislative Council of the year 1878, he will find that the scheme was proposed in Sir Ashley Eden's time. This subject is as old as 1878 and probably older. I distinctly remember, and I am speaking from my memory that the scheme was started in Sir Ashley Eden's time when the Hon'ble Mr. Mackenzie was the Municipal Secretary, and the Government insisted on the Calcutta Municipality supplying water to the neighbouring municipalities. Though the Corporation are supplying water their resource is limited. I know, of course, that Re. 1 lakh is merely a drop in the ocean considering their needs. I have explained that I have suggested that amount only to bring the matter to the attention of Government who may see the necessity of doing something to provide riparian municipalities with an efficient water-supply. That is the reason that I have mentioned this sum.

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur.

The resolution was then put and lost.

APPENDIX TO THE LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 22.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council—

- (a) that a grant of Re. 1 lakh be made in favour of District Boards and Municipal Charitable Dispensaries for the introduction of the Ayurvedic system of medicine, and
- (b) that the amount be met from—
 - (i) the provision of Rs. 15,000 for the Press Censor under the general administration charges, and
 - (ii) the balance from the general reserve of Rs. 2 lakhs for unforeseen charges under 32--Miscellaneous.

He said :—

My Lord, with reference to this motion, I understand that some of the municipalities and district boards are inclined to take up this matter themselves, so there is no need for me to move this resolution. They have expressed a very laudable desire, but I do not know how far the desire will be fulfilled. But I should like to wait and see the result. But I think the sum of Rs. 15,000 for the provision of the Press Censor may be utilized otherwise, as I understand the Press Censorship has been abolished, and there is no need for this sum now.

Sir. Henry Wheeler.

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

I may remind the Hon'ble Member that this sum has already been allotted on the resolution of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar.

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

4.

Are the Government aware of the grievances of the public who travel on the Mymensingh-Bhairab Railway arising out of an excessive rate of fare, and the want of a regular provision of inter-class carriages, particularly for ladies, in most of the trains running on this line?

Grievances of the public travelling on the Mymensingh-Bhairab Railway.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Cowley:—

"The Hon'ble Member in the first part of his question probably alludes to the question relating to the subject of fares and pontage charge over the Mymensingh-Bhairab Bazar Railway asked by the Hon'ble Rai Sri Nath Ray Bahadur at the Council Meeting held on 20th November, 1917. The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply given on that occasion."

In regard to the second part of the question Government are aware that the Coaching stock of the Assam-Bengal Railway at present available is inadequate to provide fully for the requirements of the travelling public. The situation has been created by the war. The Railway authorities report that additional stock is expected during the coming financial year but it will be some time before the stock of the line will be sufficient to meet all requirements."

5.

(a) Is it a fact that economic distress has been caused by the rise in the prices of food-stuffs?

Economic distress caused by the abnormal prices of food-stuffs.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state whether there is any likelihood of the prices going down in the near future, particularly in so far as rice, kerosine oil and cloths are concerned?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"The Hon'ble Member is referred to the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler's speech on this question at the meeting of this Council on the 18th and 19th, February. It is difficult to forecast the future in the matter of prices as so many factors are involved, including supplies, monsoon and labour conditions, freight and tonnage. These factors are more than local and concern the world generally. It is thus impossible to prophesy as to the future trend of prices one way or the other."

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state the number of deaths of infants under one year in Bengal in 1917-18?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

" (a) The number of deaths in 1917-18 was 308,537.

(b) and (c) Infantile mortality is undoubtedly high in Bengal. No scheme for the prevention of infantile mortality has yet been prepared, and, as stated in the reply given to question No XII asked by the Hon'ble Raja Mahendra Ranjan Ray Chaudhuri at the meeting of the Council held on 6th March, 1916, the causes responsible for the high proportion of infantile deaths are so inextricably bound up with the domestic life and social customs of the people that they cannot be eradicated by any special action on the part of Government. As stated, however, in the reply to question No. 20 by the Hon'ble Sir Nilratan Sarkar, Government intend to take up the question of child welfare, with special reference to infant mortality, and to consider what measures can be taken to reduce the present high death rate among infants."

Memorial of Rajshahi zamindars re postponement of recovery of settlement costs?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the memorial, together with a list of the signatories thereto?

(c) Will the Government be also pleased to state what action, if any, they propose to take in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) A copy is laid on the table with a list of the signatories thereto.

(c) The prayer of the memorialists is, that in consequence of the damage done by the severe floods in Rajshahi, last year, the realisation of settlement costs from proprietors and tenure-holders should be postponed. A report has been received by Government on the memorial. Out of the 24 memorialists only eight have any settlement costs still to pay for property in Rajshahi. Of these eight, four own no property in badly affected areas. By the other four payments have already been made aggregating 83, 87, 83 and 94 per cent., respectively, of the amounts due by them; the highest percentage has been paid by the proprietors of the estate most affected. Moreover, most of the tenure-holders as well as ruiyats have paid their costs in the thanas affected by the floods.

Regarding the allegation in the memorial that the situation of the memorialists has been aggravated by the strict realisation of the settlement costs from their tenants, it may be mentioned that last September, just after the floods, orders were issued by Government to suspend recovery in certain of the flooded areas, but on the representation of certain tenants who preferred to pay at that season rather than later, it was continued on the understanding that no pressure or coercive measures for enforcing payment should be used in the case of persons whose crops or houses had been destroyed by the floods.

In all these circumstances Government are of opinion that no general action is required on this memorial. The Settlement Officer has discretion on the receipt of representations regarding individual cases of hardship, either to allow instalments of payment or to defer the issue of coercive process under the Certificate Act."

To

Earl of Ronaldshay, G.C.I.E., Governor of the Presidency of Bengal.

The humble memorial of the undersigned
Landholders of the district of Rajshahi

MOST RESPECTFULLY SHEWETH,

THAT the estates belonging to your humble memorialists have been affected very severely by the recent unprecedented floods in the Rajshahi district,

THAT, in consequence, your Excellency's humble memorialists are unable to realize rents and other dues from their tenantry, and considering the distressed condition of the tenants, Your Excellency's memorialists find it extremely hard to press for their demands or execute existing decrees till the next harvest,

THAT the situation has been further aggravated by the strict realization of the settlement recovery costs from the tenants,

THAT for the reasons stated above, the collection of rents and dues of the undersigned memorialists has fallen off so considerably that they find it very difficult to meet the current demands of Government revenue and their own domestic and establishment charges,

THAT the present distress of Your Excellency's memorialists has been greatly enhanced by their being called upon to pay large settlement recovery costs, which it is practically impossible for them to pay without incurring debts at a very high rate of interest,

THAT, in conclusion, Your Excellency's memorialists beg to pray that Your Excellency be pleased to direct that any further realization of settlement recovery costs from the owners of estates and permanent tenures, be postponed till the harvesting of the next jute crops in August, 1919, or take such other steps which Your Excellency may deem fit and proper,

For which act of kindness and generosity Your Excellency's humble memorialists, as in duty bound, shall ever pray.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state whether they have taken any action with regard to any scheme in connection with child welfare? Scheme regarding child welfare

(b) Are the Government considering the desirability of making any arrangement for the dissemination of knowledge regarding child welfare?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) and (b). The Hon'ble Member is probably aware of the work of the maternity and baby welfare section of the Health Department of the Calcutta Corporation. Work of this nature is not, so far as Government are aware, carried out in other municipalities. In November 1917 the Sanitary Commissioner circularized the Chairmen of all municipalities and District Boards and suggested that local authorities should take steps to arouse public interest in the conditions producing high infantile mortality and should organize baby shows for this purpose. A baby show was held in Howrah in August 1918 and in a circular of 20th January, 1919, of which a copy is laid on the table, the Sanitary Commissioner urged Chairmen of District Boards and municipalities to organize similar shows.

No general scheme of child welfare has been elaborated, but Government propose to take up the question with special reference to infant mortality.”

Circular referred to in the answer by the HON'BLE MR. O'MALLEY to question No. 20 (Unstarred) asked by the HON'BLE SIR NILRATAN SARKAR at the Council meeting of the 27th March, 1919.

PRESENT :

- (1) BABU NITYA DHON MUKHARJI, President.
- (2) MILLAR M. KING, ESQ.
- (3) BABU CHARU CHANDRA SINHA, M.A., B.L.

Resolved—That the report of Mrs. King, the President of the committee of ladies, be adopted and sent to the Chairman, Howrah Municipality, for placing before the Commissioners at a meeting.

NITYA DHON MUKHARJI,

President.

The 1st November, 1918.

Report about the Baby Show held on the 25th August, 1918.

A COMMITTEE of ladies, with myself as its President, was formed at the request of the committee appointed by the Municipal Commissioners to organize a Baby Show. There were in all six meetings of that committee. Three meetings were held in my house, and the other three in the room of the Vice-Chairman of the Municipality who also attended the meetings and rendered very valuable assistance in organizing the show.

The show was held at 4 P.M. on the 25th of August last in the hall of the Ripon Collegiate School which was selected by the committee after a local inspection of the building. It was advertised by publication of notices in the local newspapers, by the distribution of hand-bills printed in Bengali, Hindi, Urdu and English, and also by beat of drums. Special letters with a copy of English notices were also sent to the residents of the town, intimating that strict pardah will be observed and requesting their attendance. It was also advertised that on the receipt of previous intimation conveyance will be arranged for bringing respectable Indian ladies and children from their houses and taking them back.

The services of three cars were placed at the disposal of the committee for the above purpose and several carriages were also hired.

All classes of people were invited and strict purdah was observed. Children of less than five years were allowed to compete. For the purpose of location and distribution of prizes two separate divisions were made for two classes of people, viz., one for the ladies and children of respectable families and the other for lower classes.

The expenses in connection with the show were met by donations paid by several gentlemen and certain firms, the major portion of which was paid by Mr. M. King and his firm.

The following prizes were given :—

- I. Ten special prizes which consisted of toys were awarded to children belonging to the better class of society.
- II. The prizes for children belonging to the poorer or lower class of society were divided into two classes :—
 - (1) The First Class prizes which were three in number consisted of Rs. 10 in cash and a sari which were given to the mothers of the babies winning the prizes.
 - (2) The Second Class prizes which were seven in number consisted of Rs. 5 in cash and a sari which were given to the mothers of the babies winning the prizes.

Besides the prizes mentioned above, there were about 100 consolation prizes for each class of children attending the show.

The attendance was beyond our expectation. It was more than 700 in number, about 300 of whom came from the better class of people and 400 from the lower class.

Besides children several purdah ladies attended the show and special care was taken for their comfort. Pans were distributed, there was arrangement for drinking water and sweetmeats were distributed amongst all class of children.

There was a special prize consisting of a nice shawl given to the healthiest and cleanest baby among the lower class of people attending the show.

Out of the lady members, the President, Mrs. Waters, Mrs. Millar, and Mrs. Steen were selected as judges to decide to whom the prizes should be given.

Miss Chaudhuri and Miss Anthony then delivered lectures on simple diseases amongst the children and impressed on them the importance of taking early measures to arrest the progress of those diseases.

The children were then examined by the Committee of Judges and prizes, as stated above, were distributed to the deserving babies and children.

At the request of the committee the Civil Surgeon very kindly allowed some nurses from the hospital to be present at the show, and to arrange and help the distribution of prizes.

The school building was nicely decorated on the day of the show.

President.

Article 459 of the Civil Service Regulations, referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley to question No. 23 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur at the Council meeting of the 27th March, 1919.

459. (a) Ministerial officers who have attained the age of 55 may be required to retire, but should ordinarily be retained in service so long as they remain efficient until they come under the provisions of clause (e).

(b) Officers, other than ministerial, who have attained the age of 55 should ordinarily be required to retire, and should not be retained in service except where unquestionable public grounds for retention exist, and there is no doubt as to the physical fitness of the officer.

(c) Each officer's case should be taken up when he is approaching the age of 55 and before the expiry of each extension of service. Extensions may not be granted for any period exceeding one year at one time.

(d) The powers given by the preceding clauses may be exercised by the authority competent to fill the appointment (if vacant) of the officer who is required to retire or retained in service.

(e) An officer who has attained the age of 60 cannot be retained in the service of Government save in very exceptional circumstances, and with the sanction of the local Government.

(f) No claim to compensation from an officer who is required to retire under the provisions of this Article will be entertained.

(a) Is it a fact that a special allowance of Rs. 50 per mensem is given to armed inspectors? Grant of a special allowance to armed inspector

(b) Is this allowance given alike to European and Indian armed reserve inspectors?

(c) Is this allowance given in consideration of any meritorious work or on account of the nationality of the recipient?

(d) If on account of the latter, will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) the reason for this distinction between European and Indian inspectors, and

(ii) whether it is the intention of Government to remove this distinction?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) and (b) A compensatory local allowance of Rs 50 a month has been sanctioned for 31 posts, which are ordinarily, but not necessarily, held by European inspectors, usually men who have served as non-commissioned officers in the British Army. Of these 31 posts, 17 belong to the headquarters force, 8 to the town police, 4 to the railway platform police, while 2 are held by officers employed as drill instructors.

(c) and (d) The allowances were granted because suitable men of the type required for these posts cannot be obtained on the ordinary scale of inspectors' pay. The Police Commission of 1903 in paragraph 80 of their report recognised the necessity of employing a certain number of European inspectors in such posts, and proposed that instead of being borne on a separate list and receiving a higher scale of pay than ordinary inspectors, they should be given a local allowance, where necessary, to cover the higher cost of living. Government do not propose to alter the existing arrangements.”

System of open-air schools.

(a) Has the attention of Government been drawn to the system of open-air schools which is being tried in certain parts of Bihar and Orissa?

(b) Are the Government aware that the Government of Bihar and Orissa have pointed out to the local bodies the necessity of adopting a simple standard for the building and equipment of primary schools in that province and that the standard so advocated is less costly than that set up in Bengal?

(c) Are the Government considering the desirability of making a reference to the Bihar and Orissa Government on these subjects?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) A copy of a resolution moved by the Hon'ble Babu Gopabandhu Das at the meeting of the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council held on 22nd January 1919 and of the reply given by the Hon'ble Mr. Le Mesurier is laid on the table. It has been ascertained that the Director of Public Instruction Bihar and Orissa, circulated in 1915 a type plan of an “open air” primary school to the chairmen of district boards and district committees of public instruction with the request that they would consider its suitability for their districts. It is understood that the plan has been accepted in several districts in Bihar and Orissa.

(b) As stated by the Hon'ble Mr. Le Mesurier in the speech referred to in part (a) of this reply the attention of district boards and other bodies in Bihar and Orissa has been drawn from time to time to the necessity of keeping down expenditure on school buildings within the limits of what is strictly necessary. The Government of Bihar and Orissa sanctioned in 1917 a proposal to create village school committees in selected localities and to utilise their agency in providing cheap houses for primary schools at an average cost of Rs. 100 to Rs. 150, the district boards paying to the committees for each house an initial building grant of Rs. 50 and a recurring grant of Rs. 10 for annual repairs.

(c) The progress of the experiment will be watched by this Government.

Resolution (together with its reply) referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY to question No. 25 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY at the Council meeting of the 27th March, 1919.

Council Resolution regarding encouragement of open-air schools in Bihar and Orissa.

Resolution moved by the Hon'ble BABU GOPABANDHU DAS at the meeting of the Bihar and Orissa Legislative Council held on the 22nd January, 1919.

This Council recommends to the Lieutenant-Governor in Council that in the primary and secondary schools of this Province open-air conditions of living and teaching be, as far as practicable, encouraged, and that costly buildings of a type plan as a condition for the recognition of the school be dispensed with where the institution can be run on open-air lines with advantage.

Reply given by the Hon'ble Mr. LeMesurier.

" Your Honour,

" The Hon'ble Member has the full sympathy of Government in his wish to extend, to suitable localities, the system which he has himself adopted and works so successfully at the Satyabadi school. As he acknowledges, his wishes have been anticipated ; for, more than three years ago, the Director of Public Instruction addressed all Chairmen of District Boards and Committees of Public Instruction with reference to a tentative scheme of an open-air primary school, and Government attach due importance to the approval which Satyabadi system secured from Dr. Lankester during his inquiry into the prevalence of tuberculosis in certain parts of India and they desired to see the scheme tried wherever conditions were favourable. I cannot, however, admit what appears to be the Hon'ble Member's opinion that all type plan buildings are necessarily expensive or are invariably imposed on the promoters of private schools. On the contrary the Primary Education Committee gave much time and attention to reduce the necessity of school buildings to the very simplest and most inexpensive fundamentals and from time to time the attention of District Boards and other bodies has been drawn to the necessity of keeping down expenditure within the limits of what is strictly necessary.

2. The Hon'ble Member knows by his own experience that at certain seasons and under certain conditions it is impossible to conduct the classes out of doors, and there must therefore be some provision for adequate shelter from wet and stormy weather. It is also necessary that the grounds in which the school should be held shall be so arranged even when the weather is suitable that the different classes shall not interfere with one another, i.e., must not be so close to one another that the noise of one interferes with the other. In fact it would be better that each class should be out of sight of the other.

3. Government fully recognize the great hygienic advantage of an open-air school, and the Director and myself will make it a point during the visits which, as already announced in Council, we are paying to divisional headquarters with a view to discussing schemes of educational progress with the Chairmen of District Boards, to bring to their notice the advantages of the open-air system wherever local conditions make it practicable to try it."

In making their recommendations District Magistrates enquire into the facts of each case. The consideration of the circumstances, occupation, etc., is necessarily left to them as they are in the best position to judge.

Government are not prepared to collect from districts extensive statistics relating to a transitory period which would be out of date in many cases by the time the information was obtained and the value of which would not be commensurate with the labour involved: 36 of those at present in home domicile are already under orders of release as soon as suitable sureties for their future conduct are forthcoming.

(h) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the reply to (c) (ii).

(i) Out of the 68 persons who are in home domicile and who receive no allowance 50 belonged to the student class before arrest. No détenu has been granted permission, while the orders against him are in force, to join an educational institution. There is no objection to a détenu continuing his studies privately.

(b) What was the amount of the allowance granted to him during the period of his internment away from home?

(c) Is it a fact that his allowance has been discontinued since he has been domiciled at home? If so, why?

(d) Is it also a fact that he made an application for the continuance of his allowance, or in the alternative, for permission to practise as a physician at his native town, or, failing both, to be sent back to his former place of internment where he was in receipt of an allowance?

(e) Is it the case that none of these requests have been granted?

(f) Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the aforesaid application, if any, together with a copy of the reply thereto?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) Satyendra Mohan Sen was transferred to home domicile on the 19th December 1918.

(b) An allowance of Rs 40 was granted to him at his previous place of internment

(c) The allowance was discontinued on the man's transfer to home domicile as no recommendation was received from the District Magistrate for the grant of it. It will be seen from the reply to point (e) below that the matter is now before the District Magistrate and final orders will be passed on receipt of his report.

(d) An application for the continuance of his allowance or for release in order to earn his own livelihood was received by Government on the 10th February 1919. He did not ask for permission to practise as a physician while in home domicile.

(e) He was informed that allowances for détenus in home domicile were not granted except on the recommendation of the District Magistrate.

The District Magistrate, Dacca, has reported that a petition was presented to him by a pleader on the 19th March, and it is at present under the District Magistrate's consideration.

He said :—

“My Lord, I beg to present the Budget of the Government of Bengal for the year 1919-20. A copy of the accompanying memorandum is in the hands of Hon'ble Members, and it explains the present position. As a matter of fact, there has been no change in the figures, as the transfer of the small sum of Rs. 40,000 which was approved by the Council at its last meeting will be made by an executive order for reappropriation as soon as the financial year begins. As far as we can ascertain, that change has not been incorporated in the Budget figures as approved by the Government of India, who, possibly, did not think it necessary to alter their figures in this minor respect. However, the net result will be the same whichever procedure is adopted."

THE BENGAL FOOD ADULTERATION BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Sir Bijay Chand Mahtab, Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, presented the Report of the Select Committee on the Bengal Food Adulteration Bill, 1919.

He said :—

"My Lord, in presenting the Report of the Select Committee on the Food Adulteration Bill I beg to make a few observations.

The Bill has been changed in certain details and the modifications made in the Bill are explained in the Report of the Select Committee and I need only refer to the more important changes. One of the most important is the addition of wheat flour to the articles specifically provided for in clause 6. It was pointed out by some of the public bodies consulted that flour is largely adulterated with soapstone and chaoline, and should therefore be added to the list of articles mentioned in that clause; and it was felt by the Select Committee that flour being an article of common consumption, it was necessary to provide against this practice. There are also two new provisions regarding ghee. The British-Indian Association, the North Bengal Zamindars' Association, and the Bengal National Chamber of Commerce were unanimous in suggesting that pure ghee in Bengal being manufactured only from the milk of cows and buffaloes, it was desirable that it should be clearly laid down that ghee should not contain any substance which is not derived exclusively from the milk of these animals. At the same time, an exception has been made in the case of curds, as unfortunately unscrupulous vendors use curds for adulteration, and it has been thought necessary to guard against such a dishonest practice. Weighty objections were also made in the opinions expressed on the Bill to the provisions of clause 5(1) (c) and (d) and clause 6(3), protecting vendors who can produce warranties or show that the food they sell is in the same state in which it was purchased by them. It has been pointed out that manufacturers often live outside the jurisdiction of the Bengal Government; and that apart from this, Calcutta being excluded from the operation of this Bill, there is nothing to prevent an unprincipled manufacturer in Calcutta from supplying vendors in the mufassal with the necessary warranty to ensure the uninterrupted sale of his adulterated article. It is represented that an open door would be left to dishonest vendors for setting up the defence that they sold their articles in the same state in which they purchased them although they themselves might have adulterated them. The British-Indian Association point out that 'emboldened by the knowledge that the law is powerless to touch them, unscrupulous manufacturers would fraudulently furnish the requisite warranty without any hesitation or fear, in order to push the sale of the articles manufactured by them.' The Marwari Association say that if the possession of a warranty guarantees impunity, it may be reasonably apprehended that in view of the large profits that can be easily gained by adulteration, 'many vendors, both in Calcutta and in the interior, will knowingly import adulterated articles from other provinces where, the law being inoperative, it will be easy to get warranties from the manufacturers. Similarly, if the sale of articles in the state in which they were purchased is made no offence, unscrupulous vendors will be able to sell adulterated articles easily under a declaration, and adulteration will go on as ever. As the evil of adulterating articles of food has assumed dangerous proportions, this Association are unhesitatingly of opinion that, in the interests of the general public, the principle laid down in the Statement of Objects and Reasons that 'a person who sells food must take responsibility that the food is not adulterated—should be rigorously enforced in cases of both the manufacturers and the vendors, and the latter should not be allowed to go scot-free merely on the production of a warranty'. For these reasons we have, after due consideration on the Select Committee, thought fit to delete the provisions regarding warranties in clauses 5(1) (c) and (d) and clause 6 (3) of the Bill.

In clauses 5 and 6, a few words have been added to make it clear that the employer is liable for the sale of adulterated food as well as the actual salesman. Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur in recording his opinion on the Bill pointed out that it was desirable to add a provision that a person is liable for the acts of his servants even though they are unauthorized and against his express orders; and we think that the addition made in this clause will meet his point.

To turn to Chapter I of the Bill, it is now provided in clause 1 that the Act shall not be extended unless after previous publication; in view of the representation made by the Calcutta Trades' Association that in case of the operation of the Bill being extended to different articles of food, sufficient notice should be given to importers so as to enable them to dispose of their existing stocks and to give timely notice to home manufacturers and exporters in regard to future supplies. Some changes have also been made in recognition of the position of local authorities. In the Bill as introduced, a local authority outside a municipality or cantonment was to be the district magistrate or subdivisional magistrate. It is now provided that in rural areas the local authority shall be such authority or officer as the local Government may appoint, so that the district boards may come within the scope of the definition, while in a district, such as Darjeeling, where there is no District Board, the Deputy Commissioner would naturally constitute the local authority. Clause 3 has again been changed so as to provide for the appointment of public analysts by local bodies, when empowered to do so by the local Government. This is necessary, because, although Government must at first arrange for analytical work, this duty will have to be delegated sooner or later to local authorities who will have to appoint public analysts and establish laboratories for the purpose. It is now also provided in clause 19 that fines under the Act when imposed in an area under a district board shall be credited to the district fund.

Another change of considerable importance has been made in clause 21 which in the Bill as introduced allowed only of fines being imposed as penalties for offences under the Act. It was represented in various quarters that fines would be no deterrent. The Indian Association, for instance, remarked 'that punishment of fine alone would not be sufficiently deterrent to unscrupulous men who make huge profits by adulteration of food-stuffs.' They, therefore, suggested that the alternative of imprisonment should be provided for the second or at least the third offence. The North Bengal Zamindars' Association again pointed out 'that the year before last the Marwari Panchayat of Calcutta imposed fines of from Rs. 25,000 to Rs. 1,00,000 on some of the big ghee dealers of Calcutta without their feeling them'. Mere fines, they said, 'will not be deterrent punishment in the case of the big merchants who may have amassed fabulous wealth by their nefarious trade.' It is, therefore, now provided that a sentence of imprisonment not exceeding three months may be imposed for a second or subsequent offence as an alternative or in addition to fines.

There are also some formal changes due chiefly to adopting definitions given in the English Sale of Food and Drugs Acts of 1875 and 1899, while the title of the Bill has been changed to the Bengal Food Adulteration Bill as having the advantage of brevity and clearness.

I am glad, Sir, to be able to present an unanimous report on this rather important Bill."

THE BENGAL PRIMARY EDUCATION BILL, 1919.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that the Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1919, as amended by the Council on the 18th and 19th February, 1919, be taken into consideration.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 5 & 6.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved—

- (1) that after the words "Education Department" in line 6 of sub-clause (1) of clause 2 the words "or the Education Board, if any," be inserted, and
- (2) that after sub-clause (2) of clause 2 the following be inserted, namely :—

"(2a) 'Education Board' means a Board composed of not less than five members, with a non-official majority, appointed by the Government to exercise the powers and discharge the functions prescribed by rules made under this Act."

He said :—

"My Lord, I feel it my duty to thank your Excellency for the opportunity which has been given to us for a further discussion of this important measure. I think I may be permitted to say that whatever others may think I do not believe that I am either an obstructionist or an enemy of progress. I only wish that the country could have made half the speed in making progress that I wish it to make. I yield to no one in my earnest desire to see this Bill successfully passed and put into active operation for the promotion and extension of primary education. The only thing is that I am unable to surrender my judgment hood-winked.

My Lord, I would ask your Excellency's permission to put the first two amendments—rather to argue the first two amendments, that is, items 5 and 6 together. Your Excellency may put these amendments in any way you like, but I think it would be convenient both for me as well as for this Council to follow the trend of my argument if I were to put them together.

My Lord, it is now several years past that a cry has been raised in the country that there should be an Education Board. People are not wanting who ly that the Education Department is an Archaic Institution. Call it Archaic, call it classical, call it by any name you like, there can be, however, no denying the fact that the Education Department is one of the heaviest as well as most important departments of the State. My Lord, in a province consisting of 44 Jhalas, over 2,700 secondary schools including more than 500 high English schools and over 50,000 primary schools—I say in a province like that—the work of the Education Department cannot be a very light task. Add to that the difficulties of the department which must necessarily arise when this measure is put into operation, and the Council will at once see how very onerous the task of the Education Department must be. However capable, however devoted, however Herculean the Director of Public Instruction may be, I do think that it is beyond the power of a single administrator to control and efficiently manage a department like the Education Department. I think it is high time that we should come to the rescue of the Director. It is improper and unfair to expect of him what it is not in human power to do, and I think we ought ungrudgingly to help him by establishing an Education Board. No doubt the Director will be the head of the Board, but it would give some relief and active help to him to have an Advisory Board to help him in the direction of Education, particularly as far as the primary education is concerned. I would, therefore, humbly propose that measures should be taken, and advantage should be taken of this important measure, to inaugurate a much-needed reform for which the people have urged for a long time, namely, to establish an Education Board.

I have, my Lord, not deliberately fixed the maximum number of members; various interests may have to be considered, various communal questions may arise and, therefore, I have studiously avoided fixing the maximum number, leaving it entirely to the discretion of Government as circumstances permit them to do. I have only said that the Board should consist of not less than five members which I believe ought to be the minimum. But, my Lord, as there is no constituency by which we can have members of the Education Board elected, it must go without saying that the Education Board must at the present moment be appointed by Government, but with this reservation—that as there can be no election the non-officials should have a majority on this Board and their duties and functions, I think, may well be left to the rules which will be prescribed under this Act.

The other amendment, namely, item No. 5, is a consequential provision; item No. 6 is carried item No. 5 will necessarily follow, and I hope the Council will consider that it is high time that we should provide this machinery, this useful machinery, for the promotion of education, particularly primary education, in this country. Some other provinces have already given their attention to this very matter, and I do not think that Bengal will lag behind. With these observations I beg to commend my amendments to the consideration of the Council."

the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I shall deal with these two amendments separately. With reference to the first amendment, namely, the insertion of the words 'or the Education Board, if any,' after the words 'Education Department'; if there is anybody in this Council who ought to favour this amendment it is myself. Your Lordship probably knows that on the 4th September, 1917, I moved a resolution in this Council for the appointment of an Education Board for advising Government in respect of secondary and primary education of the province. That resolution was unfortunately opposed by most of the Muhammadan members of this Council, but it appears that the Muhammadan members of this Council were labouring under a misapprehension. One of them said: 'I should also tell my Muhammadan friends that the day is probably not very far off when free and compulsory primary education will have to be introduced in this country. If and when that day comes sectarian tendencies and sectarian interests will disappear and the common aspirations and common endeavour of the people will lead the two communities to grow up side by side and build up institutions worthy of a great people.' I quote this from the speech of my hon'ble friend Mr. Aminur Rahaman. He also said: 'In Bengal, I do not know of other provinces—the Muhammadans, on account of their backward condition have been receiving special treatment at the hands of the Government. Rightly or wrongly they insist on that.' It then appears that my Muhammadan friends thought that the special treatment which they had been receiving so long would disappear if there be an Education Board in this province: but now that we are going to have compulsory education, and I may also say free education as regards the poorer classes of the population who cannot afford to pay for education, the time is come when an Education Board ought to be established, and with reference to this amendment I am glad to see that the proposal has come from no less a body than the Calcutta Corporation. The Calcutta Corporation has given the following opinion:—

Babu S. N. Ray.

That the Corporation approve the principle of the 'Bengal Primary Education Bill, 1917'.

That with this object in view, it should be provided that, within one year from the passing of the Act, it shall be incumbent upon the Commissioners of every Municipality to submit to the Board of Education detailed statements, etc.

Then, there is, of course, the constitution of the Education Board suggested by them, but I shall deal with that point later on. So, it appears, that those who have thought over the matter have come to the conclusion that there ought to be an Education Board in the province to deal with the numerous questions which may arise with reference to the primary education of the province. It is however said that when I moved my resolution we never thought that the Reforms Scheme was coming, and the division of subjects into transferred and reserved subjects and the appointment of a minister were not even dreamt of then. Now that we are going to have a division of subjects, and primary education will also be one of the transferred subjects and will be in the hands of the minister, there ought not to be an Education Board. This has been suggested by some of my friends and it is also suggested that there will be Standing Committees to assist all the departments of the State, and these Standing Committees will perform the functions of the Board which has been suggested by my hon'ble friend, Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. These are no doubt subjects which should be taken into consideration in considering the question of the appointment of an Education Board. So, I leave this matter entirely to Government to deal with—whether it will be practicable or not now to constitute an Education Board, if not for anything else, at least to assist the Director of Public Instruction in his multifarious duties.

Then, as regards the constitution of the Education Board, there is a great difference of opinion. The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Chandra Mazumdar as suggested that the minimum number ought to be 5, while the suggestion of the Calcutta Corporation is this—

Mr. O'Malley.

That within 3 months after the passing of this Act, a Provincial Board of Education be constituted as follows :—

- | | | | | | |
|--|-----|-----|-----|-----|---|
| (a) One member elected from each of the five Divisions of Bengal | ... | ... | ... | ... | 5 |
| (b) One member appointed by the University of Calcutta | | | | | 1 |
| (c) One member appointed by the Corporation of Calcutta | | | | | 1 |
| (d) Three members appointed by the Local Government | ... | | | | 3 |

This gives a total number of 10. Of course, my hon'ble friend, Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, has only suggested that the minimum number should be 5. As there is a good deal of difference of opinion with reference to this question, I would leave the matter entirely in the hands of Government."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, I submit that the proposal to create a Board of Education goes a good deal beyond the scope of the Bill, the object of which is to enable the municipalities to provide for the promotion and expansion of primary education. It comes to this—that a change of large administrative importance is mooted in the form of an amendment to the Bill, and that, at the eleventh hour. But the constitution and functions of such a body require much more careful thought and consideration than can be given in a somewhat brief discussion of an amendment to a Bill. The idea is not new; but it has never been fully debated so far as I am aware in this Council. The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray introduced a motion on the subject, proposing, I think, that a Board of Education should be created with advisory powers only; but that motion was withdrawn, and Government have not even a recommendation to the Council in its favour on the subject. I also take this point that the constitution and functions proposed for a Board of Education under the various amendments of the hon'ble mover are wanting in precision and definiteness. It is not stated, for instance, how long the members of the Board are to hold office—whether for life or a term of years—who shall be the President, whether different interests are to be represented, and so on.

I submit, Sir, the constitution of a Board of Education with important functions to discharge should be much more definitely stated.

Apart from its constitution, the powers and duties of the Board are not clearly defined in the amendments. Under the amendment numbered 6 on the Agenda paper the Board is to exercise the powers and discharge the functions prescribed by rules under the Act, but the rules are at present an entirely unknown quantity. In introducing the motion the hon'ble member said that his object was to afford relief to the Education Department which will be overburdened by the onerous duties imposed by the Bill, and then he proceeded to say that what he had in mind was an Advisory Board—not a Board with executive powers, but an Advisory Board. This, however, does not agree with the other amendments, which fill in the frame-work a little. According to the amendment numbered 5 the Board is to have power to make rules and orders. That does not quite agree with the idea of an Advisory Board. On the other hand, if a Board of Education was established, having power of control over primary education, the Education Department would merely carry out its instructions. The rules and orders would be those of the Board and this amendment would, therefore, be superfluous. The same argument applies to the amendment numbered 8 under which the Education Board would have power to recognize schools. Here again, if the Education Board was to have power of control, the Education Department would be subject to it. If, on the other hand, it is merely an Advisory Board, I do not see how it could have power to recognize schools. Turning again to amendment numbered 30 on the Agenda paper, which also stands in the name of the hon'ble mover, that amendment contemplates inspecting officers being entertained by the Board of Education, as if it were to be quite separate from the Education Department. There are these objections to the various amendments put forward. If the Board of Education is to be merely advisory, the Board will not have the power of making rules and orders, recognizing schools or appointing inspecting officers. Apart from this, there is the consideration pointed out by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill that it certainly is a matter for consideration whether a body should be created by a statute at this stage, without any idea so far as we can see of co-ordinating it with the Minister and Standing Committees proposed by the Secretary of State and the Viceroy. It seems as if that the hon'ble mover either wishes to anticipate the Reform Scheme or that he has not perhaps fully considered what would be the relation of the Board to the Minister and the Standing Committees. I would invite his attention to clause 3 of the Bill under which a year or such other period as may be prescribed by Government is to be given for the survey of the educational needs and resources of different municipalities before action is taken under this Bill. It also provides in the alternative for another period to be prescribed, the idea of the Select Committee being that some municipalities might not be able to carry out the scheme within a year. In this connection, I may say that I was somewhat surprised by the fact that in the last debate on this Bill not a single member, if I remember aright, referred to the possibility—it may be even a probability, but of course we cannot forecast future events—that a Minister will be in charge of primary education and that if this is the case, he will be responsible for the administration of the Act. I am afraid, my Lord, that I cannot recommend the Council to accept these amendments."

Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I cannot clearly understand what the real objection of the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley is. He seems to think that I have sprung upon him a new idea at this late stage. Well, if the matter had been brought before the Council at its first hearing I should have been now out of court. It is no objection that the matter comes now for the first time in Council: in fact, the idea with which the adjournment of the discussion was applied was simply to make out a Bill as good as possible and then if there is nothing objectionable in the proposal to establish an Education Board, I do not think it suffers from the objection that it was not urged before. In the second place I beg to point out that this is only an enabling provision, that is to say, it does not demand that the Government must at once establish an Education Board, but it makes it possible for Government to establish an Education Board under whatever circumstances they think fit if it is found necessary to do so for the proper operation of this important measure. So I think there is no danger in arming ourselves with the power to create an effective body to control primary education. As regards the minimum number to which the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill has referred, I have gone on the line of the least possible resistance. I have already said that there are numerous interests whose case ought to be taken into consideration in connection with the Board. Therefore, I have fixed the minimum at 5. It may be that Government may have to fix it at 10 or 12, but that does not matter. The thing is, that if Government think that an Education Board would be an improvement, I think the amendment ought to be accepted. But, if Government think that it must go on in the old stereotyped fashion, subject to criticisms by the public, for which the skin of the Government seems to be too thick, they may stick to the old institution and allow the people to complain, to censure and to criticize. Well, it is entirely at the option of Government, but I do think it will be a real improvement ; if you really mean that progress under this important measure must be effective, well, in that case I believe it will be only wise to take steps to arm ourselves with power to make that measure effective. I have nothing further to add."

Babu A. C. Datta ; Bibu S. N. Ray ; Mr. Wordsworth.

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 7.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that at the end of sub-clause (5) of clause 2, the following be inserted, namely :—

"after inviting and considering the views of the municipalities."

He said :—

"My Lord, in support of this motion I do not propose to make any lengthy observation. All that I want to submit, my Lord, is this—that as the municipalities will provide for the elementary education of boys and girls, it is only proper that their views ought to be invited and consulted before any plan is finally settled."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry that I cannot accept the amendment. This would make the curriculum of primary education dependent on the views of the municipalities which would be hardly desirable. But the Education Department should draw up the curriculum after consulting public opinion generally. In reply to a recent question in the Council Government have promised to publish a revised curriculum for primary schools for public opinion."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

"My Lord, on behalf of Government I endorse what has been said by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill. The object of the hon'ble mover of the amendment is to secure that no system of primary education shall be drawn up and that no alteration in the existing system shall be made without consulting public opinion. That is quite reasonable and I trust that he will accept my assurance that this is done and will be done. Primary education in particular is necessarily a reflection of a wide public opinion as to the needs of the province, but the ultimate decision as to details of curricula and other arrangements must be retained in the hands of those who are able to equate demands and resources and who alone are able to say what the available teaching power can do. The system of primary education now in vogue in this province is being reconsidered and will shortly be published with proposals for modifications and amendment. I can assure the hon'ble member that we shall circulate our papers as widely as possible, not only among municipalities and District Boards, but also amongst all who may be able to assist us by opinion and criticism. But, for the reason stated by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill, that primary education is a far wider thing than primary education in municipalities, I cannot recommend the Council to accept the amendment, which would pledge us by legislative enactment to consult municipalities alone of authorities interested in the welfare of primary education."

Babu A. C. Datta ; Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said :—

“ My Lord, I am rather surprised that this very modest amendment should be opposed by the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill. All that this amendment seeks is that the views of the municipalities should be invited. It does not ask that the views of the municipalities will in any way be binding upon the local Government, nothing of that sort. I thought that it was very innocuous and a small proposal. After all, this Bill relates to that portion of the primary education which will be provided by the municipalities. With the larger question of primary education to be imparted by the district boards, by Government and other bodies, this Bill has nothing to do. I am thankful to the Hon'ble Mr Wordsworth for the kind assurance that the views of the public will be consulted. I do not quite see the objection in accepting the amendment, because, after all, my amendment does not go further than that.”

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 8.

The following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar, being covered by the debates on items Nos. 5 and 6, was held to be withdrawn :—

That after the words “ Education Department ” in line 4 of sub-clause (6) of clause 2 the words “ or the Education Board, if any,” be inserted.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 9.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that Part II of the Bill be omitted.

He said :—

“ My Lord, the amendment which I am going to submit for the consideration of this Council relates to the omission of Part II from the Bill. I may be permitted to submit that this amendment and other amendments regarding this Part II of which I have given notice have not been brought forward with any desire on my part to be an obstructionist to the smooth working of the Bill which has been introduced for the spread of primary education first within municipal areas. In this Part two things are aimed at—firstly, collection of some information regarding the state of primary education within municipal areas ; and, secondly, making over the charge of primary education to the Municipal Commissioners, not only for boys for whom compulsion is proposed to be introduced, but also for boys and girls who are likely to attend primary schools voluntarily. There is this difference—that in one case the girls and boys up to the age of 11 are to be thought of, but compulsion is limited to boys only up to the age of 10. Whatever may be the state of things in the Calcutta Corporation, I am rather anxious for the welfare of mufassal municipalities. So far as I know, it will be very difficult for the mufassal municipalities to take advantage of the provisions of this Bill if it be necessary for them at first to provide for the education of all persons likely to attend the primary schools voluntarily—I mean, not only for boys for whom compulsion is to be introduced, but also for girls and boys up to the age of 11. For this purpose, it is also provided that, if necessary, any sum that will be required for the purpose should be raised by taxation. So far as I can see, the primary object of this Bill is confined to the development of primary education. If that is so, the duty which will be imposed upon the municipalities and upon Government under this Bill will be of doing the necessary things for the education of boys and girls who are likely to attend voluntarily. The apprehension is that if this is to be done, the Bill when passed into law will probably be a dead-letter. Whatever information is necessary for the consideration of Government whenever any proposal comes for introducing the principle of compulsion that can be done under the provisions of clause 6. So if the voluntary portion, which it is not the primary object of this Bill to take charge of, be left as it is, I do not see why this Part II should be retained in this Bill. It is in this view and on account of my apprehension that in mufassal municipalities, where the majority are very poor, any taxation will tell heavily upon the resources of the poorer sections of the community, that I have proposed that this Part may be omitted altogether, both as regards the collection of necessary information and as regards voluntary primary education for all; and the arrangement that if Government is satisfied that the municipality is in a position to take charge of the entire thing and is able to provide the necessary funds, if necessary by taxation, then only compulsion is to be introduced, may also be omitted altogether. The Bill may be confined to the compulsory education only. Whatever information may be collected under the provision in clause 6, the special charge, as contemplated in the Bill, only may be limited to the compulsory portion—I mean the education of boys of the age of 6 to 10 only—and no further charge need be taken by the municipality. Government should not—as is proposed—make over, as preliminary to the introduction of the principle of compulsion, the entire charge of the primary education to the municipality. With these few words I submit the proposal for the consideration of your Excellency's Council."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. Arden Wood.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I have not been able to follow closely the arguments of my hon'ble friend; but I shall try to meet them as far as I can. The Bill was originally introduced as a permissive or adoptive measure by virtue of which a municipality could introduce compulsory primary education for all male children within its jurisdiction, subject, of course, to Government sanction. But, before a municipality could take recourse to compulsion, it would be required to make full provision for the primary education of all male children and Government would be quite competent to refuse sanction if they thought such provision to be inadequate.

The Bill as re-drafted introduces a stage before the introduction of compulsion during which expansion will have to be made in primary education by providing facilities for such education in the case of all male children who attend school voluntarily. This portion of the Bill has been inserted at the suggestion of the Corporation of Calcutta. The Select Committee having thought it proper to accept this provision, it would not be desirable to disregard them. I think these provisions in the Bill are worth a trial. For these reasons, I cannot accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood said:—

"My Lord, the object of the hon'ble member who has proposed this motion is to make the Bill under consideration what it was before it went to the Select Committee, that is, a Bill for the immediate introduction of compulsory education in Bengal.

I have listened carefully to the remarks made by the hon'ble member. I also paid attention to the remarks made by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar in objecting to the passing of the Bill on the 18th February, and I have read them since, but I have not been able to find in them any arguments that justify the position they have taken up. The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar has a sentimental feeling for compulsory education, as being likely to be a benefit to his ignorant fellow-countrymen, which is entirely honourable to him, but which has made him, I think, in this matter, an unpractical legislator. He objects to an education cess if primary education is not to be free as well as compulsory. It seems to me, if I may say so, a curiously inconsistent position to take up, to object to an education cess on the ground of the poverty of municipalities, and yet to agree to it if education is to be compulsory, and at the same time free; when to abolish fees would be to sacrifice Rs 17 lakhs. Those who are to be compelled to attend school are to be paid for out of public funds, but not one pie is to be given to help those whose zeal for education makes them attend school of their own accord, while attendance is still voluntary. The hon'ble member is also very suspicious of the powers proposed to be given to the Education Department, and he is dissatisfied with Government because they have not committed themselves to definite statements as to the contribution they will make towards the cost of extended primary education."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said :—

"Is the hon'ble member in order in referring to these matters?"

The President said :—

"I think the Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood is in order. The amendment asks for the omission of Part II of the Bill which opens up the whole question of compulsory and voluntary education; as far as I can see the argument of the Hon'ble Member is quite in order."

The Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood continuing said :—

"My Lord, I think that the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar's zeal for education might very appropriately have been associated with greater faith.

The Select Committee took the view that the immediate introduction of compulsory primary education was neither desirable nor possible: that, having in view the present provision of primary education, and its character, the transition to compulsory education must be by stages. Part II of the Bill, which the hon'ble member proposes to omit, will secure, first, that local authorities will be compelled to face the problem before them, and to realize what the provision of primary education means, financially and otherwise; and secondly, it will secure the provision of primary education for all children between six and eleven for whom it is voluntarily sought, if the Local Government consider the local authority able to provide it with such assistance as Government may be able to give. It is surely reasonable that before children are compelled to attend school, those who are to have the power of compelling them should be themselves required to make an adequate provision of schools and teachers for those who are willing to attend school without compulsion. In thus transforming the Bill, as has been said by way of a grievance, 'almost beyond recognition,' the Select Committee was amply justified by the most authoritative and weighty of the opinions on the Bill circulated to Members of Council. We were told in those opinions that only a third of the total number of boys between the ages of six and ten in Bengal were receiving elementary instruction; that while in municipalities there was over-abundance of schools, leading to competition and inefficiency, in rural areas there was a deficiency of schools; that primary schools were miserably housed, nominally equipped, and inefficiently and insufficiently staffed; that the number of elementary schools was so small in proportion to population that compulsion would be a farce; that education should not be made compulsory in any area (municipal or non-municipal) until Government were satisfied that elementary schools had actually been established in sufficient numbers; that there were not nearly enough schools in existence at present to admit of a jump being made to wholesale compulsory education; and that any attempt to introduce compulsion without preparing the ground would only result in the perpetuation of the present defective system; and we were also told, this time by the Calcutta University, that the compulsory provision of suitable schools by local bodies has always preceded compulsory attendance at schools. These opinions undoubtedly justified the Select Committee in considering that if they left the Bill as it was originally presented to Council it would be an empty Bill. The Hon'ble the Director of Public Instruction in his opinion on the Bill remarked that the ignorance of the masses is being steadily broken down by the accumulating influence of thousands of inefficient schools. It is satisfactory to find that he sees ground for hope even in this state of things, but he would admit, I think, that what he describes is, after all, only guerilla warfare against ignorance—irregular and unscientific. If the Bill before the Council is to be useful it must help to substitute scientific warfare for unscientific warfare; there must be an organized as well as a general advance. I think it is certain that the Bill as it was would have rather tended to produce educational anarchy. The Select Committee have tried, by inserting Part II of the Bill, to make organized progress possible. They have introduced the necessary intermediate stage that was wanting in the original Bill, the stage in which effort must be concentrated on providing sufficient schools of a new type for those children who will attend school voluntarily. It is the stage in which a really effective educational machinery has to be built up, which can be multiplied and extended as required. It is the stage in which a body of teachers who know what their work is, and can do it, will have to be brought into existence.

Again, it is certain that the immediate introduction of compulsory education would be impossible for financial reasons. An estimate has been made of the cost of introducing compulsory education in Calcutta. The cost, on the same scale of expenditure, of introducing it in the municipality of which the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill is the Chairman, would be some Rs. 37,000 per annum, about the present total income of the municipality. Even taking the more moderate scale of expenditure, which is certainly well under the mark, which has been adopted in several of the estimates given in the printed opinions, the South Suburban Municipality would have to spend some Rs. 11,700 per annum upon primary education as against its present expenditure of Rs. 900. In another municipality the cost of compulsory education calculated on the same scale would mean that, even if Government met half the cost, the rates would have to be increased by 33 per cent. It is obvious that the many municipalities that expressed themselves enthusiastically in favour of compulsory education did not in the least realize what the provisions of the Bill amounted to. For financial reasons only, the Bill, as originally drafted, was bound to be a dead-letter if passed into law.

The retention of Part II of the Bill is of great importance for another reason. I said, in speaking on the Bill on a previous occasion, that it was by no means yet certain what is the best form of elementary education. We are, I hope, feeling our way towards it, and it would, therefore, be a fatal mistake if we introduced compulsory primary education in Bengal now, for, in doing so, we should almost inevitably stereotype the existing form of primary education, which is, in its essence, literary, and which has the great disadvantage, remarked upon by so many of those who contributed opinions on the Bill, of tending to turn boys away from their ancestral occupations.

Babu A. C. Datta.

Education has to play a great part in making possible an improvement in the material condition of the masses of the people, who are, and will remain, cultivators and artizans. I feel sure that, with this end in view, elementary education must, in future, be mainly based upon work done in the school garden, and in the manual training room and drawing class, rather than on the work done in the ordinary class room where only the three 'R's' are mechanically taught by untrained and ill-educated teachers. The whole bias of elementary education has to be changed.

The retention of Part II of the Bill will mean, I hope, a gradual and steady advance towards the desired goal of compulsory education, and will make it eventually possible for education to be compulsory for all boys between the ages of 6 and 10. But does anybody suppose that if compulsory education is in any sense a success it is going to stop at the age of ten? A boy of ten is about half-way through his education, as elementary education is tending to be in other countries. And with a more liberal view of what elementary education should be, and the super addition to it of vocational education, we may be quite sure that the future Minister of Education will have to face and provide for a vastly increased expenditure upon it. For this reason again it is desirable that we should act with deliberation in this business, making it our aim to secure efficiency and not merely a showy rapidity of educational advance.

I should like to ask the hon'ble member who has proposed the omission of Part II of the Bill in whose interests he is proposing it. Does he think he is proposing it in the interests of those whom this Bill seeks to benefit: the children we desire to help? If he does, I do not agree with him. I think he is fighting against them instead of for them, and I think that with clearer vision he would come to hold the same opinion."

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta said:—

"My Lord, the introduction of compulsory education was the object of the Bill as originally presented to the Council. But the Select Committee have materially modified not only the form but also the intention of the Bill by the introduction of provisions relating to voluntary primary education. Part II may be described as an interpolation made against the spirit of the original Bill. It is based on the assumption that there are few municipalities in Bengal which are now in a position to contemplate the introduction of compulsion. Compulsion was the essence of the reform which the Bill was intended to introduce. The principle of compulsion has no doubt been recognized in the Bill, but it is a half-hearted recognition lacking in anything like enthusiasm and spontaneity. The Select Committee have emphasized the supreme importance and efficacy of the voluntary system and set up the compulsory system as an ideal more or less remote. Compulsion in the first instance has not only been discountenanced but practically prohibited. The whole Bill may be described as a code of instructions issued to the municipalities as to their duties in the matter of mass education within the municipal areas. Now, the first and foremost instruction given in Parts II and III is to give a further trial to the voluntary system. The original Bill wanted compulsion, but Part II cries 'halt' to the municipalities and says to them: 'Don't think of compulsion at present. Concentrate your energies and resources upon the voluntary system. You must first carry out the orders of the Education Department regarding building, furniture and staff of the primary schools under the existing system. When you have done all that then and not till then are you to contemplate the adoption of compulsion'. The merits and demerits of the compulsory and voluntary systems of primary education—that is an old controversy and both the Government and the people have said their last word upon that controversy. It is now about ten years ago that Mr. Gokhale introduced his Primary Education Bill in the Imperial Council, and while opposing the Bill the Government suggested that Bills might and should be introduced in local Councils for the introduction of compulsion. Accordingly Bills have been introduced in the different provinces and the system of compulsion adapted. The matter is so absolutely uncontroversial that we find that in the Punjab the initiative has been taken by the Government itself and a Government Bill has been introduced in the Legislative Council for that province. My Lord, it is only here in Bengal, the most advanced province in the whole of the Indian continent, that the old controversy as to voluntary and compulsory systems has been revived. We thought it was too late in the day to raise this controversy, we thought the principle of compulsion had been adapted once and for all and that all that was necessary was to give a practical shape to it and to put it on a practical basis. But ours is a land of surprises and Part II is a great surprise sprung upon the country.

The whole question, my Lord, is how to attract those boys to schools who now keep away. What is the reason for the failure of the guardians to send their children to school? The reason is two-fold which the guardians sustain if they have to send their children to the schools rather than to the fields and factories? They feel that they can ill-afford to forego the little earnings of the children and their disinclination is intensified when they find that over and above this negative loss they will have to incur positive loss in the shape of fees and other expenses.

The question, therefore, arises how to overcome this disinclination? Now, the positive loss can only be met by making elementary instruction free. But free education is not necessary when children attend school voluntarily. It is necessary only when boys are compelled to come to school. So it is absolutely meaningless to speak of the positive loss as a retarding cause, as long as the voluntary system continues. There remains, therefore, only one reason which we have got to consider, namely, the disinclination of people to send children to school because they are eager to obtain what advantage they can from their children's earnings. Now, the question is, what is the real remedy to get over this difficulty. There can be only one answer to this question, and that is compulsion. If we think it is hard to poor people to deprive them of what relief the small earnings of their children bring them, then the matter ends there and we should not think or speak of universal mass education. If, on the other hand, we care at all to carry elementary education at least to that fraction of His Gracious Majesty's subjects who live in towns and municipalities in this country, then the only solution is the introduction of compulsion. Some people think that it is not the people's poverty but their indifference to the moral and intellectual welfare of their children which is the real explanation for their failure to send them to school. But I should think this indifference is mostly due to nothing but poverty. In any case this indifference cannot be got over except by compulsion. What is the remedy provided by Part II of the Bill before us? It proposes to empower the local Government to insist upon the municipalities to provide the necessary school accommodation, staff and equipments for all children between 6 and 11 years of age likely to attend primary schools voluntarily and to assume direct management and control of all such schools and gives power to them to levy taxation if the municipal funds are insufficient. But it is very difficult to understand how these provisions for voluntary education will solve the problem of educating those children who will not attend school voluntarily and whose parents will not send them to school voluntarily? For, we must not lose sight of the real problem we have got to tackle, namely, how to overcome the disinclination of those people who do not send their children to school. You may impose an education cess and augment the resources of the municipalities, but what will be achieved thereby? With increased funds the municipalities may set up more schools and better schools. But the system being voluntary, how will this ensure the attendance of the wards of unwilling guardians? Is there any reason to think that poor and ignorant people do not send their children to school because the houses are not comfortable or the teachers are not brilliant? Mr. Richey thinks that inefficiency of schools is one of the main retarding causes. But I speak with knowledge when I say that there is absolutely no justification for such a conclusion. Then, it is said in certain quarters, multiply schools and children will attend in large numbers. There is certainly wisdom in this advice, but the remedy will not go far enough in overcoming the disinclination of those unwilling guardians whose wards do not go to school, not because there are no schools to go to, but because the boys are expected to help them at times of sowing, weeding and reaping, to tend cattle, do jobs about the house or add to the family earnings in various ways. Various devices have been adapted in various provinces to enable the son of the agriculturist and the labourer to help in the fields and yet continue his education, but none has been particularly successful. It is said that the whole problem is fraught with difficulties and doubts. Compulsion may be a drastic remedy, but it is the only effectual one. My contention is that mere multiplication of schools will not take us appreciably nearer the goal. This is not a matter of speculation, but my contention is supported by facts and figures. In the Punjab the number of new schools opened in the quinquennium 1912-17 was six times that of those opened in the preceding period; but the increase of pupils was only double that of the preceding period. I cannot in this connection emphasize too much the difference between rural and municipal areas. In the rural areas the opening of new schools will certainly lead to an instantaneous and remarkable increase of pupils. But things are quite different in towns and municipalities where the lower classes of high English schools and middle English and middle vernacular schools serve the purpose of primary schools. I should think there are not many municipalities with respect to which it can be said that it is want of schools which stand in the way of the expansion of primary education. Some years ago it was estimated that 3·2 per cent. of the ordinary income of our municipalities was sufficient for the elementary instruction of half the boys of school-going age who are likely to attend school voluntarily. I find that in 1916-17, 88 out of 113 municipalities came up to this standard and that 42 municipalities spent more than 5 per cent. of their income on primary schools. So that, taking the province as a whole, the voluntary system may fairly be said to have yielded as much result as can be expected from it. I am, of course, speaking of municipalities. If, however, the system is capable of yielding further result, and if application of further funds will lead to extension of elementary education, even on a voluntary basis, that can be accomplished by insisting on the municipalities to loyally follow the very wholesome principle laid down by the Government of India in reviewing the recommendations of the Decentralization Commission that expenditure on secondary education should not be incurred by municipalities until the requirements of primary education are fully met. But the fact remains that the voluntary system of primary education has not solved the problem of mass education in any civilized country. It won't do to taunt at the Indians for their indifference to the intellectual welfare of their children. Even in England primary education could not make sufficient progress without compulsion in spite of her civilization and wealth. In 1870 Mr. Gladstone remarked: 'I think it is a scandal and a shame to the country (England) that in the midst of our advanced civilization and enormous wealth we should at this time of day be obliged to entertain the principle of compulsion.'

It passes my comprehension, my Lord, why we in Bengal should have greater faith in the voluntary system than the people of other countries and other provinces. I have great pleasure, my Lord, in supporting the amendment of my friend Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I do not quite follow the proposal of the hon'ble mover. He wants to delete Part II of the Bill. That part originally dealt with compulsion, but it has been recast mainly on the suggestion of the Corporation of Calcutta. What the Corporation suggested was this: the introduction of compulsory primary education should be obtained step by step. That is to say, it should be seen first whether there is an adequate provision for voluntary education and whether the municipalities concerned are in a position to provide accommodation for their pupils who are anxious to go forward voluntarily, and if that proves to be the case, then to go in for compulsory primary education. I think, my Lord, that all of us here have got the same object in view, and that is, the introduction and extension of primary education in Bengal. But, I think, that this should be gradually achieved. There are, however, certain defects in Part II. The Corporation, while recommending that a statement on the lines suggested in clause 3 (school accommodation, staff, etc.), should be submitted by the municipality, suggested that the statement should be prepared on the assumption that the local Government contributed towards voluntary primary education an amount not less than the amount raised or set apart by the municipality from its own resources for expenditure on primary education—and not less than double the amount raised or set apart by the municipality for compulsory primary education. The next suggestion of the Corporation was that the Board of Education, the formation of which they suggested after receipt of the statement and after considering the condition of each municipality, would be competent to issue an order to any municipality to provide the necessary school accommodation, staff, etc., and to undertake the complete maintenance and control of primary education on a voluntary basis, to be carried out by successive stages. Then, the Corporation touched upon the compulsory form of primary education. In this Bill, although the suggestion of the Corporation has been partially accepted, the principal suggestion as regards the provision to be made by Government has not been accepted. And I am afraid that if it is not accepted the Bill will be of no effect. Now, my Lord, after receipt of this statement and after determining the amount to be paid by Government the local Government may, after satisfying itself, direct the Commissioners to provide the necessary school accommodation. Now, suppose after such an order is passed on a municipality it is found that the receipts from the education cess are not available and the Government contribution is also not adequate—then what will happen? Of course, so long as your Excellency is at the head of the Government and Mr. O'Malley at the head of the department, there is no fear. But, supposing the Government is not inclined to afford that assistance to the municipality which the municipality may consider necessary in order to supplement their resources, then I am afraid the Bill will be inoperative.

I am at the same time afraid that I cannot support the motion for deleting Part II altogether. Having regard to the present state of the country, I think it is necessary to help the municipalities in attaining the object of this Bill and I also think that Government have got a responsibility in the matter. They should see that the municipalities do make sufficient provision for school accommodation, etc., in order that they may be able gradually to introduce the compulsory system. In my opinion Part II of the Bill is necessary, as it lays down the terms of introduction of the compulsory education and as otherwise, nothing will be done in case the municipalities refuse to levy an education cess and Government refuse to make an adequate grant."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I wish to make only one observation. It seems to me that there is some misapprehension both in this Council as well as outside the Council as regards the attitude of some of us, and this misapprehension to my mind is confirmed by what has fallen from the Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood. Nobody denies that the successive stages provided for any reform must be accepted as salutary. What some of us have been contending throughout is this—not that we are opposed either to an education cess or to the spread of primary education but we would rather go a step further and say that if an education cess is to be levied by all means it should be levied, but make primary education compulsory and free so that the Act may be fully effective. That is our position. The Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood has told us that without these successive stages there may be altogether a failure of primary education in this country. There seems to be some mistake on this point. Some of us belong to the holy order of the Calcutta Corporation, some do not and those who receive inspiration from the Calcutta Corporation which is responsible for this change in the Bill seem to think that that is the be-all and end-all of all devices. But the condition of Calcutta is perfectly different from the condition of municipalities in the mufassal, particularly as regards primary education. I am bold enough to say that primary education has made much greater strides in the mufassal municipalities than in Calcutta. There is scarcely a municipality in Bengal where the preliminary stage has not been fully complied with. There are large numbers of primary schools in municipalities where they spend 3 to 6 per cent. of their income annually without any taxation for the purpose of primary education and the mufassal municipalities are not so backward as far as the arrangements for primary education are concerned as Calcutta. So what may be considered as very important for Calcutta for the spread of primary education is not necessarily what ought to be done for the mufassal municipalities. I heard of the state of the poor progress made in this metropolis as regards primary education and in fact I was surprised to hear that its progress was so slow and so unsound as compared with the progress made in regard to primary education in the mufassal municipalities. Of course the provision in Part II is perfectly good and legitimate as far as the board's jurisdiction is concerned, but I do think that as regards the municipalities where the Act will have its first operation, Part II will have very little application. My friends have told your Excellency that there are primary classes in almost all the schools, and in every municipality there are not less than half a dozen primary schools excepting the high schools, the middle English schools and the middle vernacular schools which also contain primary classes; so that there is no dearth of schools or of accommodation—of course, they are not palatial. I heard to my great relief from my hon'ble friend Mr. Wordsworth that he is not very much in love with very ostentatious display of school buildings and school furniture. If that is so, I think, that Part II, carrying with it an education cess will have very little encouragement for the mufassal municipalities. It may have much encouragement for Calcutta, and it may be a very good incentive for the rural areas outside local municipalities. So that our attitude is not that we are opposed to primary education nor to the education cess, but what we mean is that if we want really to make a substantive progress in primary education within municipalities outside Calcutta it ought to be compulsory. That is the main position and, in fact, we ought not to be misunderstood in this respect."

Sir D. P. Sarbadhikari.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

“ My Lord, I happen to belong to the ‘ holy order ’ as it has been put, of the Calcutta Corporation and to other ‘ holy orders ’. I am reminded by my friend Sir Rajendra Mukerjee that my belonging to the Corporation order is of recent days. My friend forgets that as one of the Twenty-eight, whose resignation led and will still further lead to municipal improvement. I used to belong to that order years ago ; and in spite of the intermediate and obligatory lapse, I have in spirit always belonged to it. I cannot, however, subscribe to the proposition that what the municipality of Calcutta has put forward is likely to put off real compulsion to any appreciable extent. If Part III of the Bill was not a part of the Bill and Part II stood by itself, much of the criticism that has been levelled towards it would have been intelligible. What does Part II of the Bill—for which the Corporation has made itself responsible—really amount to? It is something like a buffer—and insists that an educational survey be made in the first instance to find out the position as well as the resources and requirements. It also seeks to find out exactly how and when Part III, which deals with compulsion, can advantageously be introduced. That is all that Part II of the Bill aims at and its object cannot possibly be to put off the evil day ; and the Council will be ill-advised in leaving out so healthy a provision.

“ My Lord, to have a mere paper provision for compulsion and not to be compelled to provide for that compulsion would be a strange situation for which all really interested in the educational welfare of the country would be truly sorry. Can any of my friends from the mufassal say that any primary schools or lower classes in higher or middle schools that take the place of primary schools are empty or nearly so? Is it the case that the schools that have been established are starved for want of students? If that was the case and there was no doubt or misgiving on the score of requirements or resources the case for compulsion would be immediate, and the necessity for Part II of the Bill would disappear. My Lord, whether in the higher stage, or in the University stage or the middle or primary stage there is not a school or patsala all over the whole country that cannot be filled twice over. The number of students that has to be turned away from the doors of our schools and colleges every year is admittedly large and to talk specially of compulsion without providing in the first instance for those willing to attend without any compulsion is, to say the least of it, neither honest nor businesslike. You would be unwarrantably and needlessly weakening the whole situation. That being the situation, our first care should be to provide for those who are ready to go to school, and when that is done and you know where you are going to put those who do require compulsion, to take steps for compulsion, which ought to come as early as possible. To take to compulsion where it is not yet required is to try to have a mere paper provision when we have not the means of compelling that compulsion.

My Lord, I do not think that the Hon'ble Mr. Majumdar or anyone will charge me with advocating the necessity of having palaces for housing our schools. The charge against me so long has been that I do not believe in the superabundance of brick and mortar in connection with education, but am fully prepared to accept schemes of work such as the Satyabadi School in Orissa follows. None has tried to stand out for that ideal more than myself. I believe that sometimes beneath the outstretching branches of a tree or in the courtyard of a family dwelling-house, where our patsalas used to meet a school can be well conducted. I have seen illustrations of this in many parts of Bengal and I fully believe that, without overmuch brick and mortar, it would be possible to have excellent educational institutions. But the most important matter is the question of good teachers and teachers' pay and one has to consider various other matters connected with it which could be best solved by proceeding slowly, and that process of slow but steady progress, I think, have the full co-operation of the people whose needs we are trying to meet. Let us in the first instance provide schools which could be filled without having recourse to compulsion. It is not the 'holy order' of the Corporation of Calcutta alone that was responsible for the outrageous provision that finds place in Part II of the Bill. The Senate of the Calcutta University, whose holiness will, I hope, be left unimpaired, may grow more in the skilful hands of our hon'ble colleague, Sir Nil Ratan Sirkar, is somewhat of the same opinion. The Hon'ble Mr. Arden Wood has already referred to it. I might read to the Council the full text of their opinion. This is what they say: 'We feel, however, that before compulsion is introduced, education should be made free.' They further say: 'We hope that local bodies here will of their own good will take upon themselves the responsibility of providing an adequate number of schools for all the children residing within these areas.' That is the first proposition which Part II of the Bill seeks to provide. When all that is possible and what is necessary in the shape of complying with the requirements of Part II is forthcoming, Part III comes in almost automatically. The municipalities ought not to be called upon to take more burden upon themselves than they can adequately bear without a thorough understanding of the situation. We have been told of the mufassal municipalities and their enormous possibilities. Only a few days ago I was present at Dinajpur where a very large public meeting was held to consider this question. After going through the facts it was found that even if Government were prepared to pay Rs. 10,000, but the municipality could ill-afford to pay as much to provide for the number of children the municipality had of the school-going age. There may, of course, be some municipalities which may be fortunate enough to come up to the standard laid down by Mr. Majundar and after the survey these will take up the work the soonest, but we know of municipalities where the question will be very acute and without properly considering their resources, to say at once that Part III should come into operation is at least short-sighted and not favourable to the point of view which I am sure is in the minds of all of us. I would emphasize the supreme necessity of having compulsion at the end, and the surest and most effective way is provided by Part II. I do not, therefore, understand the object of omitting it and hope that the plea for this omission will not prevail."

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

My Lord, I have tried to explain in the beginning that my object is that compulsion and taxation should go hand in hand: if the compulsory primary education is to be introduced, of course, the taxation will be justifiable. If that is not done, I believe it will rather hamper the progress of education and the poorer municipalities will not be in a position to come forward at first to provide for the education on a voluntary basis and to assess any tax for meeting the expenses for that and then and then only to come for compulsion. It is not my intention that we should not satisfy Government first as to what is necessary for the spread of primary education and then to apply for compulsory education, but my amendment is that we should not think of assessing any tax before we are prepared to introduce compulsory primary education. I do not mean to say that we do not care whether all children up to a certain age are educated or not, but what I want to say is that when the compulsory education scheme contemplates a provision of education of boys up to the age of 6 to 10 only, in that case if we are to satisfy Government by a preliminary survey of educational requirements, we should confine our attention to that portion only. It is in that view that I think that Part II is not at all necessary, for the scope of the Bill is to deal with compulsory primary education only, and if we are to introduce it, and if we are to see that up to the age of 10 all boys are educated we should confine our attention to that portion only; and if they mean to prosecute their studies further they will do it themselves on a voluntary basis or in any other way that may be thought advisable to the guardians and themselves. It is not necessary for me to say more and I submit my amendment for the consideration of your Excellency's Council."

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 10.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that sub-clause (a) (i) of clause 3 be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, my next item is, as I have explained already, that if any survey is to be made, it may be made for those for whom compulsory education is to be provided. It is not necessary to make a survey of the existing state of primary education in the municipalities. It is desirable no doubt for Government to see that before introducing the principle of compulsion it should be seen that what is required is being done, but as the scope of the Bill is to deal with compulsory primary education, it is not necessary, in making the survey, to go into the requirements of all children both boys and girls for whom it is not intended to introduce the principle of compulsion. I may be permitted to deal with the proposals contained in items 10, 11, 12 and 15 because the main idea is the elimination of those for whom the compulsion is not intended. If that is accepted the other amendments will be simply incidentally necessary. If that principle is not accepted then it is not necessary to move them separately."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose this amendment for the reasons already given by me in opposing my friend's other amendment."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have tried to follow my hon'ble friend but I do not quite understand what useful purpose will be served by omitting clause 3(a). If a statement is to be prepared and submitted to the local Government it is stated here that it would include the number of children not being less than 6 or more than 11 years of age within the municipality. I do not understand why my friend wants to omit it. Does he mean to say that the term 'children' includes boys and girls and that girls ought to be excluded from the statement. I cannot quite follow it. This is a statement which ought to be the necessary basis of information before compulsory primary education is introduced, and I do not quite follow my friend what he means by proposing that the sub-clause should be omitted."

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 11.

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri moved that sub-clause (c) (i) of clause 3 be omitted.

That sub-clause (e) of clause 3 be omitted.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 13.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that before the word "receipts" in line 2 of sub-clause (f) of clause 3 the word "probable" be inserted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is merely a verbal amendment designed to clear up the meaning of the section. When the statement under section 3 will have to be submitted, the levying of an education cess will be an uncertain future event. It is not the intention of the framers of the Bill that such a cess will be levied in every case before compulsion can be introduced. Possibly the misapprehension that the Bill is designed to be a measure of taxation should be avoided and therefore I think, my Lord, that the word 'probable' would make our intention clear. It would not break my heart if it is not accepted."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I accept the amendment of my hon'ble friend."

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 14.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after the word "cess" in line 3 of sub-clause (f) of clause 3 the words "that may in future be levied" be inserted.

"My Lord, this is also merely a verbal amendment and I should be glad if it is accepted."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 18.

The following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

That the words "after complying with the directions of the Local Government under section 4" in lines 1 and 2 of sub-clause (I) of clause 6 be omitted.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 19.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that after the words "Local Government" in line 1 of sub-clause (2) of clause 6 the words "after considering the application and after determining the financial assistance from the Government which may be necessary to provide for compulsory primary education within the municipality, shall", be inserted, and the word "shall" in line 3 of this sub-clause be omitted.

He said :—

"My Lord, this is not merely a verbal amendment. In considering this amendment I would invite the attention of the Council to the wording of clause 4. In case of primary education on voluntary basis, it has been said that after considering the statement of the municipalities concerned and after determining the amount of financial assistance from the Government which may be necessary Government will grant such permission with reference to voluntary education. Now here in clause 6 we have to consider a similar provision with regard to compulsory primary education, and I wish to have it added that the same provision which we have in clause 4 should be repeated in clause 6 : that is to say, as in the case of voluntary education, Government will have to determine the amount of financial assistance which it can render, so in the case of compulsory education it shall have to do the same thing. It may be argued that Government has already under clause 4 determined the financial assistance, so that it is no longer necessary to repeat it in clause 6. I think that is not exactly the correct position, for it must go without saying that when Government comes forward, although Government has not committed itself to any financial assistance, as we know from the heated debate on the last occasion on this measure, yet I am more than confident, as every hon'ble member of this Council is confident, that Government for its own credit will surely come forward with some assistance, and some substantial assistance, for the help of primary education. Although it has not committed itself to any definite proportion, I am sure that simply for its own reputation, if not for anything else, it will make a substantial contribution. Now that contribution will at once be determined in the case of voluntary education under clause 4, but in case of compulsory education I am fully convinced that the cost of compulsory primary education will be much larger than that required for voluntary education and Government is sure to contribute more for compulsory primary education than for education on a voluntary basis. Therefore I think it is necessary to repeat in clause 6 that Government after determining the financial assistance that may be necessary for compulsory primary education shall grant the application. In the first case under clause 4 it will consider what amount of contribution is necessary for primary education on a voluntary system and in the next case in Part II when dealing with an application under clause 6 Government will have again to consider what contribution it ought to make for making education compulsory and therefore the repetition of 'after determining the financial assistance, etc.,' is not a merely verbal one. I think it ought to be repeated there."

Babu S. N. Ray; Mr. O'Malley; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I have great pleasure in accepting this amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

"My Lord, Government is prepared to accept this amendment."

The motion was put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 20.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that at the end of clause 7 the following be added, namely :—

"Provided also that the Committee shall always include a number of Muhammadan members whose proportion to the total number of members on the Committee shall not be less than the proportion of Muhammadans to the total population in the municipality".

He said :—

"My Lord, the question of communal representation whether it be on the local governing bodies or the school committees is no doubt an evil, but circumstances as we are in at present it is a necessary evil, and in the interest of the Muhammadan community I put forward this amendment for the consideration of your Excellency's Government and the Hon'ble Members of this Council."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I have to oppose this amendment. I cannot understand why my friend the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem who is always wide awake should in this matter be a Rip Van Winkle. It seems that this Bill is before the Council for more than a year and at the last stage of the Bill he brings forward an amendment which we had not time to consider in the Select Committee. The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Huq was in the Select Committee and probably there is no greater exponent of the views of the Muhammadan community than my friend, but he never suggested any such proposal in the Select Committee. Now I think it is too late in the day to make any such suggestions here. When the Bill was before the Council only the other day no amendment of this nature was brought forward by any of the Muhammadan members here. This amendment introduces a communal consideration which is unnecessary and unwarranted, and as I have said the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq never suggested any such representation. Supposing the Commissioners looked after the schools themselves and there was no provision for school committees, no such communal question would arise because the existing municipal constitution does not recognise communal representation. Unless and until communal representation is recognised in municipalities this principle should not be introduced in a lesser body subordinate to and appointed by them. Moreover, primary education is a matter in which communal questions rarely arise. For these reasons, my Lord, I oppose this amendment."

Babu A. C. Mazumdar ; Maulvi A. Kasem.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I am really very sorry to have to say that this is an impossible proposal. Of course the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem is perfectly right in guarding the interests of his community in season and out of season, but here is a proposal which is absolutely impracticable. I daresay my hon'ble friend surely understands that the school committee will not be a large body like the Bengal Legislative Council, but it will be a small working committee which I do not think in any case will consist more than half-a-dozen members. You must have in the first place as we have laid down that the Deputy Inspector or the Sub-Inspector must be a member of it, and that is quite right, and then at least one of the Commissioners must also be there, and, thirdly, you have laid down that at least two members outside the Corporation must be on it : so that you may have one or two members more at most. If there be five members you will have only one left. I leave it to my hon'ble friend who is a watchful guardian of his communal interest to find out the arithmetical proportion of the percentage to be worked out in an area where the Muhammadan population is 60 per cent. and the Hindu population is 40 per cent., and there is only one vacancy. I do not know how to work out this proportion without dissecting the member. In the second place what does my hon'ble friend mean? He knows that I have bestowed my thought upon all questions affecting my Muhammadan brethren and I may tell him that this is a case of pound, shilling and pence and not merely of numerical strength. Now in a municipality where Rs. 2,000 have to be raised by education cess the Muhammadans will probably contribute not more than Rs. 200. If he goes upon numerical strength what becomes of the financial position. If we are only to consider the numerical strength of a population in order to decide the number of the controlling body, then cannot the other side also say that as we are going to pay for the piper why should we not command the tune. So that these little things ought not to go in the minds of persons wholly interested in the broad welfare of the country in considering the constitution of the school committee. It is an impossible amendment and in the second place it is unfair because you cannot go simply upon a numerical strength and you have also to consider the financial side."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I am really surprised and I did not expect that the amendment which I have just moved would extort the reply that has been given to it. In the first place my hon'ble friend, the member in charge of the Bill, has said that we have not drawn attention to this side of the question so long, that is, as long as the Bill was before the Council and that in the Select Committee the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq did not bring it to notice. I admit, my Lord, that I took no action in this matter and I also admit that my friend, Maulvi Fazl-ul-Huq, has been also guilty of a little negligence, but that is absolutely no reason why the interests of the community which we represent in this Council should be overlooked. From the opinions received from many of the Muhammadan Associations it appears that some of them have no doubt stated that they want Muhammadan representation and that Muhammadan interests should be safeguarded. The Hon'ble Babu S. N. Ray has said that this question of communal representation cannot be introduced at this stage unless and until communal representation is recognised in municipalities. My Lord, I beg to submit that we the Musalmans have asked for a communal representation on municipalities and District Boards and to some extent your Excellency's Government has also recognised our demand. When the Bengal Local Self-Government Act and the Municipal Act were passed it was presumed that Muhammadan interests would be safeguarded by Government appointments, but recent events have shown that that has not been done always in the majority of cases. So your Excellency's Government had to issue a resolution directing Government officials in making their recommendations for Government appointments to keep in view the question of Muhammadan representation, and I hope, my Lord, that that resolution is given effect to. There have been many controversies over this matter, and as regards the remark made by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar that not only the numerical strength but the financial question should also be taken into consideration, if I am assured that the second resolution of which I have given notice is accepted by the hon'ble member in charge, I am quite prepared to withdraw this amendment. I certainly admit, my Lord, that there is a good deal of justification in the argument that the representation should not only be on the basis of population but as well as on the basis of taxation. What I want to do is that Muhammadans would have a fair representation on school committees, and I do it not only on sentimental grounds but on the ground of necessity as well. We have found to our cost whether it is in a municipality or a District Board that simply owing to the absence of Muhammadan members or an adequate number of Muhammadans, Muhammadan interests have suffered. That has been done, and there is no denying the fact. I do not mean to say that non-Musalman members of the school committees or other local committees do anything deliberately wrong, but they overlook Muhammadan interests unconsciously, and my friend and myself have put forward demands times without number that in all administrative questions wherever a resolution has been put forward we have suggested that a committee of officials and non-officials be appointed simply because the non-official point of view should be pressed before the committee. For that reason I want that Muhammadans should be sufficiently and well represented on all these committees in order to bring forward Muhammadan interests and the views of the Muhammadan community on these questions, and therefore I hope and trust that as this amendment does not refer to financial question, I will be justified in pressing it. I myself admit the justification, but I hope that the second amendment will be accepted by the Council. I beg to withdraw the amendment."

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The motion was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 21.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved that at the end of clause 7 the following be added, namely :—

"Provided also that the Committee shall always include an adequate number of Muhammadan members."

Babu S. N. Ray; Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment. These matters may be safely left to the Local Government which may either frame rules to secure communal interests, if any, or issue general instructions to secure the object.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

“ My Lord, much against my will I wish to say a few words on this amendment. The amendment as it has been worded only suggests that an adequate number of the members should be Muhammadans. The word ‘adequate’ is so beautifully vague that I do not think that my hon'ble friend in charge of the Bill can possibly take any objection to it, at least on any ground which I can at the present moment conceive. I do not think he wants to take up the position that there may be questions affecting the Muhammadan community as to which Muhammadan members can throw better light than members belonging to other communities and yet as certain number of Muhammadan members should not be associated in the deliberations of the committee. If he does not take up that position, I do not see how and on what reasons he can object to an amendment of such an innocuous character. He has suggested that the matter may be left to Government to be dealt with by rules. We object to that on principle. If I remember aright, on the last occasion when this Bill came up for consideration, we objected that important matters of principle should be included in the provisions of the Bill and not left to be dealt with by rules to be framed by the Local Government, and that is the principle we have been fighting for. I do not understand how in a matter affecting the interests of such a large section in this Presidency, when we want to make some definite statutory provision we should be asked to settle this matter by means of rules. Why cannot the Act itself provide for some statutory powers to be vested in the committee, so that the committee might not merely represent a particular section or various sections that go to make up the great mass of the people? I cannot understand, my Lord, why this matter should be left to be regulated by the rules to be framed by the Local Government.

Before I sit down I would like the hon'ble member in charge of the Bill to look at this matter from the point of view from which we are looking at it. We are all working towards a common object, and there can be no doubt that we are all anxious that the administration of this Bill should be rendered as successful as possible, and in order to do so we should try to remove all possible causes of friction. We need not speculate whether there is any possibility at any future date of any questions coming up as to which first-hand knowledge of the community directly affected might be of use in the deliberations of the committee. It is for meeting a possible emergency that we want it to be statutorily provided that an adequate number of Muhammadans should be represented on the school committee. I would ask my friend to consider that if he sets his face against a proposition of this character, an impression will be created outside the Council that those who are in charge of the Bill have not given adequate consideration to the interests of a community which forms the majority of the population in the Presidency—interests which deserve consideration at the hands of those who are in charge of an important measure like this. With a view to avoid any misconception of this kind the hon'ble member in charge should accept the amendment. There could be no practical difficulties in carrying out this provision; otherwise a wrong idea would be created in the minds of the people outside this Council. Therefore I submit that on grounds of prudence, expediency and good feeling between all sections of the people, my hon'ble friend would reconsider the position and accept this proposition.

*Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Maulvi Abul Kasem ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar ;
The President.*

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, I sympathise with the observations that have fallen from the last speaker, but in considering the matter dispassionately I find certain difficulties. Suppose this motion is carried and we are committed to have certain number of Muhammadan members in the school committee. What will happen if there are no Muhammadan residents in a municipality or if there are, they are not fit or willing to serve in the committee? What are we to do in such cases? These difficulties may arise. I am moreover surprised that such a suggestion should come from those who profess themselves to be ardent Home Rulers. It seems they have no confidence in their own countrymen irrespective of nationality. Are all their declarations empty words? Cannot they trust the municipalities for selecting suitable Muhammadans wherever possible or leave it to the Government to make rules in that behalf? I find clause 18 of the Bill contains a provision which will obviate the difficulty. I do not think that there is any necessity for this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“My Lord, I very much regret that this amendment has not been accepted by the hon'ble member in charge. Even such an amendment which does not fix a number is not accepted by men like the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar who would call it delightfully vague and the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

“I have said nothing yet.”

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

“At least you have not supported it. I say that when members of this Council, leaders of public opinion, are of opinion that Muhammadans should not be adequately represented in the school committee what can my community expect from members of other communities scattered over small rural and urban areas who have got more prejudice and more personal interest to serve than members of this Council? My Lord, it has been said that the matter will be left to Government. But from clause 15 it appears that the Commissioners of municipalities and members of local boards will frame the rules and not the Local Government. We have been asked to look at the question from a broad national point of view. So we do. It is all very well to speak thus from platforms, but when an opportunity comes all these platitudes come to nothing. We know that even from men like the Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur we do not get that fair treatment which we are asked to expect from members of the school committee. We have been told that suitable Muhammadans are not available. If we compare the needs of our community with the number of suitable appointments held by Muhammadans we find that there are very many suitable Muhammadans who have been left out. It has been suggested that ‘adequate’ is a vague term. Well, I am prepared with your Excellency's permission, to modify this amendment so as to read that there should at least be one Muhammadan member. Although this will not fully meet with my wishes, I am still prepared to move it if your Excellency permits me to do so and if it is accepted by the hon'ble member in charge.”

The President said :—

“The hon'ble member should have given notice of his amendment beforehand. It is very inconvenient for the hon'ble members of this Council to consider an amendment at the last moment without any opportunity of studying it before. I cannot say that I should be prepared to allow this amendment to be moved at this stage unless the hon'ble member in charge is prepared to accept it."

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment."

The President said :—

"In that case I cannot allow the amendment to be moved without proper notice."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"My Lord, I want to make one or two personal observations. My hon'ble friend has complained that Muhammadans do not get fair treatment at the hands of the members of other communities. I would not go into that question, but I would tell him for his information that I come from a district where the sitting Vice-Chairman of the District Board is a Muhammadan elected by a Hindu majority. At the last municipal election the Hindus joined hands with the Muhammadans to return the two Muhammadans who were candidates for municipal seats.

The Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq said :—

"May I rise to a point of order, Sir? It is absolutely irrelevant to the point at issue."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"It is not irrelevant. When you throw dirt on other people they must have a right to defend themselves."

The President said :—

"I think it is desirable that the hon'ble member should adduce arguments either for or against the amendment under consideration."

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar said :—

"I have nothing further to add."

The question being put, a division was taken with the following result :—

AFTER LUNCH.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 22.

The following motion which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, was by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

That after the word "Municipality" in line 4 of sub-clause (1) of clause 17 the following be inserted, namely :—

"for boys referred to in clause (a) of section 3".

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 23.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after the words "the Commissioners may" in line 4 of sub-clause (1) of clause 17 the following be inserted, namely :—

"after making an application under section 6, sub-section (1), and".

He said :—

"My Lord, my object is that an application must be made under section 6 (1), i.e., the imposition of the cess should be made after an application is made by the Commissioners to the Local Government for the introduction of compulsory primary education within their area. My amendment seeks to fix the time and certain conditions under which the municipality will be entitled to levy a cess. In the original Bill the education cess was proposed to be levied only for the purpose of compulsory education, but in the amended Bill the cess is proposed to be levied for the purpose of financing voluntary education as well. At the last meeting when the Bill was considered some amendments were brought forward with the object of making the imposition of the cess dependent on the introduction of compulsory education. These amendments were lost. The present amendment is midway between the provisions as made in the original Bill and those as amended by the Select Committee. It will not bar the cess being levied before the introduction of compulsion as it lays down that the cess may be imposed only after sufficient progress has been made under the scheme of voluntary education and after an application has been made by the municipality to the Local Government for permission to introduce compulsory education within their area. My Lord, a similar provision exists in the Bombay Act, the Punjab Act, the Bihar and Orissa Act and in the United Provinces Bill and in none of these measures an education cess is contemplated without the introduction of compulsion. It would be rather a complete innovation to sweep away all safeguards and to retain the present provisions, and what I seek to introduce is this : that before an education cess is levied there must be some progress of primary education at its voluntary stage which would justify the imposition of an education cess preparatory to the introduction of compulsory education. I hope that this suggestion will be favourably considered by Government, for it will dispel the impression, which has at present been unfortunately created, that it is merely a taxing measure, and is really not for attaining the object which the framers of the Bill have in view. It would not bar any municipality in imposing an education cess for voluntary purposes as well, but I think it should not be levied at the initial stage, and it should be levied only after some progress has been made in voluntary education within the municipality. I seek to introduce this amendment with a view to reassure the public mind on the subject."

Babu S. N. Ray ; Mr. Wordsworth.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

"My Lord, I am sorry I cannot accept this amendment of my hon'ble friend. Under this amendment a municipality would be enabled to impose an education cess only after having made an application to Government for permission to introduce compulsory education made under Part III, but before actual introduction of compulsion. The cess will be available for expenditure on voluntary education as well, but this amendment marks a stage when alone can such cess be imposed—a stage when a municipality is seriously thinking of introducing compulsion. For these reasons I cannot accept the amendment."

The Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth said :—

"My Lord, I had no wish to speak on this amendment, but the hon'ble mover has stated his wish to hear what the representative of Government has to say and therefore I shall say only a few words. The Bill as it stands allows those in charge of education in the municipalities which accept the Bill to impose a cess or not at their discretion. It allows them to impose the cess at any stage of progress, and the hon'ble mover is less generous than the Bill in that he seeks to limit their power and to force them to impose the cess only at the stage when and if they contemplate the introduction of compulsory education. We have already debated this point in several amendments this morning, and I think the attitude of Government is sufficiently clear to the Council already. I am unable on behalf of Government to recommend to the Council the acceptance of this amendment."

The hon'ble mover has referred to various other Bills—the Bihar and Orissa, the Punjab and other Education Bills of a like nature. The reference really does not carry us any further. These Bills, like our own, are experimental : they have only just been introduced and we do not know what degree of success they are likely to attain. We cannot obtain any guidance from the experience of other provinces in this respect. We have our own problems, we have made our own progress, and we have to frame our own legislation in relation to our own conditions as we interpret them. I am therefore unable to recommend the acceptance of this amendment."

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; Babu A. C. Datta.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“My Lord, with reference to the remark of the Hon'ble Mr. Wordsworth about the provision in other Bills of other legislatures, I may point out that the provision in the other Acts goes much further than what I have suggested. For instance, in the Bihar and Orissa Act it is stated that the imposition of the cess shall only be permissible after compulsory education has been introduced. This is a condition precedent to the imposition of the education cess in other provinces. What I seek to introduce is this condition. After an application has been made to Government by the municipality for the introduction of compulsory education within their area the Commissioners may impose an education cess. I do not think that this will in any way hamper the municipality. It may be said that the municipality will not be able to impose an education cess from the very beginning, but that is not, I believe, the object of the framers of the Bill ; that from the beginning before any progress has been made in connection with primary education that an education cess will be levied. I think there must be some justification to show that the education cess should be levied in any area by proving that some progress has been made in voluntary education there, and therefore I think that the addition of these words to the clause will greatly reassure the public mind.”

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 24.

The following motion which stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU KISHORI MOHAN CHAUDHURI was, by leave of the President, withdrawn :—

That for the words “and all amounts derived therefrom shall be devoted solely to the purposes of primary education, whether voluntary or compulsory, within the municipality” in lines 6 to 9 of sub-clause (1) of clause 17, the words “for the purpose” be substituted.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 25.

The Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta moved that at the end of sub-clause (1) of clause 17 the following be added, namely :—

“provided that not less than 80 per cent. of the amounts so derived shall be devoted to compulsory primary education.”

He said :—

“My Lord, after seeing the fate of the other amendments I think I would rather withdraw this amendment.”

The motion was, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 26.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that after the word “purpose” in line 3 of sub-clause (2) of clause 17 the following be inserted, namely :—

“and confirmed at a subsequent special meeting.”

Babu S. N. Ray; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

He said :—

“ My Lord, this is merely a formal amendment and what I want to do is to add the words ‘and confirmed at a subsequent special meeting’ after the word ‘purpose’ in line 3 of clause 17 (2). I think that is the usual procedure followed everywhere, and I hope it may be accepted by the hon’ble member in charge of the Bill.”

The Hon’ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I do not think that I can accept this amendment. It will amount to this—that the proceedings will have to be confirmed by a two-thirds majority. That being the case, I do not think I can accept this amendment.”

The Hon’ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

“ There is some misapprehension, my Lord : the two-thirds majority is not for the confirmation of a resolution : it is for the passing of a resolution that the two-thirds majority is proposed. It is not here in the Bill.”

The motion was then put and lost.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 27.

The Hon’ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur moved that for the words “a majority of the total number of” in line 4 of sub-clause (2) of clause 17 the words “two-thirds of the” be substituted.

He said :—

“ My Lord, in connection with the provisions in this section, my hon’ble friend, Kumar Shib Shekharewar Ray, asked for a three-fourths majority of the Commissioners. That was not accepted in this House, but subsequently a suggestion was made, although there was no formal motion, that two-thirds majority might be substituted, and that was in the original Bill, and, as far as I remember, the hon’ble member in charge of the Bill said that if that was formally moved he was prepared to accept it. Following the hint that was given by him, I have given notice of this motion.”

The Hon’ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I have great pleasure in accepting this amendment.”

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 28.

The Hon’ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar moved that at the end of sub-clause (3) of clause 17 the following be added, namely :—

“ and the cess so levied shall be a rate amounting to the sum required, after deducting the Government grant, the school receipts and the receipts from endowments and contributions, to meet the expenditure on primary education, together with ten per cent. above such sum to meet the collection charges and the probable losses due to non-realization from defaulters.”

Babu S. N. Ray ; Babu A. C. Mazumdar.

He said :—

“ My Lord, at an earlier stage of this Bill I tried to have an amendment accepted which purported to lay down certain principles to indicate the incidence of taxation. That was lost. Here I beg to move that there ought to be some indication as to the amount which should actually be levied from the rate-payers. Now it may be argued that in an earlier clause we have it laid down that no portion of the education cess shall be spent on any other matter. My Lord, if I could have persuaded myself to think that this clause is quite sufficient to safeguard the interests of primary education, I would not feel myself pressed to move this amendment, but unfortunately I am not so inclined to think. There are provisions of this nature in other enactments. In the Local Self-Government Act and in the Road Cess Act there are provisions that the road cess should be used for the purpose of improving communications within the district, and yet we know that for many many years the road cess was diverted to other purposes. In the present Bengal Municipal Act there is a section which says that the latrine rate levied under Part IX of the Bengal Municipal Act cannot be used for any purpose except that of improving the conservancy. But in spite of that we know that many municipalities are guilty of having diverted a portion of this rate to other purposes. Therefore I think that besides the provision which we have already got in this Bill, viz., that the education cess shall not be spent for any other purpose, some other safeguard is necessary, and therefore I want to have it laid down that the cess levied shall be the amount required, after deducting the Government grant, the school receipts, contributions and endowments, to meet the expenditure on primary education, plus 10 per cent. to meet the collection charges and the probable losses due to non-realization from defaulters. This would sufficiently safeguard the interest of primary education, because if we proceed on these lines there will be very little left to be diverted to any other purpose.

My Lord, in framing this amendment I take my stand upon a similar provision made in Sir Henry Wheeler's Village Self-Government Bill. There also the same safeguard has been taken. There it has been said that the amount levied must be the residue of what is required for the purposes of union boards and so forth, after deducting the Government grant and other things, and in this case also I propose the same safeguard. In clause 17(3) it is laid down that the education cess shall be levied according to the rules framed by Government and what my amendment seeks to do is to add that the cess so levied shall be a rate amounting only to the sum required, after deducting the Government grant, the school receipts, endowments and contributions, if any, to meet the expenditure on primary education, together with a sum of 10 per cent. to meet the collection charges and the probable losses due to non-realization from defaulters. So that we shall have a consolidated amount required exactly for primary education which it will not be possible for any municipality to divert to any other purpose. I have said that I have taken this from another cognate subject and I believe it will meet with the acceptance of the Council.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“ My Lord, I accept this amendment.”

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 29.

The Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar also moved that after the word “ inspection ” in line 4 of clause 19 the words “ free of any charge ” be inserted.

Babu S. N. Ray; Mr. O'Malley; Babu A. C. Mazumdar; Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur; The President.

He said :—

“My Lord, this is a very simple thing. It is laid down in this clause that the schools shall be subject to inspection by officers of the Education Department. We welcome their assistance, but it should be free of any charge. If the municipalities have to contribute it will be an additional burden to them as well as to the rate-payers. I think Government officers who will inspect will only be too glad to inspect them free of charge.”

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray said :—

“My Lord, I accept this amendment.”

The Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley said :—

“My Lord, I may explain that the inspecting officers of the department do not charge for inspecting private schools and there is no intention on the part of Government that they should charge for it. The amendment argues, if I am permitted to say, a certain misconstruction of the intention of Government. The idea seems to be that it is possible that Government may charge for such inspection, but as there is no such intention Government will have no objection to accepting the amendment.”

The motion was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 30.

The following motion which stood in the name of the Hon'ble BABU AMBICA CHARAN MAZUMDAR being covered by the debate on items Nos. 5 and 6 was held to be withdrawn:—

That after the words “Education Department” in lines 4 and 5 of clause 19 the words “or the Education Board, if any,” be inserted.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 31.

The following motion stood in the name of the Hon'ble RAI RADHA CHARAN PAL BAHADUR namely :—

That after clause 21 the following be inserted, namely :—

“22. The Local Government may delegate their powers and duties under this Act to a Board of Education which may be constituted for the control and guidance of primary education.”

The President said :—

“The Council decided this morning that the question of Education Board should not be introduced in the Bill. The new clause proposes to do what the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar proposed to do by an amendment to an earlier clause. The Council has already come to a decision on that point, and unless the hon'ble member can show me that the object of his new clause is different to the object of the amendment which has already been disposed of, it will not be in order for him to move it.”

Rai R. C. Pal Bahadur ; The President ; Babu S. N. Ray.

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I may be permitted to explain, my Lord, that this is a different amendment. The amendment of the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar was to substitute 'Education Board' for 'Education Department' but here this is a new clause to empower the Local Government to delegate the powers and duties to a Board of Education which may be constituted for the direction and control of primary education."

The President said :—

"That is precisely the same proposal that was made by the Hon'ble Babu Ambika Charan Mazumdar. If the hon'ble member will look back to item No. 5 on the agenda paper, he will see that that amendment was to insert after the words 'Education Department' the words 'or the Education Board if any'. That seems to me to be precisely the same proposal that the hon'ble member now wishes to make."

The Hon'ble Rai Radha Charan Pal Bahadur said :—

"I respectfully submit to your Excellency's ruling."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 32.

The following motion, which stood in the name of the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray, was not made as no amendments were carried in Council necessitating any renumbering namely :—

"That the Secretary be directed to renumber the clauses and sub-clause of the Bill in consecutive order and to make corresponding alterations in a cross-references thereto."

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 33.

The Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray moved that the Bill as amended by the Council on the 18th and 19th February, 1919, and as settled by the Council on the 27th March, 1919, be passed.

He said :—

"My Lord, I am grateful to your lordship for the kind reference to my work in this connection in the Social Service Exhibition at Dacca. I have always been a believer in the great future that is before us and I sincerely believe that the salvation of India will be by the spread of education, by the development of its industries, and by a more perfect system of sanitation. For centuries the country was immersed in Cimmerian darkness, without hope without light, till the sun of western culture and western civilisation began to dispel the gloom. All this we owe to British administration. But the work has not finished. I would say that the real work of regeneration has only begun, and it is the duty of Government to crown it with success. I need not repeat what I have already said that without substantial aid from Government this measure of primary education, whether it be on a voluntary or on a compulsory basis, will be unsuccessful. If the objects aimed at in fostering elementary education are the provision of facilities within easy reach of every child and the continuation of the child's education to the stage at which he may be regarded as permanently literate, Government help is essential. In the seventh Quinquennial Review of the Progress of Education in India, 1912-17, just published by the Government of India, it is admitted that it is unlikely that the local rates, even if boards elect substantially to enhance their taxation, will suffice unless supplemented by Government funds.

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

My Lord, in your own country the movement towards popular education received a great impulse from the Educational Conference held in 1857 under the presidency of Prince Consort, and culminated in a statute in 1870 by which it was enacted that there shall be provided for every school district a sufficient amount of accommodation in public elementary schools available for all the children resident in such district, for whose elementary education sufficient and suitable provision is not otherwise made. Whether the present Bill when passed into law will have the same effect in this country as the Act of 1870 in England is yet to be seen. All I can say is that the people of this country appreciate the enlightenment of education more than anything else, but if they are unable to pay for such education, it is entirely due to their extreme poverty. What President Jefferson said more than a hundred years ago, is true for all time. 'I look,' he said, 'to the diffusion of light and education as the resources most to be relied on for ameliorating the condition, promoting the virtue, and advancing the happiness of men and I do hope, in the present spirit of extending to the great mass of mankind the blessings of instruction, I see a great prospect of great advancement in the happiness of the human race and this may proceed to an indefinite although not an infinite degree.' I am sure, my Lord, that these words will find an echo in every heart that is animated with the desire of promoting and advancing the peace and happiness of individuals and through them of nations."

The motion was put and agreed to.

RESOLUTIONS.

(Under the rules for the discussion of matters of general public interest.)

The following resolution stood in the name of the Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that inquiries be made in the year 1919-20 with a view to establish more medical schools in the province beginning from the year 1920-21.

He said :—"The Council will remember that at the last sitting this question was discussed thoroughly and the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler, on behalf, assured the Council that the object of this resolution would receive sympathetic consideration at the hands of Government. That being so, my Lord, I would ask your Excellency's permission to withdraw it."

The resolution was, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 35.

The Hon'ble Mr. Provash Chunder Mitter moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that investigations be made during the year 1919-20 in order to ascertain the possibilities of increasing the income of the Government of Bengal by the development of the natural resources of the Province.

Mr. P. C. Mitter.

He said :—

“ My Lord, before I go into the merits of this resolution, I desire to offer certain preliminary remarks. In the first place I should like to preface my remarks by saying that I do not intend to deal with the possibilities of increasing the income of Government by the development of the natural resources of the Province exhaustively. I would leave it to Government to find out by proper enquiries and investigations the various points on which such increase may be possible. My principal object in bringing forward this resolution is to draw the attention of Government to the possibilities; but my knowledge is necessarily limited. I daresay the Government, with the knowledge and opportunities at their disposal, will be able to investigate the matter thoroughly. The second point which I should like to state at the outset is this :—I do not intend that Government should trench upon vested rights or vested interests. The last preliminary remark that I desire to make is that in view of the necessities of education, sanitation and various other things which will be necessary in the near future for the Government to undertake and in view also of the increased expenses which the reforms are sure to entail, it is necessary to find out how far the income of the State can be increased without additional taxation. The question of additional taxation ought to come after we have exhausted these possibilities. At any rate these possibilities ought to be enquired into fully. My Lord, with these preliminary remarks as I shall proceed to make some definite suggestions but shall confine my remarks on the following heads :—first as to the possibilities of increasing our resources by the development of our forests; secondly, as to the possibilities of increasing our resources by the development of our fisheries and, lastly, the possibilities of increasing our resources by the development of the cinchona estates of the Government.

As regards forests, my lord, your Excellency's Government knows very well that there are 6,803,367 acres of forest area in Bengal or in other words, 10,630 square miles of forest area. This means that about 13 per cent. of the total area of the Province of Bengal is forest land. The actual net income from this large area is a little over 6 lakhs of rupees or little over 1 anna 4 pies per square acre. These figures show that the income derived from the forest area in Bengal is low considering the demands of the population. It is hardly necessary for me to point out that in trying to get an increased income from forest areas the future must be kept in view. It is essential to preserve the forests with an eye to the future, but paying all possible attention to the necessities of forest preservation, I believe enquiries properly conducted will show that our forests in Bengal are capable of yielding much larger revenue. I believe a fair improvement in revenue as well as conservation are only possible if more money be available for the development and conservation of forest. I have no doubt the Government in the past was fully alive to a general sense of necessities of this department, but the Government had so many important calls on their finance that it was perhaps difficult for the Government in the past to have undertaken a constructive programme for the development of our forest resources. With these general observations I proceed to indicate some special suggestions regarding points of enquiry.

Of the ten thousand and odd square miles only about 4,800 square miles are reserved forest. The Chittagong Hill Tracts consisting of about 4,000 square miles is still an unclassified State forest. I believe enquiries will show, and so far as my information goes it is admitted by the department, that the Chittagong Hill Tracts consist of a very valuable forest area. If this area is properly surveyed from the point of view of forest officials and if this area be protected and facilities of transport are provided for, I believe improvements in revenue will follow. Besides, this unclassified forest area of 4,000 and odd square miles we have still more than 1,700 square miles of protected forest, bulk of which is in the Sundarbans. With regard to all classes of forest areas, reserved, protected or unclassified, facilities of transport and suitable increase in the staff of forest officials is likely to result in improved finances. I do not know if it will be possible for our Provincial Government to provide money for these purposes. If money be not available from the Provincial Budget, even if money has to be borrowed or otherwise arranged for from the Imperial Government and even if some reasonable interest were to be paid on the amount so borrowed, I believe enquiries will show that the future revenue from forest areas will increase by a very fair amount. Bengal is a thickly populated Province and with proper facilities of transport and with better organisation forest produce are likely to sell more advantageously than at present. In my suggested enquiry the possibilities of utilising hydro-electric power may also be kept in view. A careful survey of forest produce, including medicinal and other useful plants to be found in our forest and a more thorough publication of the results of such surveys are likely to produce better results. Without enquiries it is not possible to say what sums can be usefully spent in improving facilities for transport and providing for better survey. If I assume merely by way of illustration that 50 lakhs will be necessary, the interest on that sum will be less than 3 lakhs a year. I am sure the increased revenue will be several times 3 lakhs. The total area of the reserved forest (if Chittagong Hill Tracts be surveyed and reserved) will be very nearly double and under ordinary circumstances the income also will be very nearly double. The gross income is about 12 lakhs. Of course from this gross income something ought to be deducted for increased expenditure. Facilities of transport will also produce increased income. I should not be surprised that if half-a-crore of rupees be laid on the lines indicated above, our future net forest revenue will be somewhere between 20 to 30 lakhs instead of 6 lakhs as at present.

Bengal abounds in rivers and estuaries. I am aware that most of the smaller rivers and a good portion of the bigger rivers in their upper-reaches form part of permanent-settled estates, but the estuarine portions of our big and small rivers contain very valuable fisheries which at the present moment yield very little to the Government, partly because of want of facilities of transport and partly because of want of organisation. The Sundarbans alone cover an area of about 5,700 square miles. Comparison of price of fish in the estuarine fisheries of Sundarbans with the Calcutta market will show that the difference in price is very great indeed. Enquiries may be instituted as to whether facilities of transport or establishment of stations for buying and preserving fish will produce better results. The general position is such that with proper investigations and with proper organisation money laid out in developing fisheries in rivers and estuaries which belong to the Government will produce very satisfactory results. As in the case of forest so in the case of fisheries it may be necessary to spend a fairly large sum of money, say between quarter to half-a-crore of rupees and that money can only be available to our Provincial Government by a loan from the Imperial Government, yet that money if properly laid out is sure to bring in a large revenue in the future. Enquiries may also be made about the establishment of refrigerating plants specially in the estuarine Sundarban areas where salt water is easily available. I do not suggest that the Government should enter into the fishery trade, but what I say is that the Government should take proper steps to increase the value of its fishery estates, and if suitable steps are taken I believe the Government will get a large income from the rivers which belong to the Government.

Cinchona cultivation brings in an appreciable income to Bengal. Paragraph 7 at page 3 of the Report of the Government Cinchona Plantations and Factory in Bengal (1917-18) will show that the total receipts amounted to over

Sir Henry Wheeler.

20 lakhs and paragraph 8 will show that the value of the stock is over 18 lakhs. Of course this income was above the ordinary and was largely due to war conditions, but the average income in ordinary times is not negligible considering that the net provincial income is only a little over 6 crores of rupees. The answer given by Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin, No. 36, page 276 of the Calcutta Gazette of 12th December 1918, will show that cinchona plantation has been further extended. The income from cinchona will therefore be higher in the near future. To a malaria-ridden province like Bengal cinchona cultivation is of special importance. I am aware that it is asserted that no further land is available for extension of cinchona cultivation. The opinion of those who assert this are entitled to great weight, but I would appeal to the hon'ble members of the Government to consider the following points :—The present area of the two plantations in the district of Darjeeling is comparatively small. The Mungpoo Plantations (in two divisions) contain less than 500 acres and the Munsong Plantations (in four divisions) contain only about 2,100 acres. Most of these divisions consist only of a few square acres of land. The extension by a few more square acres will mean a considerable increase in the total area. Is it possible that land which is suitable for cinchona up to a particular point will suddenly become unsuitable say 100 yards beyond that point? Further, is it likely that these few square acres spread over six divisions are the only favoured spots in the district of Darjeeling where cinchona can be grown? 2,500 square acres mean only about 4 square miles. These 4 square miles are again divided into six divisions. If it were possible to extend cinchona cultivation from 4 square miles to say 20 to 25 square miles in various divisions, then the income from this head alone will perhaps be more than half-a-crore of rupees.

I have only indicated certain points which have struck me. I would suggest that the Government should frame certain definite questions on my resolution and circulate the same to its own officers in the various districts and to selected men all over the Province. Such other enquiries as the Government deems suitable should also be made. But above all, what is most necessary is that the result of the enquiries should be properly utilised."

The Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler said :—

"My Lord, a resolution of this kind is naturally one which appeals to the cupidity of the Finance Department, and I have not the slightest objection to accepting it; but in so doing, I would like to safeguard myself from the possible charge hereafter that I have given the impression that the Finance Department will be able to work miracles or discover El Dorados which have hitherto been withheld from our ken. That I do not think is likely; and I do not wish it to be thought that there is a probability of our entering upon a régime of affluence, sufficient to supply not only our present, but our increasing, needs without the inconvenient necessity of encroaching in any way upon the pockets of the tax-payer. So golden a future is not likely to be realised; but in so far as the resolution asks us to make investigations and enquiries, I shall be glad to enquire into the three specific points which the hon'ble member has brought forward and into any others which may suggest themselves to anyone else. Of course, it can be said, and it can be said accurately, that the resolution is only asking us to do what we already do. There was a time when the whole revenues of India were more or less centralised in the Government of India: the local Governments had no independent power of expenditure and had to go up to the Government of India for everything which they wished to do. At that time it might have been said that it did not much matter to the local Government what happened to its natural resources, but that system broke down in the course of the development of the country, to be replaced by our present financial system which,

Sir Henry Wheeler.

in brief, rests on the devolution of certain functions to local Governments by the Government of India along with various fixed assignments of revenue and assignments of heads of growing revenue, either in whole or part, from which these functions are financed : and although in the days of the quinquennial settlements it might still have been said that the interest of the local Government in husbanding its resources was blunted by the fact that it was apt to lose the benefits of economies and developments on the occasion of the next re-settlement, yet that also is no longer true now that we have quasi-permanent, and, finally, more or less permanent settlements of revenue as between the provinces and the Government of India. So it has for some time past been to the interest of a provincial Government to develop its heads of revenue, since to the extent that it shows diligence in so doing it adds to its profits, and I think I may claim that the point has received attention from our predecessors in this province as elsewhere. In connection with the Commercial Departments of Government such as Forests, etc., hon'ble members must have seen constant references in resolutions, etc., to the desirability of Government deriving from its properties the utmost profit which is legitimately due to it, and the success and efficiency of the head of the department is judged, among other considerations, by the extent to which he is able to achieve that result. But, as I have said, I am perfectly willing to examine any directions in which primâ facie there may be possibility of doing more.

It may also be said that to some extent a resolution of this kind is at the present moment premature, in so far as our financial future is in a state of some uncertainty. I have outlined the scheme of financial settlements by which we have hitherto been governed, but, as we all know, the Reforms Scheme has foreshadowed a definite separation of revenue as between Imperial and Provincial, under which we shall be given various definite heads and more extended powers of taxation ; but as we stand to-day, we do not exactly know what the details of that division will be, or what our precise powers of taxation will be ; and it can, therefore, be argued that it is useless to enter upon a detailed examination of what the resources of the province may in future years produce.

I think both these criticisms are valid to some extent, namely, that the resolution is not asking us to do anything particularly new, while it is asking us to make detailed enquiries which are complicated by the uncertainty of the financial future ; but I do not wish to ride off the resolution on these two grounds, and we will do our best to meet the wishes of the hon'ble member, within the limitations to which I have already made reference. When the hon'ble member suggests to us in the Finance Department that without encroaching on vested rights and vested interests, and without resort to taxation, we should increase the income of the State, I cannot but think that he is setting us a task which the boldest financier in the world would be rather shy of accepting. I do not see any prospect of the financial needs of this province being met in the future—assuming that it is the wish of the province to advance on more rapid lines in certain directions than has been the case in the past—if the two limitations of the hon'ble member are insisted upon. However, for our present purposes, we accept them ; and I do not understand him to be offering his resolution as a final solution of our financial difficulties. In fact, he himself restricts it by the reference to the development of natural resources only, and he has practically restricted it still further by mentioning only the three heads of Forests, Fisheries and Cinchona. On these three detailed points, my friend the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming, in whose department they particularly fall, will have some remarks to make, and I will not anticipate him beyond saying that I doubt whether any of the three is of great financial importance except that of

Mr. Cumming.

Forests. Even in respect of Forests when we look at the figures as reproduced in the budget we find that we derived in the past the following gross revenue, viz.: Rs. 11 lakhs in 1915-16, Rs. 13 lakhs in 1916-17, Rs. 13½ lakhs in 1917-18 and Rs. 18 lakhs in the Revised Estimate of 1918-19 due, of course, largely to the war, the end of which is reflected in the fall in the budget of the current year to Rs. 16 lakhs. When we look at these figures, we cannot but feel that there is a long long trail before us before we get anything like the Rs. 20 or 30 lakhs of net revenue which the Hon'ble Member has foreshadowed. But we will hear from Mr. Cumming what has been done in the past, and if there is any prospect of doing more in the future we will attempt it.

Apart from the three heads mentioned by the Hon'ble Member, I do not know what he would regard as coming within the definition of natural resources. Thus, Land Revenue is a natural resource, though I daresay the Hon'ble Member would at once tell me that its discussion trespassed upon vested interests. Stamps is not, I suppose, a natural resource: Excise might be argued to be so, though I fancy that other Hon'ble Members would tell me that our progress under Excise is already sufficiently rapid to satisfy even the most rapacious Finance Member. Income-tax is certainly not a natural resource, neither are Registration, and Law and Justice. Jail manufactures might be argued to be so; as also the resources of our Ports, yet we know the demands for expenditure on our Ports are likely to exceed in the immediate future any increased receipts which they may bring in. Apart from that there is the Miscellaneous head, under which Fisheries and Cinchona fall, and we have Public Works, covering our irrigation canals and navigable channels. I believe schemes are already being elaborated for the further improvement and utilization of our water-ways, which will bring in a larger income, but we can direct the attention of the Public Works Department to them and examine what they have to say. But I rather wish the Hon'ble Member could give us more light as a guide to our enquiries. When the stage conjurer produces an unlimited quantity of paper from a hat or a rabbit from his left boot, we may be fairly certain that he put it there beforehand while the attention of the spectators was otherwise engaged. I rather feel that the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter is handing me a hat without placing many things in it or even telling me where I can find them, whereas he expects me to produce abundant gifts for the amazement of the audience. However, we will do our best and will try to work out these and any further suggestions that any other Hon'ble Member may wish to offer us."

The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming said :—

"My Lord, the financial aspect of the resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter has been dealt with by my hon'ble colleague, Sir Henry Wheeler, but it would perhaps be convenient if I were now to place before the Council some information regarding the economic aspect. The subjects which were particularly mentioned were Forests, Fisheries and Cinchona, and with these I am the more directly connected. I may say at the outset that we welcome the ventilation of suggestions of this kind; but I hope I may be able to show that in all these three cases Government have to a considerable extent anticipated the enquiries for which the Hon'ble Member has asked.

As regards the first subject of Forests, no doubt the Hon'ble Member's main proposition can be accepted by every one, namely, that by increased and prudent expenditure there would be remunerative results. That has been said by many great men who knew the resources of India with reference to India's forest assets; and last year I had occasion to draw attention to the matter. The Hon'ble Member has pointed out in particular that in Bengal by increased facilities of transport and by increase of staff some effective results might be obtained. But one thing must be remembered in this connection. The Forest Department in India is after all not a very old department, and its primary object has been the conservation of forests. Indeed, the very terms we use in the department indicate this. The Head of the Department is called Conservator and his officers are called Deputy Conservators and Assistant Conservators. But at the same time Government now-a-days cannot but be alive to the necessity of systematic and prudent exploitation coincidently with conservation. There are many difficulties, first of money, and then of men; during the last few years, the cadre in the department has been depleted. Nevertheless, we have been able to do something definite. During last year we made one very important enquiry; and we made two very important appointments. The enquiry was to the following effect,—to enquire into the trade requirements of forest products and the possibility of supplying them; and was made in direct consultation with the Director of Industries. The gentleman, who was appointed to make that enquiry, was a very competent officer, who had experience of what has been done in America; and he furnished Government with an excellent set of suggestions. Those suggestions have been followed up by the appointment of an officer under the title of Forest Utilization Officer who has to work in direct co-operation with our Director of Industries. I need not elaborate what the special duties of this officer are, but they include the marketing of timbers and the examination of the special needs of industries that require wood. Quite apart from timber the work of the officer includes the examination of tan-stuffs and the question of the supply of material for the manufacture of paper. That, Sir, is a very important appointment. We have followed the example of the United Provinces Government and we have obtained a very suitable officer for the purpose. There has also been another appointment. The hon'ble mover has drawn attention to the Chittagong Hill Tracts. In that area an officer has been specially appointed as a Working Plan Officer for the commercial development of that area. He will make a survey of the nature which the Hon'ble Member has mentioned; and his duties will include the exploitation of the local timbers and of such forest products as are found there, such as bamboo and grass. Therefore, I suggest that, to a considerable extent, Government have anticipated the Hon'ble Member in making these enquiries; but I do not for a moment suggest that that is everything or that Government will now become supine. He may take it that we are alive to the commercial possibilities of our forests in addition to our duties as conservators.

The next subject on which I may shortly dilate is Fisheries. Here the prospects are not so good, and possibly there is some misapprehension on the point. The Hon'ble Member has drawn attention to Government fishery leases; but the amount of money that Government derive from fisheries in this province is comparatively small. For half a century—I have studied the papers as far as 1860—Government have endeavoured to assert the rights which they had lost, or to which they thought they were entitled. Let me explain very shortly that after all Government cannot own very much in the way of fisheries. In the inland tracts, fisheries are the property principally of zemindars under the Permanent Settlement. In the Bay of Bengal outside the 3-mile limit, the fisheries belong to the world. In tidal waters fisheries are the property of the public, but Government are the trustees of the public. I have found that the cases in which Government can or should re-assert its ownership are comparatively few and that the subject is a very difficult one. Quite recently, however, a fresh enquiry in the matter has been instituted. What the result may be I cannot at present say; but, from what I have said, it will be gathered that Government are alive to the possibility of expanding their revenue under this head. As regards the fisheries which are leased by Government,—technically called julkars,—definite instructions were given in 1916. When any of these leases come to an end there is to be a reconsideration (i) as to whether they should be placed in the hands of the Department of Fisheries, (ii) as to whether particular fisheries should be placed in the hands of Co-operative Societies ; and (iii) as to whether the lease should contain new and more drastic terms. I find that my predecessor, the Hon'ble Sir Nicholas Beatson Bell, recorded—and I am fully in agreement with him—that the object of Government throughout has not been so much the increase of revenue under this head, to which the Hon'ble Member is directing our attention to-day, as the protection of fish, that is to say, the protection of fish in the close season and the prevention of the improper destruction of fry, and also the protection of fishermen who are undoubtedly oppressed by the middlemen in this province. So much for fisheries.

As regards Cinchona, the prospects are still less attractive. It is true as the Hon'ble Member has said that, here in Bengal with its vast area, the total area under cinchona is roughly 4 square miles in two plantations in the Darjeeling district. He may take it from me that if there had been any opportunity of making any great increase in revenue from this source, action would have been taken before now. He says—is it not possible to extend the cultivation beyond the few favoured spots where it is cultivated at present? I have visited the Sarail Cinchona estate in Bengal ; and can give an answer. Cinchona is undoubtedly a very difficult plant to cultivate. It requires a special combination of soil, altitude, temperature, aspect and rainfall ; and our expert, who is recognized as an expert authority not only in this country but in other countries, advises us that opportunities for extension in the Darjeeling district are extremely few. Hence the increase of revenue, to which the Hon'ble Member looks forward under this head, is very small indeed. In accordance with the instructions of the Government of India issued two years ago, a very elaborate investigation was made in every part of India and Burma where cinchona could possibly be grown. The results of that investigation are at present before the Government of India ; and we await the final decision of the Imperial Government on the subject.

Therefore, my Lord, with reference to the three points which the Hon'ble Member has mentioned in particular, I may say that as regards Forests there is undoubtedly a possibility of some increase of revenue. Under the head Fisheries, there is a possibility of a small increase of revenue, and as regards Cinchona there is practically no possibility.

As regards the other heads, to which Sir Henry Wheeler has drawn attention, I need perhaps mention only the head of the improvement of our water ways, especially on the main route between Eastern Bengal and Western Bengal. The Madaripur Bhil route has proved wonderfully successful : it is likely to give us a remunerative return for our money, and by expenditure of more money we hope to get a still larger return. I suggest that this is a development of our natural resources which will give an increase of revenue to the province ; but, as regards the other three heads, I have already stated what the existing facts are and have shown that we have, to some extent, anticipated the Hon'ble Member in his desire for an enquiry."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

" I am thankful to the Hon'ble Members who have replied on behalf of Government for their sympathetic reply and for the acceptance of my resolution. My Lord, it is admitted that the appointment of a special officer has been productive of very good results. That proves that there existed a considerable field for improvement in this direction during the last half a century or so. But that no steps towards that direction were taken until very recently. This shows that improvements were possible though not undertaken for a considerable time. In spite of the Hon'ble Mr. Cumming's assurance, I venture to express my doubt that the income under " Forests " has reached its maximum limit. There is room for further improvement. If the reserve area is more than doubled, and that doubling includes valuable forests, then there is every likelihood of the income being increased to Rs. 20 or 30 lakhs. The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has given us certain figures. These figures undoubtedly show that the forest income has increased in the past and is capable of further increase, though it is a fact that the increase in recent years is due more on account of the war than for any other normal reason. But if we take the figures back to a long series of years, we find that there had been no such increase in past years. I may, however, again point out that the forests in the Chittagong Hill Tracts are a possible source of increased income specially as these areas are within easy reach of the port of Chittagong. The present income from these tracts is smaller as compared with those derived from Jalpaiguri, Darjeeling and other places.

Maulvi Abul Kasem.

As regards fisheries, it is quite true that a considerable number of fisheries are private properties. The Hon'ble Mr. Cumming has said that he has looked up the papers from 1860 down to the present time and he has found that there is very little chance of increasing the income under this head as most of the inland fisheries are private properties. But I would point out that the income can be increased at least so far as Sundarbans are concerned, which are khas mahal properties of Government which are generally settled on 10 years lease. There are a large number of creeks in Sunderbans which are certainly Government properties where fish grows in abundance and a good income can be derived therefrom. We all know that the price of fish has risen considerably of late. The difference in the price of fish in town and in rural areas is great. Income can be increased by offering increased facilities for preserving fish. I never said nor do I say now that I have discovered something very new nor did I hold out hopes to the Hon'ble Finance Member of an El Dorado from which the needs of my province will all be met. But even the addition of a few lakhs to our existing income will be welcome. I have not blamed Government or anybody else for not taking steps in this direction in the past, but I suggest that inquiries in these matters, specially on scientific lines, will prove helpful. I am thankful to Government for accepting my resolution."

The resolution was then put and agreed to.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 36.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that proper steps be taken against the person or persons responsible for the publication in the Epiphany newspaper of the 18th January, 1919, of the unwarrantable attack on the character of the Prophet of Islam.

He said :—

"My Lord, it was with very great reluctance that I gave notice of this resolution, but I did it in obedience to the wishes of my constituents. But I am glad to say that the action taken in regard to the publication 'Prophet of Islam' has satisfied the Muhammadan community and has served the purpose for which I gave notice of this resolution. I, therefore, beg with your Excellency's permission to withdraw this resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

Maulvi Abul Kasem; Mr. P. C. Mitter.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEMS Nos. 37 AND 38.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem also moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to establish a Polytechnic College at Calcutta at an early date.

The Hon'ble Mr Provash Chunder Mitter moved, by way of amendment, that in the resolution (item No. 37) moved by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem, for the words "establish a Polytechnic College at Calcutta at an early date" the following shall be substituted :—

"further as early as possible technical education at Calcutta and elsewhere in Bengal on the lines indicated in the Report of the Indian Industrial Commission, 1916-18."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, at the very outset I desire to state that I gladly accept the amendment of which notice has been given by my hon'ble friend, Mr. P. C. Mitter. It moves on the line of least resistance and it serves the purpose which I had in view when I gave notice of this resolution equally well. I think I would not be justified in taking up the time of this Council by making a speech on this resolution. The object is well known—we want to give our boys industrial education. We have just accepted a resolution to the effect that we should investigate the resources of the country, and in order to make that investigation successful or to make the resources of the country useful, we must train our young men. And the best course is to start technical and industrial schools all over the province. A great Commission sat over the question and they have made certain recommendations. No doubt the Government have not yet considered the recommendations of that Commission as a whole. But I am sorry to say, my Lord, that Government move rather too cautiously and too slowly in this matter. And the object which I had in view in giving notice of this resolution was to make the pace a little quicker. The matter is very urgent and I think it would not admit of any further delay. More avenues of employment would be open to our young men and it will result in greater benefit politically and economically than anything else. Government will find this if they accept the amended motion which is now placed before the Council. With these words, my Lord, I commend this resolution to the acceptance of the Council."

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, I expected that my hon'ble friend, the mover of the resolution, would go into the matter more fully and I would have confined myself to the point raised by my amendment. But I am afraid he has not done so. However, I shall try to do justice to the amendment as it stands. At the outset I desire to say that I have taken care to make this recommendation in a limited form, namely, that further facilities for technical education should be provided in Calcutta and elsewhere in Bengal. I have limited it in that way because I know that the recommendations of the Industrial Commission have not yet been finally considered and the Government of India have not yet finally decided in what way these recommendations are to be given effect to. My Lord, the Industrial Commission have made various suggestions, some of which have already been given effect to by your Excellency's Government, e.g., the one about the training of our young men in the railway workshop at Kanchrapara, as I believe provision has already been made in that direction. My Lord, the Industrial Commission have clearly indicated the different lines along which technical education is to proceed. I do not think it is necessary for me to go into the question of those recommendations in detail. But about the general necessity of providing for better facilities of industrial and technical education there can be no question, and I hope your Excellency's Government will admit that such a necessity exists. Seventy-five per cent. of our raw materials go not to Great Britain—the country with which we are so intimately connected—but to non-British countries and countries absolutely outside the British Empire. Now, if our British non-official friends here, some of whom have in the past helped in developing Indian resources, were to attempt to turn the raw materials which go to non-British countries into finished commodities and even if they were to try their best, I make bold to say that, without training Indians in industrial and manufacturing lines, they will never succeed in their attempt. At the present moment, speaking only of my own province of Bengal, we have about 11,000 Britishers here. Out of this number about 11,000 are concerned with public services as administrators, policemen, or as sailors, professional men, and so on, and the vast work of the development of a province like Bengal is in the hands of about three thousand persons, as only about that number is concerned with trade, commerce and manufactures. The task is too heavy. There are various difficulties in bringing out experts from Great Britain. Some of these difficulties have been pointed out in the report of the Industrial Commission. The raw materials available here can now be turned to finished commodities so as to compete successfully in price with other countries if we were to depend on British experts only. We require the best British experts and experts from other countries as well, but if we require them we also require properly trained Indians along with them. Educational developments on these lines will also solve various political problems and will create better feeling between Britishers and Indians. When people meet each other in common work they get to know each other. The Indians will realize that the Britishers are not so bad after all and the Britishers also will realize when they come in closer contact with Indians that they are better than what they thought them to be. I hope your Excellency's Government will agree as to the general desirability of pushing forward with the work of providing better facilities for instruction in railway workshops and in existing technical and industrial institutions, such as Sibpur College, and this I hope your Excellency's Government can do even without waiting for the final decision of the Government of India. I hope also that steps will be taken for providing better facilities in industrial and technical education."

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, my task has been somewhat simplified by the Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem throwing the onus of moving the subject-matter of the resolution on the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, and the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter taking a line quite different from what I must candidly confess I was prepared for. I thought that a strenuous fight would be put up, that Government had neglected Calcutta badly regarding the establishment of a Polytechnic Institute in Calcutta; but evidently the Hon'ble Maulvi Sahib's love for Calcutta is not so great and in consequence we have been let off lightly. My Lord, although the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter's resolution is of a general kind, and I may say at once that the Government will be pleased to accept the resolution, I do think, however, that as this matter of a polytechnic institute for Calcutta is of importance to Calcutta itself and that as it has been the subject of a recent debate in the Calcutta Corporation, I should, therefore, say a few words regarding the proposal of a Technological Institute in Calcutta; for, I think, those who are interested in the development of industrial education in this city would like to know that Government has not been entirely unmindful on this important project. It might be in the recollection of members, not only of the present Council, but of the past, and of gentlemen interested in the proposal for the furtherance of industrial and technical education in the province, that two committees were formed some years ago to go into the whole question of a Technological Institute in Calcutta; and, at that time, I may say the committees were rather under the delusion that the Government of India under Lord Hardinge having left Calcutta post-haste after the Delhi Reforms and the announcement of the Delhi move, some of the Imperial buildings would be available, and that it would be possible to accommodate such an institute in one of these vacated buildings. The result was that estimates were prepared and the cost of construction was put down at a considerably modest figure. In fact, it was thought that no great expenditure under head 'Construction' would be necessary. Then again, of course, the matter was really mooted originally at a time when there was a proposal of moving the Sibpur College to Ranchi. All that is past history now, and I do not propose to take up the time of the Council unnecessarily. What I want to point out very briefly is this—that although we have not been able to make a start as yet with the question of establishing a Polytechnic Institute in Calcutta, we have not been idle in this matter as well as in the matter of general advancement of industrial education. It may be in the recollection of the Hon'ble Members of this Council that it was a little over a year ago, in connection with a debate on a budget resolution in 1918, that my esteemed friend, the Hon'ble Sir R. N. Mukerji, drew the attention of Government to the necessity of making provision for the higher technical instruction of Mechanical and Electrical Engineers; and although this resolution was opposed by Sir S. P. Sinha on behalf of Government, it was carried by a non-official majority, and in consequence of it, a provision was made in the budget of 1918-1919 for establishing workshops at Kanchrapara, but as it was not possible to spend the money within that year, provision has been made in the budget of the next financial year for a hostel at Kanchrapara; and as there has been some difference of opinion regarding the training of such Mechanical Engineers, Government have recently appointed a Committee to go into the question, and of which committee the Hon'ble Sir Rajendra Mukerji is the President. Then, again, now that we have decided to keep the Sibpur College where it is, we are expecting from the Governing Body of that College proposals for its extension, and we have recently also received a scheme drawn up by Mr. Everett for the establishment of a Polytechnic Institute in Calcutta; so that it may be taken that now that a scheme has actually been outlined for Calcutta, it will be gone into by the Education Department as soon as possible. I should like to go a little further and state what the other activities of this Government have been with regard to this important branch of education. We are in communication with the Bihar and Orissa Government about the development of evening classes in the mine fields and about the possibilities of establishing a school of mines. As all these relate to the same question of technical and industrial education, I have just thought fit to mention them to this Council. It must be understood, however, that the question of the development of industrial and technical education has got to be tackled by the Government as a whole when it takes into consideration all these different schemes, as also the proposals recently made by the Industrial Commission, regarding which some reference at length has been made by the Hon'ble Mr. Mitter. The difficulty, I may say, has hitherto been one of funds, owing to rigid economy being exercised in connection with the war; and although hostilities have ceased, peace is not yet in sight and the financial exigencies imposed by the war have by no means come to an end. We realize, however, the need for the development of technical and industrial education, and I can assure this Council that this Government intends to develop it so far as we have power to do so and have the means at our disposal. The Industrial Commission have drafted a programme and they speak with the authority of experts and specialists of a high order. That programme will receive the co-operation not only of Provincial Governments but also of the Government of India, because as Hon'ble Members are fully aware. some parts of their recommendations which relate to the creation of a department of industries with control over technical education open up new vistas and must necessitate eventually the whole of technical education being handed over to a new department altogether ; but that is essentially one for the Government of India to decide and for us to follow. The great thing, however, is that the report chalks out lines of advance, and we are anxious to advance in this important branch of education. For these reasons, as I have said, Government are pleased to accept the resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter ; and I can at the same time give this assurance that the question of a polytechnic institute in or near Calcutta will not be lost sight of. I have already referred to the proposal which Mr. Everett has submitted only a few days ago. There are many attractive parts in his scheme and Government will examine these recommendations at an early date and give it its close and careful consideration. I trust the Hon'ble Members will believe us when we say that we realize, just as much as the mover of this resolution and the gentleman who has moved an amendment to it, the necessity of advancing in this important branch of education ; and I hope that with this assurance and with the assurance conveyed by the fact that we are going to accept the resolution of the Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter, the Council will realize that we have not been idle in this matter."

Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

Mr. P. C. Mitter ; Maulvi Abul Kasem.

The Hon'ble Mr. P. C. Mitter said :—

"My Lord, I am thankful to Government for accepting my resolution. After the speech of the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, I do not think it is necessary for me to address the Council further on the matter."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

"My Lord, I have nothing except to express my thanks to Government and to the Hon'ble Member in charge for the sympathetic reply and for the assurance that he has given. We are also glad to know that Government is in this instance moving quicker than usual."

The resolution was put in the following amended form and agreed to :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken to further, as early as possible, technical education at Calcutta and elsewhere in Bengal on the lines indicated in the Report of the Indian Industrial Commission, 1916-18.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 39.

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem moved the following resolution :—

This Council recommends to the Governor in Council that steps be taken for the establishment of a Subordinate Judge's Court at Malda.

He said :—

"My Lord, at this fag-end of the day I am sorry to bring forward a resolution which however has an ancient history. It is nearly two decades since the people of Malda moved the Government of Bengal for the establishment of a subordinate judge's court in their town—the headquarters of that district. At that time inquiries were made and it was found that the prayer could not be reasonably granted. The people of Malda, however, continued to move Government from time to time, and so far back as 1913 when His Excellency Lord Carmichael visited the ancient town of Malda they made this prayer in the address given to His Excellency and they made also the alternative suggestion that failing that, a subordinate judge may be asked to divide his time between Malda and Rajshahi. His Excellency was impressed with this aspect of the question and he promised an inquiry. The High Court was subsequently consulted and in the reply to a question put in this Council on the 26th July, 1915, the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr said that 'the High Court recognized that there were strong administrative grounds for meeting the wishes of the inhabitants of Malda, and suggested that a subordinate judge might be posted to Malda temporarily as an experiment, if an officer could be provided without prejudice to the requirements in the matter of additional subordinate judges elsewhere. Owing to lack of funds and the more urgent requirements of other districts, it will not be possible to give effect to the High Court's suggestion this year, but the matter will be further considered when staff and funds become available.' Since then my Lord another memorial has been sent to your Excellency's Government and I may here draw the attention of this Council to the strong recommendations of Mr. Cornes who was the District Judge of Rajshahi in 1913. He strongly urged that a subordinate judge's court should be established at Malda, and he declared that great inconvenience was being felt by the people in instituting their suits. He says : 'I am strongly in favour of the proposal, but only on condition that the strength of sub-judges for Rajshahi and Malda be permanently retained as two.' 'It is clear, however, that there is a good deal of work for a sub-judge at Malda.' 'I am informed and find no difficulty in believing that at present considerable claims are remitted frequently in order to bring suits within the jurisdiction of the senior munsif at Malda. The cost of conducting an original suit of Malda at Rampur-Boalia is prohibitive.' It is a very serious matter, my Lord, for the people giving up their rightful claims to avoid the difficulty of coming over to Rajshahi to fight out their cases. These are facts which are recognized by Government, and I hope your Excellency's Government will accept this resolution and give effect to it at an early date.

One difficulty has been mentioned both by the High Court and by Mr. Cornes, and it is about the accommodation of the sub-judge's court. I now learn that the members of the bar library are willing to give up their library room for the accommodation of the sub-judge's court. There is also another house available for that purpose. So this difficulty is removed, and as an additional subordinate judge has been permanently located since 1913 the question of funds does not arise. When I moved a similar resolution some time ago for the establishment of a sub-judge's court at Asansol my hon'ble friend, Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri, assured this Council that although he was the member for Rajshahi he had no objection to a sub-judge's court being established at Malda. So I take it that the people of Rajshahi have no objection to it. Under the circumstances I hope your Excellency's Government will accept this resolution."

The Hon'ble Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, representing the Malda district as I do in this Council, I cannot give a silent vote in favour of this resolution. I will give the present history, as my hon'ble friend, the mover, has given a past history of the facts of the case. I shall first deal with the inaccessibility of getting from Rajshahi to Malda. Once I had the pleasure of going with Cook's party for a trip to Holland, and I remember having enjoyed five sorts of conveyances, when I went to Manikin Island I started in a cab, then got into a train, then went by steamer, then had the pleasure of going by a sailing boat, then an electric tram and then a small country boat in a canal drawn or rather towed by a horse. The people of Malda, when they want to go to Rajshahi enjoy the pleasure of using five or more sorts of conveyances, but under different circumstances. They start first in a bullock cart, they have then to cross the river by ferry boat, then they have to take the train to Godagari and then they have again to change to steamer and when the steamer is stuck on a shoal or char—as it often does—they have to get a fishing boat in order to get to Rampur-Boalia, and finally, when they get to Rampur-Boalia, the landing ghat is generally 4 to 5 miles away from the town in dry season. Therefore the journey has to be completed in a tum-tum which is peculiar to Rajshahi, over sand. In this way they have to perform a journey of about 70 miles from the district town of Malda to the district town of Rajshahi, i.e., Rampur-Boalia. It may easily be imagined how very difficult the journey will be when the people have to come from the interior of the border of the Malda district.

The next matter is the difficulty about living at Rajshahi. The people of Malda who have not any friends or acquaintances find it difficult to hire houses or to live in hotels. Mr. Cornes, a former District Judge, said in his letter to the High Court that the accommodation was miserable and the lodging houses were generally situated at a great distance from the courts. I believe the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley who was some time ago District Magistrate of Rajshahi will bear me out that the courts are at a great distance from Ghoramara, where the pleaders live; that is, my Lord, another difficulty. My friend, the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan, who is in charge of this department, knows very well how difficult it is for zemindars to maintain two establishments in two different districts. Some people who have got their own family lawyers at Malda have again to keep another set of lawyers at Rajshahi.

We are thankful to Government for distributing the courts, both civil and criminal, all over the Presidency. But in Malda we have not got a sub-judge's court to settle disputes as to question of right, and for settling such cases the people of Malda have to go to Rajshahi. The influential and wealthy people, or rather unprincipled and unscrupulous people can easily oust another person from his just rights as they know very well that the poor would find it very difficult to travel such a long distance to Rajshahi in order to institute a suit against his powerful opponent and bring all his witnesses over a distance of about 70 miles, and then arrange for their accommodation in a place like Rajshahi. The witnesses also do not like to live in Rajshahi for a long time, and as generally the cases are frequently adjourned the poor people find it very difficult to manage it and consequently fail.

As regards accommodation, I believe the bar library has offered to let their room for a small rent of Rs. 30. If, however, Government would care to have a separate building for the sub-judge's court, they could easily build a new house near about the criminal courts or they could easily have another storey on the top of the munsif's court.

The other argument which can be adduced against this resolution is: whether it would pay Government to have a sub-judge's court at Malda. I remember that in Bogra there was formerly no sub-judge's court; but as soon as such a court was established then the number of cases went up by leaps and bounds, as many people have availed themselves of the facilities of instituting their cases which they could not do before.

I do not know, my Lord, whether it would be good form on my part to advocate anything on behalf of lawyers, as I am myself a practising member.

Babu K. M. Chaudhuri; Rai D. C. Ghose Bahadur.

of the legal profession. But I may submit that the pleaders at Malda deserve a little encouragement. They can justly claim their legitimate share of the work which is at present the monopoly of the Rajshahi pleaders. If, therefore, Government be kind enough to create a sub-judge's court at Malda it would not only be beneficial to the public, but also to the pleader there; and since the Rajshahi bar does not object to the resolution, it will perhaps be accepted by Government."

The Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri said :—

"My Lord, I said on another occasion that the people of Malda aspire to have a separate sub-judge's court as they feel very inconvenient to come to Rajshahi to institute suits. Government should consider if there is sufficient work for a sub-judge at Malda, and if that proves to be the case, a sub-judge's court may be established there. At present there are two sub-judges at Rajshahi—one of them may be posted at Malda. There is a suggestion that the present munsiff at Malda who has power to try cases up to Rs. 2,000 may be removed and then there will be found sufficient work for two sub-judges one of whom may be located at Malda. The people of Rajshahi have no objection to a sub-judge's court being established at Malda and I beg also to suggest in this connection that Malda can be developed into a first class district. If it is decided that only one sub-judge should be appointed, then he shall have to spend six months at Rajshahi and six months at Malda, but that would be very inconvenient for the people of both these places. The subordinate judge at Rajshahi has to do all the account works as the district Judge has no time to attend to them, and the work at Rajshahi is not insufficient to fully employ the sub-judge. If there is sufficient work for two officers one should certainly be posted at Malda. There are, of course difficulties, but if these can be removed it would be a good thing to have a sub-judge at Malda."

The Hon'ble Rai Debender Chunder Ghose Bahadur said :—

"My Lord, I have no personal knowledge of the district of Malda and the only knowledge I have about this question has been derived from certain papers which I have here and to which reference has already been made by the hon'ble mover. From those papers I gather that the people of Malda feel great inconvenience and the inconvenience is felt by the local authorities too. From the letter addressed by Mr. Cornes to the Registrar of the High Court I gather that he suggested that one sub-judge could be spared from Rajshahi and that one sub-judge could be placed at Malda permanently and that he will have enough business to justify his being placed there. If half of the subordinate judge's time at Rampur-Boalia is occupied in hearing Malda cases then it must follow that if a sub-judge is placed at Malda he will have more cases and they will occupy his whole time. We have had a discussion in Council about the development of revenues of the Province of Bengal. We forget that if we increase the number of law courts it will increase the revenue, for the money realized as court-fees besides meeting the expenses of civil courts also pay for the expenses of criminal courts, and there is always a large surplus. What I mean is that there ought not to be any difficulty in acceding to the prayer of the Malda people as it will be a paying thing. It will not only pay the cost of establishing the court, the salary of the sub-judge and of the ministerial establishment, but it will leave a surplus. The Malda people have been trying for it for the last 18 years, but their cries have not attracted the sympathetic attention of Government. But now that we have had an opportunity of placing the matter before your Excellency's Government, I have no doubt that early

*Sir D. P. Sarbadhikari ; Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan ; orders will be issued for the establishment of a sub-judge's court at Malda. It may be said that this will encourage litigation, but as Mr. Ashraf Ali says that the people of Malda have neither the time nor the money to carry on litigation for the mere fun of it ; they have their rights and the Government should provide facilities for vindicating such rights."
Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri.*

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

"My Lord, having recently visited the part of the country in question I may say something from the point of view of the litigants and to voice the strong feeling that obtains in the district of Malda. One should think that the views put forward by some that litigation would be kept down by not establishing a sub-judge's court at Malda has no force whatever. As has been pointed out there is the other side of the question and sometimes justice cannot be obtained if one has to go all the way to Rajshahi. It is refreshing to note that the members of the Rajshahi bar have not put obstacles in the way, and I am sure not only the members of the Malda bar but the people also would welcome a sub-judge's court in their district. The question of accommodation does not arise. The work may be re-arranged in the way suggested by the Hon'ble Babu Kishori Mohan Chaudhuri and it may be possible to remove the munsif with large powers from Malda or to divide the time of a sub-judge as is done in the neighbouring districts of Jalpaiguri and Dinajpur. When at Rajshahi I satisfied myself about the inconvenience felt by the people owing to the want of a sub-judge's court there, this was very great. I did not feel disposed to face the inconvenience of a travel from Rajshahi to Malda much as I wanted to see the ruins of Gour. I do not know why this primitive mode of travelling has been allowed to go on for so many years. The smaller districts ought to be as self-contained as possible while we are dividing the larger districts. I hope for these reasons the resolution ought to be accepted by Government."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan said :—

"My Lord, I must confess that the arguments put forward regarding the establishment of a sub-judge's court at Malda have in no way convinced me, because, if I may say so, the arguments which have been put forward are more for personal comfort—nice buildings and making Malda more easily accessible. Nobody seems to have advocated in this Council to-day as to whether or not the work at Malda is sufficient to justify Government's putting a sub-judge there for all the year round. The Hon'ble Maulvi who has been entrusted to move this resolution has limited his remarks to the memorial submitted to your Excellency, printed copies of which I believe have been rather freely distributed among the Members of this Council, and he has also brought into prominence a letter of the then District Judge, Mr. Julian Cornes, which was written about five years ago. Then we have had Mr. Ashraf Ali giving us what he called the present history of Malda and explaining to us some of the shilling delights that he had enjoyed at some obscure island in Holland where, among other things, if I caught him aright, he travelled in a boat driven by horses."

The Hon'ble Mr. Ashraf Ali Khan Chaudhuri said :—

"I beg your pardon, I said towed by horses and not driven by horses."

The Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan continuing said :—

"Whatever that may be I do not know whether the shilling delights that he enjoyed in Holland could very well be compared with the delight of the Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan.

70 odd miles of travelling which is required from Rajshahi to Malda in the four or five different kinds of vehicles and conveyances which he mentioned. But I think in this connection it is well to remember what Bengal is. We have only got to look at Eastern Bengal and find out for one's self that these difficulties of travelling cannot be entirely got over until perhaps some enterprising gentlemen in Bengal, like the Tata Brothers in Bombay, start an aerial service, nor do I think can the question of accommodation or the sentimental desire to have a sub-judge placed at Malda weigh entirely with the Government. Then I do not know if as a lawyer he had a brief from his zemindar friends round about Malda, when he brought out the fact that the zemindars round about there have got to have two institutions, one their family lawyer from the place from which they hail, and another at Malda. My Lord, this is the case all over Bengal and when larger districts are subdivided more and more—a matter which Mr. Kerr would be able to more eloquently explain than myself, I think that the zemindars have got to realize that these multiplications of their legal staff are necessary unless they themselves can minimize the difficulties of law suits. This is a thing which cannot be helped, and it is a thing which is bound to grow as more partitions are sanctioned for the efficiency of Government in the country.

Then again we have had the representative from Rajshahi who, I may say, has rather damned the scheme with faint praises: as he could not very well wriggle out of it altogether, but he had not very much to say in favour of it either. I shall now put before the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution as well as its supporters the statistics of court work at Malda. It has already been pointed out by various gentlemen present here to-day that the question of posting a sub-judge at Malda has been before Government for a good many years and it has been brought to the notice of Government by the people of the district and by the local bar there. This is true and Government has naturally consulted the Hon'ble High Court in the matter and is anxious so far as it reasonably can to meet the aspiration of the people in the district. But from an examination of the work which arises in the civil courts from the Malda district however it appears that though there are two munsifs stationed there they have an average amount of work to do. The number of cases arising valued at over Rs. 2,000 has in the last five years only averaged 20 with 14 miscellaneous matters and the number of suits of a value of between Rs. 1,000 and 2,000 which are tried at present by the senior munsif only averages 48. And I believe these figures include non-contested and contested suits, and I think it must be quite clear to the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution as well as to the gentlemen of the Council present here to-day from these figures that under these circumstances it would be impossible to put a sub-judge for the whole year at Malda to hear this small number of cases and a few appeals, unless of course the Hon'ble Member with shilling delights would like the sub-judge who may be placed there to roam about the beautiful mango gardens there and work only for two months in a year. I do not think there is any justification for having a sub-judge when these are the figures which are before the Government. At Rampur-Boalia where at present the cases of Rs. 2,000 and over in value are tried, there is only one permanent sub-judge. He has a considerable number of cases arising within the district of Rajshahi to hear, and it would only be inconvenient to depute him for a part of the year to sit at Malda. Government does not therefore see its way to follow the procedure pursued in regard to the districts of Dinajpur and Jalpaiguri under which the sub-judge of Dinajpur is deputed for three short periods during the year aggregating in all about two months to try cases at Jalpaiguri. In recent years it has, however, been found necessary to depute an additional sub-judge to Rampur-Boalia for part of the year to assist the permanent judge. The High Court, however, do not consider that in normal years this is a thing that Government should indulge in. In view, however, of the fact that the people of Malda have been asking since a long time to have a sub-judge placed there permanently, Government is prepared in consultation with the High Court, to consider whether it would not be possible to depute as an experimental measure an additional sub-judge for part of the year to Malda to try cases ; and I hope that the Hon'ble Mover of this resolution and its supporters will agree that this is a fair proposal and that this may be tried and I trust that after my explanation the Hon'ble Mover may see his way to withdraw this resolution."

The Hon'ble Maulvi Abul Kasem said :—

" My Lord, from the beginning of the speech of the Hon'ble Maharajadhiraja Bahadur of Burdwan I little anticipated that I will have the agreeable surprise of the assurance given that Government is prepared to try the experiment of deputing an additional sub-judge for a certain time of the year to Malda. This will certainly not only satisfy myself but the people on whose behalf I was deputed to speak and who had asked me to do so. As that has been done I do not think I should detain the Council any longer, and, therefore, with Your Excellency's permission I beg to withdraw the resolution."

The resolution was then, by leave of the President, withdrawn.

ADJOURNMENT.

Compensation for alleged malicious prosecution by a sub-inspector of police of Dinajpur.

(b) If the answer to clause (a) be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state—

(i) whether it is a fact that Government paid the expenses of the first-named defendant in the above-mentioned suit; and

(ii) whether the Government pleader of Dinajpur and another pleader of the local Bar were engaged on behalf of the defence at the cost of the Government?

(c) If the answer to clause (a) be in the affirmative, will the Government be pleased to state the total amount spent by them for the defence, including pleaders' fees?

As a matter of fact the prosecution was actually undertaken under the order of Mr Ray, who was then Assistant Superintendent of Police in charge of the Balurghat subdivision. In these circumstances, Government do not propose to take any action in regard to the sub-inspector.”

Progress of the committee on the future organization of the Hindu girls' education.

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

"The Committee in question submitted its report on 31st March, 1916, and has ceased to exist."

By the Hon'ble Maulvi A. K. Fazl-ul-Haq:—2.

With reference to the answers to my unstarred question No. 17 asked on the 5th March, 1919, regarding the co-operative societies sent into liquidation, will the Government be pleased to state—

Particulars as to certain co-operative societies under liquidation.

- (i) under which of the classes—"bad" or "hopeless"—each such society was placed initially, and on what dates;
- (ii) how many of such societies were personally inspected by the Registrar, Co-operative Societies, after such classification, and on what dates;
- (iii) what exact steps were taken by the Registrar to rescue the societies from ultimate liquidation; and
- (iv) in what way do the Central Bank and the Government staff keep a strict watch over each such society?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. McAlpin:—

"(i) There are no records before 1915 of the classification of societies. A statement is, however, laid on the table giving particulars of the years in which the societies were so classified initially since that date. It is not in the public interest to say under what particular class each society was placed initially.

(ii) There is no record of the number of societies under liquidation which were personally inspected by the Registrar.

(iii) In different cases different steps were taken. Members were warned of the consequences of liquidation and exhorted to rescue their societies; time was allowed to them; the periods of kist instalment were extended; officers were sent to the societies to encourage the members to improve their societies; local people of influence were induced to take an interest in the societies; and Central Banks and inspecting officers were instructed to pay as much attention as possible to the societies, to inspect them freely, and to preach the principles of co-operation to the members. Sometimes societies when unwieldy were split up, the office-bearers were removed and new office-bearers appointed, bad members were expelled and better men induced to join the societies; and so on.

(iv) By frequent inspection and careful checking of accounts and Registers."

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

3.

Will the Government be pleased to state whether the rules of recruitment for the subordinate civil service are the same as those for the provincial civil service (executive branch), requiring in both cases the same qualifications, educational and otherwise?

Rules of recruitment for the subordinate civil service

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

"The qualifications prescribed for candidates for appointment by direct recruitment to the subordinate civil service and to the provincial civil service are the same. Appointments by promotion to the provincial civil service are usually made from the subordinate civil service, and appointments by promotion to the subordinate civil service from lower services and departments."

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

Training of members of the provincial executive service and of the subordinate civil service.

(a) Will the Government be pleased to state if members of the provincial executive service and of the subordinate civil service have to undergo the same training during their probationary period and are required to pass the same departmental examinations—by the lower and the higher standards?

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state since when this system has been in vogue?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) Yes.

(b) Since 1892.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

5.

Duties of the members of the subordinate civil service and of the provincial executive service.

Is it a fact that members of the subordinate civil service are doing the same kind of responsible work as the members of the provincial executive service?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“Generally speaking, sub-deputy collectors are employed on work of less importance and responsibility than deputy collectors, and a large proportion of sub-deputy collectors are employed as sub-treasury officers, circle officers, tahsildars in Government estates and in other posts which are not held by deputy collectors.”

By the Hon'ble Babu Akhil Chandra Datta:—

6.

Members of the subordinate civil service and charge of important revenue departments.

Is it a fact that the members of the subordinate civil service are placed in independent charge of important revenue departments, e.g., settlement, khas mahals, certificate, partition, cess revaluation, land registration, court of wards, etc., like the members of the provincial executive service?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“It will be seen from pages 70—89 of the Civil List that both deputy and sub-deputy collectors are employed on settlement work, in Government estates and on partition and cess revaluation work. No deputy collector is at present employed under the Court of Wards, though two sub-deputy collectors are so employed. Sub-deputy collectors are not ordinarily vested with the powers of a certificate officer under the Public Demands Recovery Act. Officers are vested with these powers by the Collector with the sanction of the Commissioner and complete information regarding the officers at present exercising these powers is not available. Under section 84 of the Land Registration Act the Collector may delegate powers and functions under that Act to any assistant, deputy or sub-deputy collector, and Government have no information as to the officers at present exercising such powers. Neither deputy nor sub-deputy collectors are in independent charge of any of the departments here mentioned. They all work under the supervision and control of the Collector or Settlement Officer.”

(c) On whose recommendations are the sub-deputy magistrates vested with first class powers?

(d) Is there any guiding principle underlying the investment of sub-deputy magistrates with first class powers under the Code of Criminal Procedure?

(e) Have the recommending authorities been instructed by any general letters, orders or circulars to adopt certain definite principles in making the recommendations?

(f) Was there any circular or order issued on this subject in August, 1911?

(g) If so, will the Government be pleased to lay on the table all letters, circulars and orders on this subject?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(a) Until recently, sub-deputy magistrates were vested with first class magisterial powers only in exceptional cases. In 1916, however, owing to the absence with the Indian Army Reserve of Officers of a number of junior members of the Indian Civil Service, the rules were temporarily relaxed, and Commissioners were asked to nominate for first class powers sub-deputy magistrates who had exercised second class powers for some time and could be recommended as thoroughly fit to exercise first class powers.

(b) A statement is laid on the table.

(c) On the recommendation of Commissioners.

(d) and (e) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the answer to clause (a) above.

(f) Yes.

(g) Copies of Government circulars No. 3885 A., dated 8th August, 1911, and No. 9041 A., dated 16th December, 1916, are laid on the table.”

Circulars referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. KERR to question No. 7 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU AKHIL CHANDRA DATTA at the Council meeting of the 3rd April, 1919.

No. 3885 A., dated Calcutta, the 8th August 1911.

From—THE HON'BLE MR. C. J. STEVENSON-MOORE, I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

To—All Commissioners of Divisions.

THE question of vesting selected Sub-Deputy Magistrates and Collectors with first class magisterial powers has been recently under the consideration of Government. Although the primary duties of these officers are connected with the revenue administration, their services are also utilized for the trial of criminal cases. They are required to pass the Departmental Examinations by both the lower and higher standards, including the examination in Civil Law, but they are not at present given powers higher than those of a Magistrate of the second class. Some of these officers, however, have shown themselves possessed of an aptitude for magisterial work, which would justify the grant of full powers, and the Lieutenant-Governor in Council sees no valid reason why the administration should be deprived of the full value of their services. Such cases should, however, be regarded as exceptional and first class powers should only be conferred on those officers who from their standing and abilities are likely to be promoted within the next two or three years to the rank of Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector. I am to request that, subject to the above conditions, you will bear it in mind that it is open to you to recommend Sub-Deputy Magistrates for investment with first class powers.

No. 9041-45A., dated Calcutta, the 16th December 1916.

From—THE HON'BLE MR. J. H. KERR, C.I.E., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bengal.

To—All Commissioners of Divisions.

I AM directed to invite a reference to the circular letter No. 3885 A., dated the 8th August 1911, in which it was laid down that only those Sub-Deputy Magistrates should be recommended for first class magisterial powers who possessed special aptitude for magisterial work and who from their standing and abilities are likely to be promoted within the next two or three years to the rank of Deputy Magistrate and Deputy Collector. Owing to the deputation to the I. A. R. O. of a number of junior civilians who would ordinarily be holding charge of important subdivisions, there is a great scarcity of Deputy Magistrates with first class powers at present, and it is difficult to meet the demands for such officers. In these circumstances Government are willing to relax temporarily the existing orders about the grant to Sub-Deputy Magistrates of first class powers and to vest a limited number of Sub-Deputy Magistrates with such powers, provided they have exercised second class powers for some time and can be recommended as thoroughly fit to exercise first class powers. I am, therefore, to request that you will be so good as to report to Government at an early date the names of any such officers in your Division.

Is it a fact that the services of the sub-deputy collectors were requisitioned by Government for recruiting and other work during the period of the war in the same way as those of the deputy collectors?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“ Thirteen sub-deputy collectors were employed solely on recruiting duties for different periods during the war, and others did recruiting work in addition to their ordinary duties. No sub-deputy collector was employed on any form of war work except recruiting. No deputy collector was employed solely on recruiting work, but several assisted in recruiting work in addition to their ordinary duties. (1) Is it a fact—

- (a) that one Shaju Khatun, wife of Kajem Mashalchi, resident of village Baburchar, police-station Sadarpur, district Faridpur, was arrested in a cloth looting case as she had on a new sari which was suspected to be stolen property;

- (d) that after walking some distance she informed the constable and the chaukidar that she had a pain in her abdomen and asked for permission to rest a while;
- (e) that in reply she received a blow from the said constable;
- (f) that after walking for about three hours she began to bleed;
- (g) that her cloth being stained with blood, her brother, also an accused in the same case, gave her a cloth to protect her from the gaze of the people;
- (h) that on the following day she was again made to walk from Talma to Faridpur where she was admitted into the jail with her cloth soaked with blood;
- (i) that within a few hours after her admission into the jail she was delivered of a still-born child; and
- (j) that she was in the jail when the Hon'ble Mr. J. G. Cumming, C.S.I., C.I.E., inspected the Faridpur jail in February last?

(2) If so, are the Government considering the desirability of making a full inquiry into the matter and of laying the result thereof on the table?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Kerr:—

“(1) From a preliminary inquiry which was ordered by the Inspector-General of Police when he saw a report of this case in the newspapers, it would appear that the facts are substantially as stated in the question, except that it is denied that the woman was assaulted by a constable. It is reported that when the woman was arrested, the police offered to release her on bail, but no one was willing to stand surety for her. It is also stated that on the day previous to her arrest, the woman walked ten miles of her own accord from her home at Baburchar to her father's house at Maheshwardi.

(2) The District Magistrate of Faridpur has directed the Sadar Sub-divisional Officer to hold a full inquiry into the matter and the result will be laid on the table in due course.”

PRESS COMMUNIQUÉ.

Calcutta, the 3rd February, 1919.

IN modification of previous orders on the subject, the Governor in Council has now decided that candidates who were permitted to appear at the Final Licentiate Examination of the State Medical Faculty of Bengal, held in November, 1916, under the certificates granted by Government under the Transitory Provisions of the Statutes of the Faculty, but who failed in one or two subjects, will be allowed to re-appear at the examinations of the Faculty up to and including the examination to be held in November, 1919. Such candidates will be exempted from the obligation of undergoing further instruction in the subject or subjects in which they may have failed. The examination to be held in November, 1919, will be the last examination under the Transitory Provisions of the Statutes of the State Medical Faculty.

Memorial referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. DONALD to question No. 17 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble KHAN SAHIB AMAN ALI at the Council meeting of the 3rd April, 1919.

From—The Joint Secretary, Chittagong Association, Chittagong,
To—His Excellency The Right Hon'ble Lawrence John Lumley Dundas, Earl of Ronaldshay, G.C.I.E., Governor of the Presidency of Fort William in Bengal in Council, Calcutta.

May it please Your Excellency,

I have been asked by the Chittagong Association to lay the following facts for favourable consideration of Your Excellency in Council.

1. That your Excellency's Government was pleased, when the Bengal Medical Act was passed, to permit the passed students of the Calcutta Medical School, Belgachia, to appear at the Final Licentiate Examination of the State Medical Faculty within two years of its constitution; and the passed students of other medical institutions were allowed the same privilege about one year after that. At the same time this fact was not known to many passed students of these institutions. Some, no doubt, appeared at the examination, but, with a few exceptions, got plucked in it as they were unable to prepare themselves for the examination within the short time at their disposal after they came to know of the permission.

2. That your Excellency's Government has been further pleased to allow those practitioners only who failed for the first time in one or two subjects of the Faculty Examination held in November, 1916, to appear again at the next examination. But unfortunately the same privilege has not been extended to those who could not appear at the said examination, as, owing to shortness of notice, illness or other accidental causes, they could not prepare themselves for it. Thus some persons will enjoy greater privileges which will be denied to those of at least equal ability simply because the former has the chance of appearing at the examination which the latter could not avail themselves of.

3. My association thinks that it will really be very hard for those medical practitioners who for reasons mentioned above could not appear at the examination to carry on the very useful work that they have been doing in the whole country and to earn their own living even, if they be not granted the privilege of qualifying themselves as medical practitioners according to the Bengal Medical Act.

4. That two years mentioned in paragraph 1 having now expired a large number of practitioners are placed into disability to continue their profession and those in whose services they have been so employed are not willing to retain them in service unless they pass the prescribed examination.

5. Your Excellency's Government has already been signalised by a great effort towards the amelioration of the condition of the people by fighting against the diseases in the country, malaria, cholera, etc. Your Excellency is not unaware of the fact that medical practitioners are very few in number in proportion to the population of the country and the people therefore are in need of an adequate number of passed practitioners in view of great many diseases carrying away thousands of people every year.

6. My association therefore prays that your Excellency's Government will be graciously pleased to extend the privilege, viz., the time of appearing at the Faculty Examination for a considerable period or at least till November, 1918, to all those who could not formerly avail themselves of the opportunity.

I have the honour to be,

Your Excellency's most obedient servant,

PARESCHANDRA SEN, Wakil,

Jt.-Secretary. Chittagong Association.

Grant of hill allowance to the teachers of the Rangamati Government High English School.

With reference to the reply to my unstarred question No. 2 asked at the meeting of the Council of the 21st January last regarding the grant of hill allowance to the teachers of the Rangamati Government High English School, are the Government considering the desirability of—

- (i) taking up at an early date the case of those poorly paid teachers residing at Rangamati with its many disadvantages, without waiting for the Director of Public Instruction to move in the matter; and
- (ii) giving them the privilege with retrospective effect from the date on which the allowances of other officers were increased?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(i) The Director of Public Instruction is being asked to give the matter his early attention.

“(ii) It is not usual to grant retrospective effect to any such privilege, nor can any hopes be held out that orders will issue with retrospective effect in the present case.”

New recurring grant for Government high school teachers.

(a) With reference to the reply to my unstarred question No. 3 asked at the meeting of the Council of the 21st January last regarding the new recurring grant for Government high school teachers, will the Government be pleased to state why the teachers cannot get the benefit of that grant from the 1st April, 1917?

(b) If the increment of pay from that very date cannot be granted, will the Government be pleased to grant some bonuses to the poorly paid teachers in the place of increment of pay?

(c) Is there any likelihood of the educational grant lapsing after a period of three years from the date of the grant?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) and (b) It is not possible to utilize the grant for the benefit of the teachers in question until the sanction of the Government of India to the proposals of this Government is received.

(c) It is presumed that the question relates to the possibility of the 9 lakhs grant made to this Government by the Government of India being discontinued. The grant is recurring and is therefore not likely to be discontinued within three years after it was first made.”

Desecration of the image of Saraswati by Mr. A. B.
Johnston.

Will the Government be pleased to lay on the table a copy of the petition of complaint and of the judgment by the Presidency Magistrate, Calcutta, in connection with the action of Mr. A. B. Johnston, Acting Principal of St. Paul's Cathedral College, Calcutta, in throwing the image of Saraswati into a dustbin in Amherst Street, Calcutta?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Duval:—

“Copies of the petition and the order of the Presidency Magistrate are laid on the table.”

Documents referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Duval to question No. 23 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble Rai Mahendra Chandra Mitra Bahadur at the Council meeting of the 3rd April, 1919.

IN THE COURT OF THE NORTHERN DIVISION PRESIDENCY MAGISTRATE, CALCUTTA.

JITENDRA LAL BANERJEE, of 84, Sitaram Ghosh's Street, Calcutta, versus

A. B. JOHNSTON, of 33-1, Amherst Street, Calcutta.

CHARGE :—Under Section 295, I. P. C.

Facts in brief.

The complainant is a member of the Hindu community and is a Hindu by faith and practice. The accused is a Christian and is the Principal of the St. Paul's Cathedral Mission College, Calcutta. As Hindus, the complainant and other members of the Hindu community worship Saraswati, the goddess of Learning, and hold her image as a sacred object.

This year some Hindu students of the St. Paul's College performed the worship of Saraswati, by erecting an image and with proper ceremonial, on the 5th of February last, at a house in Nursing's Lane. But as the house had to be vacated on the very next day and as the said students could not arrange for the immersion of the image so had the same removed on 6th February, 1919, to the dining-hall of a Hindu mess attached to their college and located within the college precincts. The accused, on receiving information of this, came down from his quarters, enquired of some students as to why the image had been brought there and by whom, and directed it to be removed at once. Accordingly the students instructed a Hindu servant of theirs to take back the image to the place where it had been worshipped and keep it there for the night. It being past 9-30 P.M. the students could not leave their quarters to accompany the servant; but the accused followed the servant outside the compound and there ordered the servant to deposit the image on the footpath. The servant having done so, the accused caught hold of the image and threw it into a dustbin which stood near by and which is meant as a receptacle for street refuse, thereby defiling an object held sacred by the complainant and the Hindu community generally and committing a grave and wanton outrage on the feelings of the Hindu community.

The accused was asked to apologise but has not done so though sufficient time was granted to him for the same.

Complainant prays for process against the accused under section 295, Indian Penal Code.

(a) Is it a fact that the late Mr. B. Pal Chowdhury, zamindar of Nadia, left a bequest of a considerable portion of the income of his estate, estimated at between 30 to 40 thousand rupees a year, to the District Board of Nadia, for the purpose of establishing and maintaining primary schools in villages appertaining to his estate, and also for establishing and maintaining a technical institute in Krishnagar or in any other suitable place within the estate? Bequest by the late Mr. B. Pal Chowdhury for establishment of primary schools.

(b) If so, will the Government be pleased to state what steps have been taken by the District Board of Nadia in the matter?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) Government are informed that in his will Mr. B. Pal Chaudhury, zamindar of Maheshganj, Nadia, made a bequest under certain conditions of a percentage of the profits of his estate approximately for the purposes mentioned in the question.

(b) It is reported that the District Board has for some years past been trying to obtain the money from the trustees of the estate, but have met with the reply first that there were no profits up to the end of the Bengali year 1324 and recently that the scheme contained in the will for the appointment of a Board of Trustees is not valid in law and that the Board which was formed has no locus standi.”

(a) With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. 9 of the 5th March last, regarding free-studentships in primary schools, will the Government be pleased to state whether the rules for the award of free-studentships in Government and Government-aided schools, referred to therein, prescribe any maximum number of such studentships? Free-studentships in primary schools.

(b) If so, what is the purport of such rules?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'Malley:—

“(a) and (b) A copy of the rules for the award of free-studentships in Government as well as in Government-aided schools is laid on the table.”

Rules referred to in the answer by the Hon'ble Mr. O'MALLEY to question No. 25 (Unstarred) asked by the Hon'ble BABU BHABENDRA CHANDRA RAY at the Council meeting of the 3rd April, 1919, for the award of Free-studentships in Government as well as in Government-aided Schools.

Government pensioners (other than menials) who have retired from service in the Department of Public Instruction, and whose pensions do not exceed Rs. 25 a month, may be allowed the same privileges as teachers in Government schools. The concessions may also be extended to the orphans of officers who died in the service of the department while in the receipt of pay not exceeding Rs. 50 a month; and also to the orphans of pensioners of the department (other than menials) who were drawing pensions not exceeding Rs. 25 a month.

4. In Government as well as in Government-aided schools the numbers of non-Muhammadan and Muhammadan free students will ordinarily be five per cent. of their respective enrolments, excluding free places granted in terms of the two preceding rules as well as scholarship-holders who have been granted free tuition.

5. In view of the backwardness of the Moslem community Muhammadan pupils in Government as well as in Government-aided schools will be allowed additional free places (over and above those provided for in the preceding rule) up to a limit of a further ten per cent. of their own enrolment.

6. No pupil shall be eligible for a free-studentship who is above the age-limits prescribed in the Appendix on the 1st January of the year in which the award is made.

7. Boys above those age-limits, who have already been awarded free-studentships, may be allowed to enjoy these privileges so long as they fulfil the condition laid down in rule 8.

Particulars of probable savings under the head "Education" in the Budget estimate of 1919-20.

With reference to the probable savings of Rs. 12 lakhs and odd shown under the expenditure head of "Education" in the Budget estimate of 1919-20, will the Government be pleased to state how this figure has been arrived at, and what particular savings are expected to be made under each minor head?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"The Government of India directed the inclusion in the Budget estimates of the following allotments to give effect to the recommendations of the Calcutta University Commission for—

- (a) schemes recommended by the Commission—Rs. 10 lakhs, and
- (b) the new Dacca University—Rs. 5 lakhs.

Government were of opinion that a decision was not likely to be arrived at on the recommendations of the Commission in time to admit of expenditure during the year to an amount in excess of Rs. 3 lakhs, and a saving of Rs. 12 lakhs is, therefore, shown against the total of these allotments. Should it be found, however, that a large expenditure is practicable, sums up to the full amount of Rs. 15 lakhs will be available."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

28.

(a) With reference to the answer to my unstarred question No. 11 of the 5th March last, regarding the manufacture of salt by Indians, will the Government be pleased to state the "conditions" under which Mr. P. C. Dass of Cox's Bazar desired to manufacture salt, and in what respects the said conditions did not provide adequate safeguards for the Government revenue? Manufacture of salt by Indians.

(b) How do the said conditions differ from the conditions under which Mr. Glen George is manufacturing salt, in so far as security for Government revenue is concerned?

(c) With reference to the two applications made by Surendra Chandra Ghosal and others, as also by Mahendra Chandra Ghosal and others of Chittagong, have the Government made any inquiries from them since they were asked to consult the salt department?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"(a) The applicant desired that no special arrangements should be made for the necessary supervision over manufacture and that no extra preventive staff should be entertained for this purpose till such time as the project was matured. Government concurred in the opinion of the Commissioner of Excise and Salt and of the local authorities that as the manufacture would extend over a considerable area, and as it was quite possible that even with the best intentions the applicant would be unable to guard against illicit appropriations, this condition could not be accepted.

(b) Mr. Glen George has agreed to the employment of a special staff for the purpose of supervising the manufacture of salt.

(c) No."

By the Hon'ble Babu Bhabendra Chandra Ray:—

29.

(a) Are the Government aware of the suitability of the brine on the Chittagong side for the manufacture of salt, and have they any information as to the comparative advantages of such manufacture on the Midnapore and Chittagong sides, respectively? Suitability of the Chittagong and Midnapore brine for the manufacture of salt.

(b) What steps, if any, have Government so far taken to encourage the manufacture of salt on the Chittagong side?

Answer by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald:—

"(a) The Hon'ble Member is referred to the speech made in this Council by the Hon'ble Mr. Donald on the 22nd January, 1918, in the debate on the resolution moved by the Hon'ble Babu S. N. Ray. While on the one hand the brine on the south of the Chittagong district may be better than that off the Midnapore coast, Chittagong is unfavourably situated as compared with Midnapore in respect of other factors—proximity to the chief markets, coal, etc.

(b) Government have taken no further action than that already indicated in the speech referred to."

Babu S. N. Mukharji.

LIST OF BUSINESS—ITEM No. 2.

DISCUSSION OF THE BUDGET OF THE GOVERNMENT OF BENGAL FOR 1919-20.

The Hon'ble Babu Siv Narayan Mukharji said :—

My Lord, I feel sure I have the concurrence of my hon'ble colleagues in my conviction that we are grateful for the opportunity afforded to us, by the invitation of your Excellency's Government, of advancing our views on the Budget for the coming year which was presented at the last meeting of this Council. Concocted by the brains of able financiers and passing through the deft fingers of expert statisticians the statement, with all its seeming discrepancies punctiliously explained away, its dry-as-dust character relieved by the almost irrefutable logic of expediency and justice, stands out to-day in all its wealth of details and its hopeful forecast of a year of prosperity, as a finished piece of financial programme for the dawning year. Ordinarily the long arrays of figures which increase the bulk of such statements have either a sleep-inducing tendency or have the effect of scaring away the superficial observer. But, having regard to the abnormal conditions that prevailed during the four eventful years of the great European War, and from the effects of which this country has not yet completely recovered, it may be asserted without fear of contradiction that the Hon'ble Finance Member has deserved well of the country for having rendered real service to the State by introducing a statement which, on its receipts side, reveals a state of prosperity and advancement and on its expenditure side (except perhaps in the case of certain important branches of administration) gives clear indication of a policy of strict economy quite in keeping with the situation created by the war. But, while I feel bound to congratulate the Hon'ble Finance Member on his anticipating still further growth of revenue under stamp, excise and income tax in particular, as also on his providing for a large increase of expenditure under education, sanitation and public works, I cannot help giving expression to a sense of disappointment for the absence of any provision first for bringing down and then regulating the prices of food-stuffs and clothes. In seeking the indulgence of submitting to this House, by way of a digression of outstanding significance, this question of questions, that of the prime necessities of life, I hope I do not expose myself to the imputation which the foremost British statesman of the last century levelled against certain members of Parliament when he declared that "efforts are constantly being made by the different sections of the House of Commons to press for an increase in the public expenditure for the promotion of their own favourite ideas." The prices of food and raiment have gone up beyond all expectation more in fact than double of what 20 years ago would have been considered as famine prices, and people of all classes have begun to throw up their arms in despair. Is it not, my Lord, time that Government should, even at some cost, devise means to feed and clothe their many millions of subjects at a moderate cost, and with that object in view, will it not be politic, nay, will it not be just, to make some provision in the Budget estimates for the approaching year? But, while I expound the cause of those who are at this hour actually feeling the pinch, I am confronted with the fact that the expected increase in the income under excise is due to the increased consumption of country spirits in certain districts. Paradoxical though it may appear I have my explanation in the fact that I plead not for those low class men who are either employed in the mills or who live on daily wages and have no thought for the morrow and with whom the epicurean doctrine of "eat, drink, and be merry" is the guiding rule of life, but for those of the better classes whose frugality, sobriety and continence are of very little avail in their hard struggle for existence. To them the State is morally bound to render every help in order that they may get on and not die of absolute want. The fact, therefore, of the probable revenue under "excise" exhibiting extraordinary elasticity would form an index to the extent of the moral depravity of those sections of the population that would contribute towards it.

Kumar S. S. Ray.

We have the assurance of the Hon'ble Finance Member that the imposition of the excess profits duty will result in a loss of income-tax since a rebate will be given. This apparent loss, because only a paper transaction, will, however, be accentuated by the decision of the Government of India to exempt incomes below Rs. 2,000 per annum. This latter concession will be hailed by the public as a real blessing, and as such will be thankfully appreciated by them.

The Province cannot be too grateful to Government and to your Excellency personally for the generous provision made in the Budget under Sanitation for combating malaria, which claim over 4,000,000 annually as its victims, and furthermore for your Excellency's humane efforts to run to earth the insidious new malady known as the "hookworm disease," by ordering organized investigations to be made under the aegis of medical experts. But, my Lord, I crave the liberty to share the general impression that these maladies, malaria, hookworm, and all the rest, owe their origin to insufficient and unwholesome food, to insanitary habitations, and scanty clothing, and are but the inevitable offsprings of poverty. If, therefore, these evils have to be exterminated, and if real, permanent relief is to be imparted to the millions suffering from these scourges the condition of the ill-fed, ill-clothed masses will have first of all to be improved, and what in modern scientific parlance is known as their opsonic index will have to be raised. Until that is done there is very little hope of all humane efforts in this direction proving of any avail.

The expenditure side of the estimates does not show signs of any especial provision having been made for improving the local habitations and the general status of the primary schools which are going to be started when the Bill of which my friend the Hon'ble Babu Surendra Nath Ray is the sponsor becomes law. For some years past the unspent educational contribution of the Government of India has been allowed to be a veritable dead-letter and to swell the balance at the end of the year. The extent to which the resources of the Province will be drawn upon in giving effect to the recommendations of the education commission is not known; but there is no denying the fact that the demand upon the public revenues will be very large.

I cannot conclude without quoting what the late Mr. Gladstone once said regarding the guiding principles in matters of this kind:—"I admit that public economy is a matter of first importance, but it is not the only principle of sound finance."

The Hon'ble Kumar Shib Shekhareswar Ray said:—

My Lord, this year's Budget is of special interest to the community which I have the honour to represent in this Council, namely, the zamindars of Bengal. We and our tenants are vitally interested in agriculture, co-operative organization, primary education, village sanitation and general rural development, and I notice with grateful appreciation the liberal manner in which provisions have been made for these subjects in the current year's Budget.

Under the head "Agriculture", I find that arrangements have been made to give a District Agricultural Officer to each district and a new appointment of a Deputy Director of Agriculture has been sanctioned. An increase has also been made in the strength of farm superintendents. Provisions for buildings for imparting agricultural instructions and experimental farms also have received a fair treatment. Allotments to "divisional seed stores" and "public exhibitions", though do not show an increase over last year's Budget estimate, yet are in excess of what we find in the Revised Estimate of that year. I also understand that the residue of the special grant made by the Government of India last year, amounting to Rs. 1 lakh, is also available for expenditure this year.

Kumar S. S. Ray.

Considering the importance of the subject and the wide scope of development and expansion which this subject affords, the allotments are by no means adequate, but in view of the present general want of activity, and disorganized condition of the Agricultural Department, I ought to say that the funds which have been placed at its disposal are ample and satisfactory for the present. It is to be regretted, my Lord, that the department could not spend the sum that was allotted to it last year under the heads "seed stores" and "public exhibitions", two of the most important items which could bring home to us the practical usefulness of the department. There is a general impression in the public mind that this department is doing no useful work. The other day, my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, gave vent to this feeling here in this Council; and I know, my Lord, that his views are shared by a large section of the public, though I, for myself, do not quite subscribe to his views. I have gone through the various reports of this department and I must say that, after all, this department is rendering some service to the country, but I must admit at the same time, my Lord, that this department has practically failed to secure public interest in its work, and the fault, undoubtedly, is to be attributed to the Agricultural Department. The officials here, unfortunately, maintain an aloofness of experts and the reserve of a superior personality. They seem to forget that it is a department, success of which entirely depends on public co-operation and encouragement from the big landholders. To give an instance, from the reports I find that there is a big establishment at Rajshah but I am sorry to observe that though I own a considerable tract in Rajshah and have much sympathy in matters concerning agriculture, yet I have not been able to discern any sign of its activity that, independently of its reports, would have led me to believe that there was such an establishment at Rajshah which, according to the reports, is, presumably, doing some useful work. My Lord, such is the case almost everywhere as I learn from my friends in other parts of the province. This is a sad state of affairs: without public sympathy the department can never flourish, and unless it co-operates with the public and makes an effort to come in closer contact with the people, all its experiments and researches come to naught. It is, therefore, necessary that this department should be carefully organized to interest the public in its activities. It should not be allowed to finish its duty merely by carrying on experiments and researches away from the public gaze and publishing belated annual reports and issuing occasional statistical returns mostly based on guess-work, nor should we permit it to continue its mysterious method of distributing seeds, its want of system in giving practical demonstration, and above all its present stand-offish attitude and exaggerated notions of self-sufficiency. Much surely depends on the various heads of this department; if they are popular, energetic and have a heart in the success of the department they can surely evolve schemes and give effect to them and thereby make the whole thing a subject of popular interest. This is a matter which, if properly handled, is sure to attract the zemindars and raiyats alike. But, my Lord, it appears that this department is manned, from top to bottom, only by learned experts engrossed in their theoretical experiments and scientific researches. In this way the department will surely become a highly qualified and academically valuable State Research Society, but never an institution from which our average agriculturists might expect some practical help. I would, therefore, most respectfully urge, my Lord, that this department be properly organized on practical lines of public utility and general popularity, and that a man or two, endowed with a little power of imagination, and having some initiative and organizing capacity, be taken into the department, so that, my friend, the Hon'ble Maulvi Fazl-ul-Haq, may not have an occasion next year to denounce the department as he did this year so eloquently, surely not because of its uselessness as a department, but, I think, rather because of its failure to demonstrate its usefulness.

My Lord, I now turn to a more popular department, namely, the Co-operative Department. What the personality of the head of a department and his determination and sincerity of purpose can achieve, is amply illustrated in this department. I am glad to find that this department has received a grant of Rs. 1 lakh in excess of its last year's Budget, and an additional grant of Rs. 30,000 for quarters for the Joint-Registrar at Naogaon. Speaking of these quarters, I fail to understand why an out-of-the-way place like Naogaon has been selected for the seat of the Joint-Registrar. Naogaon is a ganja growing tract, and ganja has undoubtedly a peculiar charm about it, and presumably co-operation must have been highly successful among people living in a ganja atmosphere to justify the selection of Naogaon for the quarters of the Joint-Registrar, but as a matter of principle, these seats should be located at the headquarters stations of the districts where these officers would have a much greater field for their work. I am also led to think that a very large portion of the allotment to this department is being absorbed in salaries, and I beg to submit that a larger portion should be spent on propaganda work, including public lectures and publication of useful literature. A decent provision has been made for the development of industrial societies and we eagerly wait to see the schemes which the Registrar is going to give effect to in this connection.

My Lord, Sanitation has received a very liberal consideration this year. We eagerly look forward to the results of various new investigations that are proposed to be taken up by this department. A lump allotment of nearly Rs. 14 lakhs has also been made to this department, but no detail of the schemes has been given on which the money is to be spent. The very vagueness about the allotment makes one to entertain the doubt that much of this amount would ultimately go to swell up the opening balance next year. I, however, hope that the Hon'ble Member in charge of this department would be pleased to give us some details regarding the proposals on which the amount is likely to be spent during the year, so that we might know in what way we are going to be benefited by this generous allotment to this department. I find that a sum of Rs. 10,000 has been provided for a Publicity Bureau in connection with Sanitation. I am, however, afraid that this is a very inadequate provision for the many useful and instructive schemes which the department proposes to undertake in this direction. I would, therefore, strongly urge upon the Government to divert, if possible, to this branch of work, some decent amount from the lump allotment of Rs. 14 lakhs to Sanitation. It is undoubtedly an excellent idea, but the work must be done on a scale which would enable us to properly appreciate the utility of a work of this nature.

My Lord, influenza has played havoc in the rural areas, and I would have felt much assured if the Government had properly realized the situation and made an adequate provision to combat the disease in these areas. I, however, still entertain a hope that special grants would be made to the Local Bodies to enable them to take precautionary measures against further ravages of this terrible disease in our rural areas.

My Lord, before I conclude, I acknowledge with much pleasure the consideration that has been shown to the petty clerks of the Registration Department, and this tempts me to hope, my Lord, that ere long your Excellency's Government would do something to improve the condition of the ministerial staff attached to the mufassal courts with a view to enable them to desist from resorting to extortion and other under-hand practices which have become a matter of serious concern to the litigant public in the mufassal.

The Hon'ble Sir Deba Prasad Sarbadhikari said :—

I congratulate the Hon'ble Sir Henry Wheeler on his lucid presentment of the year's Budget. Its easily intelligible form is very acceptable, and next year further improvement may be possible in the shape of a good index or some method of flagging. There is noticeable increase of expenditure in some of the long neglected directions, and though the increase is not adequate under important headings like education, sanitation, co-operation and productive public works, there is a welcome advance which makes one hope better for the future.

The grant to private colleges through the Director of Public Instruction on the recommendation of the University had been suspended for the past few years. This has told heavily on the situation, and the colleges whose sources are extremely limited have not been able to show the good work that could be well expected of them. The provision of Rs. 3 lakhs made in the Budget for University improvements will not meet the requirements about which I speak. The private colleges require their old grant, and if the arrears cannot be paid off all in one year, the payment ought to be spread over a short number of years. In Calcutta Lord Hardinge's generous hostel gift has, to a certain extent, relieved the situation so far as the residential question is concerned, but the other difficulties continue and both the Calcutta and mufassal private colleges badly require the arrears of their grant as early as possible.

The need of strengthening medical and technological education has been strongly brought out. The primary education bill and the clearly indicated need of improving literacy in connection with the co-operative movement will put the claims of primary education on an altogether new basis. Anxious enquiries are often made about the Royal special grant for education but the answer has not proved satisfactory. The pay and prospects of our teachers in the lower grades is another matter of anxiety. It is gratifying that in the higher Educational Service recognition has at last been accorded to some selected members of the Provincial Service; but it will always be noteworthy that the recognition came too late and that men like Sir P. C. Roy ended their career in the Provincial Service. With the end of the war many of the Professors who have rendered admirable war service would be naturally returning to their posts and will have a warm welcome. Their return, however, will naturally displace some worthy men who consented to take up temporary work, and would be now out of service. I would plead for their claims being recognized whenever possible. The success of the Bengal Ambulance Corps inaugurated within two days after the war broke out, which was followed by the Bengali Regiment, the Bengal Light Infantry, and the Calcutta University Corps, makes one think that the authorities would be inclined to nurse this spirit. If this spirit is to be effectively nursed the Boy Scout movement has to be placed on a more satisfactory footing and compulsory drill should be introduced in our schools and colleges.

This year there has not been the usual crop of resolutions for improvement of the Provincial Executive and Judicial Services. This silence is not due merely to hoarseness of voice brought on by incessant but fruitless cries in the past; nor is it silence of despair or of protest. Some of us successfully objected to the appointment of a fresh committee to consider the recommendation of the Public Services Commission on these subjects. Action in this direction will be immediately necessary.

Though the public does not know much about it, the question of medical service is before what one cannot help calling a service committee. Your Excellency has expressed great solicitude for the future of the medical and sanitary services of your Government, and it is to be hoped that their interest will not be allowed to suffer by any side-issues raised through an agency that does not take the people sufficiently into its confidence. The Sanitary Department and the Sanitary Engineer's Department that have begun excellent work have been gradually remoulded for comprehensive work, and it is hoped that in districts city-sanitation will improve in consequence.

It is gratifying to note that important developments in connection with the co-operative movement are in contemplation, and one can only hope that the resolutions adopted in conferences like those at Simla and Calcutta this year and last year, will find acceptance. Without strengthening of the people's finances, by means of sound co-operation, the Reforms for which we are anxiously looking forward and all that is expected in their train, will be indefinitely deferred.

Sir D. P. Sarbadhikari.

There is an element which cruelly threatens people's prosperity and the strength of the Government from a different direction. Some of our friends in the official ranks took unaccountable pleasure in telling temperance representatives last year that the seeming shrinkage in the people's drink bill was not due to triumph of temperance principles, but to the passing disturbing factors of the moment and that the drink bill will go up with returning prosperity. They have, I am sorry to admit, partially proved good prophets, and though drink does not and cannot lead to prosperity returning, prosperity has apparently led to more drink.

The Hon'ble Member in charge has described the Excise revenue as the mainstay of the finances of the province, or, in other words, the Prosperity Budget of Bengal is fattened by alcohol and drugs.

The Excise receipts for 1916-17 were Rs. 1,44,00,000 as against Rs. 1,84,00,000 for the year before us. According to the revised figures there is a further increase of Rs. 3 lakhs under this head.

The introduction of many reforms, for which temperance workers are very thankful, partly accounts for this formidable increase. In Calcutta and some selected districts the auction system has been replaced by the fixed-fee system. More effective steps have been taken for stopping adulteration and illicit practices. But such abnormal increase makes not only temperance people but the whole country anxious.

I shall not for the moment raise the cry of total prohibition. It must, however, be the temperance cry in the immediate future, whatever the financial results may be; and in a matter like this Government will not be guided by mere considerations of finance. A great experiment is going on in the West and the Far West and nearer home in the Bhojpur State; the results will have to be carefully watched. If the evil is long allowed unchecked embarrassing complications will arise, and the East may have to witness what the West must be ashamed of to-day.

It cannot be questioned that no more than 10 per cent. of the people of Bengal are affected by drink and drug habits so far, and of this 10 per cent. 8 per cent. is guilty of excess and at the most 2 per cent. can be reckoned as legitimately wanting drink and drugs. With a people situate like this it would be very short-sighted indeed not to take early and effective steps for stopping excess in the case of the 8 per cent. and absolutely protecting the large residue of 90 per cent., who by heredity, traditions, climatic and economic conditions and social requirements are averse to drink and drugs.

Temperance workers are not the idealists and faddists that former Excise authorities proclaimed them to be and they try to meet the authorities half-way and to get the best that they can out of the situation. The dry educational area in Calcutta, started as an experimental measure, has entirely succeeded, and I have no doubt that the experiment will be further carried out not only in Calcutta but in other towns also. Better hours are now in force and a better class of vendors is being secured. It is almost settled that next year 15 country-spirit shops will be abolished, and with regard to location and sites the exertions of the licensing board have commended themselves to the Excise authorities in most instances. I take this opportunity of paying a warm tribute of whole-hearted admiration to Mr. A. N. Moberley, who, as Excise Commissioner, has done yeoman's service in the cause of temperance, without in the least hurting revenue.

He was loyally seconded by his personal assistant, his deputy commissioners, his superintendents and other officers who have all deserved well of temperance workers and the country. The department is daily having imposed on it more and more responsibilities and delicate duties, and as a self-contained department I would do much to see it placed on a more satisfactory footing. Purity and singleness of purpose must be the key-note of the success of the service. I believe in giving credit where it is due, and it is because so much has been done in the past that more is naturally expected in the larger interest that I have the honour to represent.

We must now insist upon effective steps being taken to limit the consumption, both of country and foreign liquor, as has been done in the case of opium. In the 24-Parganas the increase was as much as 79 per cent. as compared with the previous year. In Hooghly the increase is 52 per cent. Similar increase is noticeable in Howrah. In Calcutta the increase is 10 per cent. In the district of Mymensingh the increase was noticeable though in the neighbouring district of Dacca, to its credit, no increase is noticeable. This would go against the theory of increase in country spirits being due to the higher price of foreign liquor, and it will probably appear on closer investigation that the increase is quite independent. For the lay outsider to get the innerness of the situation is exceedingly difficult, particularly as statistics are not furnished in the same way as is done in Great Britain and other countries where the situation is always closely watched. I am aware that a bold increase in the price and duty has been effected only very recently, namely, from 1st February. It is quite possible that a welcome change may follow this measure, initiated by the incoming Excise Commissioner, Mr. Mukherjee, whom I warmly welcome to the department.

We ought undoubtedly to wait and watch. In the meantime, however, there are some practical measures which may be well commended to the attention of the Government. Is there any reason, for example, why the strength of the country spirits should not be lower? The consumer would be no worse for getting 30 under-proof in the place of 25 or 50 under-proof in the place of 40. It would be all the better for him and revenue would be no worse. In the second instance it may well be urged that the experiment tried in the case of opium, namely, restricted consumption, by placing a limit on the quantity allowed to be sold by each shop, which has led to good results, should, at least in selected areas, be tried in the case of country liquors. It has also been suggested that the mixed system of what is known as off-and-on sale, that is to say, sale by bottles and sale by measures, for consumption on the premises may be done away with and some shops should be restricted to off-sales and others to on-sales at least in Calcutta. Some important changes have also to be introduced in the Foreign Liquor Traffic—the current licensing fee system has to be revised, which, I am sure, would result in a large increase of revenue; the credit sale system has to be stopped immediately and accounts and records ought to be kept properly.

That is not all. We require powerful counter-attraction as well. I claim with confidence that the difficulty elsewhere is not Bengal's difficulty yet, although a large labouring population from the United Provinces and Bihar has probably contributed to increase of consumption in the mill population and other labouring classes, for which Bengal proper cannot be held accountable. Popular entertainments, cinema shows, lectures and better organised tea-houses in suitable localities will yet counteract the evil.

Not the least important of our safeguards would be a well organized, contended and pure service.

Increase of revenue ought not to be the passport to an officer's preferment and he ought to feel the strength of security which a well-organized service alone can procure. The officer in this department ought not to enjoy a lesser status and lower pay than members of the Provincial Executive Service. I shall not now attempt to go into this question in detail, as the Public Service recommendations will soon come up for consideration.

It may appear remarkable in a temperance advocate to advocate the betterment of the pay and prospects of the department that he has constantly to challenge and fight. The reason is obvious and simple: better workers and better organization in the department itself is the only chance of temperance principles being ultimately and effectively enforced, for the ill-informed outsider, however critical, can but do little.
